Negotiations Collapse, President Only Hope To End Auto Strike

G. M. Officials to Drop Efforts to Patch Up Motor Walkout.

Labor Head's Visit To Roosevelt Cited

Lewis Announces Plans for Offensive Against Chrysler, Ford.

The Labor Front.

Alfred P. Sloan, president of the General Motors Corporation, announced breakdown of day-and-night negotiations here seeking an end to the automobile strike, apparently rendering intervention by President Roosevelt more likely.

John L. Lewis declared labor expects Administration aid in "repelling the attack of the economic royalists," since labor, he said, aided the Administration against the same "enemy" in the election.

More than 2,000 G. M. C. employes at Baltimore were planning a march on Washington for a "sit-down" protest against the strike.

At Norfolk, Va., 56 striking seamen were arrested following a mass protest against the Copeland bill which they claim is "breaking" the maritime strike.

Prospective settlement of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. strike at Pittsburgh was blocked unexpectedly, and Chrysler Corporation closed Detroit plants of four divisions because of glass shortages.

By William V. Nessly.

Days and nights of desperate negotiations by public officials to bring peace in the bitter strike of automobile workers in General Motors Corporation plants came to an abrupt halt last night.

Intervention by President Roosevelt appeared more imminent than ever before in the long-drawn-out struggle.

On the heels of a statement by John L. Lewis, labor chieftain, that labor expected President Roosevelt's support in its struggle with "economic royalists," since labor had supported the President, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, and other company officials here with him, announced they would leave the city at once, finding it "useless" to continue conferences.

Later, in reply to a question, Sloan said he would return immediately if the President should call him.

Announcement at Hotel.

The breaking off of negotiations was announced to newspaper men called to their hotel suite by the corporation officials at 10 p. m. It followed only a few hours a conference they had had with Secretary of Labor Perkins in which new suggestions for a possible settlement were taken under advisement, with indications there would be further talks today.

Returning to their hotel from the Labor Secretary's office, the company officials saw a newspaper report of Lewis' statement and their decision to leave the Capital followed. The Lewis statement was made at a press conference he had held at 5 p. m., just as Sloan and his fellow officials were on their way to Miss Perkins' conference.

The labor leader, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization which is supporting the strike, along with Homer Martin, president of the striking United Automobile Workers, had conferred with Miss Perkins earlier in the afternoon.

"Have Fangs in Labor."

At his press conference Lewis declared:

"We have advised the Secretary of Labor that the 'economic royalists'—and the DuPonts and Mr. Sloan are among them—used their money to try to drive Mr. Roosevelt out of the White House.

"The Administration asked labor to help repel the attack.

Auditorium Project

Nothing could illustrate Washington's need for a large civic auditorium more graphically than the unfortunate turn which torrential rain gave to President Roosevelt's second Inaugural ceremonies.

It was impossible to transfer the Inaugural ceremony on Capitol Hill without disappointing thousands of visitors to the city and many more residents, for the House of Representatives chamber will accommodate, at the best, only 2,000 persons. There was no other place to which the Inaugural ceremony could be removed.

It is amazing that a city the size of Washington lacks a civic auditorium where many thousands may gather in comfort. It is the more amazing that the Nation's Capital, which belongs to all the people of the country and to which they naturally turn as the place for national celebrations, is without such a building. In this the city has fallen behind comparable American cities.

Many instances can be recalled of the manner in which Washington has been handicapped by the lack of a civic auditorium. One crying need for such a building was demonstrated Wednesday, for with Inauguration Day now coming on January 20 inclement weather must be expected to be the rule on that date, rather than the exception. Another instance was the World Power Conference last summer when the delegates were forced to hold their banquet in the concourse of Union Station for the lack of accommodations elsewhere.

Neither the city nor the Nation can feel proud of this situation. Not only does the lack of a suitable civic auditorium deter large organizations from holding annual conventions in the Nation's Capital, but Washington loses many athletic events, exhibitions and entertainment programs which must be held in an indoor arena.

For all these reasons the suggestion of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes that a civic auditorium be built as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson with the $3,000,000 which Congress has allocated for that purpose should receive careful consideration.

Certainly there can be no better way to honor the memory of the great Virginia democrat than to raise in his name a building in the Nation's Capital where "free assembly" indoors could be a reality.

Bill Is Offered For $2,500,000 D. C. Library

Measure Is Introduced by Collins; Sum Would Cover All Costs.

As his first act since assuming the chairmanship of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, yesterday introduced a bill calling for construction of a new $2,500,000 main public library.

The measure was introduced in the face of an estimated $10,000,000 deficit which Collins' sub-committee will have before it when it begins hearings on the 1938 District supply bill.

It is in accord, however, with the suggestions made by Theodore W. Noyes, president of the board of library trustees, in his annual report recently.

The Collins bill specifies that a new site be found for the main library and that the present building on Mount Vernon Square be used as a branch. The site must be found west of Sixteenth street and north of Pennsylvania avenue.

The $2,500,000, all of which would come out of the revenues of the District, is intended to cover the purchase of the site, construction of the building and the library equipment.

Recognition would be given to Noyes for his work in promoting the public library in Washington and for other public services by Collins' bill. The Mississippian proposes that the main reading room of the new library be named "The Theodore W. Noyes Hall."

Noyes, in his annual report, cited the need for a new central library. The present building, he pointed out, was built more than 30 years ago and was designed to serve a city of only 300,000.

"When the time for final action by appropriating bodies arrives the trustees appeal for intelligent, hearty and sympathetic co-operation of the District Commissioners, the Budget Bureau and Congress," he said, "in bestowing upon the people of the District a central library either by skillful enlargement of the present structure or by erection of a new building, which at a minimum cost will be adequate in space and efficient in operation, appropriate to the demands of a city of the size and importance of Washington."

Collins several years ago sponsored a bill, which later became law, to authorize Congress to purchase the Vollbehr colection of old and valuable books, including the famed Gutenberg Bible, for the Library of Congress.

Farley Starts '40 Fund Drive Of $10,500,000

Democrats Plan to Keep U. S. Control; Will Hire Directors.

By Franklyn Waltman.

With their clothing barely dry from inaugurating President Roosevelt for his second term, the Democratic National Committee yesterday laid plans for gathering a huge war chest, estimated at $10,500,000, to assure the election in 1940 of their standard bearers and thus retain the party's control of the Federal Government.

Not only is this the most ambitious political financing plan ever projected in this country but its approval by the Democratic National Committee virtually four years in advance of the next Presidential election is a demonstration of vision and looking ahead rare in party organizations.

Plans Salaried Directors.

Taking advantage of the Inaugural ceremonies which brought most of the national committeemen and women to Washington, Chairman James A. Farley called the group to meet yesterday to hear the report and recommendations of W. Forbes Morgan, committee treasurer, and authorize future money-raising activities.

Morgan projected the scheme for permanent, full-time finance organization, with a salaried finance director in each State. Under his plan the collection of contributions from the party faithful and those wishing to give would be an organized every-day, throughout-the-year activity, instead of a last-minute undertaking in election years.

No limit was placed on the amount which the party will strive to collect in the next four years, but Morgan estimated $1,000,000 could be raised this year, $2,000,000 next year, $2,500,000 in 1939, and $5,000,000 in 1940, making a total of $10,500,000.

Morgan Plan Approved.

Some of those present at the national committee meeting believed such a war chest will be needed in 1940. They privately pointed out the Democrats in that year may not have a Presidential candidate as attractive and engaging as Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Moreover, if the party has any chance at all in 1940, the Roosevelt Administration will have washed out in large part the unemployment and relief situation. Consequently

4 Indians, 3½ Pairs of Pants Solve Airport Airsock Mystery

By the United Press.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Jan. 21. Four Indians wearing three-and-a-half pair of red pants which they had acquired one leg at a time tonight solved the mystery of disappearing "wind socks" at Pan-American Airways' station at Cumbarebo, Venezuela.

Capt. "Slim" Ekstrom, pilot of the Port of Spain-Maracaibo run, did the detective work.

He said that J. Angel Mendoza, Pan-American agent at Cumarebo, had been reporting disappearance of the "socks"—tubes of brilliant red cloth used as wind indicators at airports—for weeks and complained that they were causing him "many sleepless siestas."

The first sock disappeared on a dark night last month and was replaced by a second, a third, a fourth, a fifth, a sixth and a seventh—all of which vanished as if by magic.

Mendoza put guards around the 35-foot sock poles, surrounded them with barbed-wire, and bought savage watchdogs, all to no avail. He decided that evil spirits were making away with the indicators until Ekstrom solved the mystery today.

The pilot, flying low over a jungle glade, saw four mysterious red figures. Circling, he looked through his glasses and saw four Indians wearing three and a half pairs of pants—all made of the missing scarlet airport wind tubes.

Mendoza redoubled his guard tonight for he was certain the fourth Indian will be around to steal the extra leg he needs to complete his trousers.

Pope Suffering 'Unbearable Pain' As Death Nears

Vatican City, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Vatican officials said shortly before midnight that Pope Pius XI "appeared to be slipping slowly toward death."

His Holiness' illness obviously had reached a crisis.

He remained alive only because of "prayer and his dogged will power."

Auditorium In D.C. Asked By Robinson

Ickes Sees Building as Fitting Memorial to Jefferson.

Construction of a huge Government-owned auditorium in Washington may result from the drenching that President Roosevelt and thousands of spectators received Wednesday during the Inaugural ceremonies.

Senator Robinson, the majority leader, told The Post last night that he will introduce today a bill calling for a study with the aim of building such an auditorium to care for future inaugurals in inclement weather and other mass gatherings.

Robinson's plan, as yet not worked out in detail, is to draft a measure authorizing a commission to study the whole matter, including the size, the cost and the site.

Connolly Refuses Comment.

The commission, Robinson said, probably would comprise the Senate and House Committees of Public Buildings and Grounds and Secretary of Interior Ickes.

Senator Connolly, chairman of the Senate committee, said he would be glad to inquire into the project, but he declined to comment on the idea further until he gets an estimate of the cost, site and other details.

Secretary Ickes earlier in the day recommended the construction of a large civic auditorium, and suggested that it might be dedicated to Thomas Jefferson and the concept of free speech.

"It does not necessarily mean that the Inaugural ceremony should be held in the auditorium," he said, "but such a building here would serve as an alternative in the event of weather like we had yesterday.

Visitors Disappointed.

"It is certain that we can no longer count on the weather in Washington. Thousands of visitors coming here from great distances to witness the Inauguration of their President were bitterly disappointed.

"At future Inaugurations there might be a very deep snow. An auditorium would provide protection from the weather for the President, members of the Supreme Court and other officials."

Ickes recalled that Congress already had tentatively appropriated $3,000,000 for a memorial to Thomas Jefferson in Washington. Why not, he suggested, make this the nucleus of a fund to erect a great auditorium that not only would be a memorial to the Virginian, but would have a utilitarian value in symbolizing his ideal of free speech.

Cites Lack of Facilities.

Ickes at the same time emphasized that he was not trying to impose his views on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, which soon is to meet to decide on the kind of memorial to be built.

The Interior Department head said that no capital in the world is so lacking in auditorium facilities as Washington, and he recalled how it was necessary to hold the banquet of the World Power Conference in Union Station.

"I am not trying to boost an auditorium for Washington or trying to build up sentiment for it," Ickes said. "It has been a matter which I have favored all along. I hope to see here a fine, dignified structure worthy of the National Capital, which could be used for large conventions, for important governmental affairs and for civic purposes."

He would not commit himself on the question of how the auditorium would be financed. There are no PWA funds available for it, he said, and he suggested that the money might come in the form of a direct appropriation from Congress.

Test Pensioner Rests, Chuckles Over Fan Mail

Chelan, Wash., Jan. 21 (AP).—Chelan's "pensioner," C. C. Fleming, stretched out on a new bed tonight and chuckled over his fan mail—some of which contained contributions to boost his orginal $200 stake.

Fleming was selected as the spender in a practical test of the Townsend pension plan. He must spend $200 in a month, and he'll have no difficulty. The test is less than a week old and $141.95 is gone already, $28.56 of it to buy a "proper" bed.

Many of Fleming's fans tucked $1 bills in their letters, but the money won't be added to his spending spree. Sponsors said it would go into the "kitty" depository for the 2 per cent transactions tax which is collected every time Fleming spends one of his pension dollars.

President's Family Free From Illness

The Roosevelt family, from President to grandson, weathered the Inauguration Day storm without a sneeze or cough.

Mr. Roosevelt said "I never felt better in my life," as he sat down to his desk yesterday.

The President's wife and his mother, who remained here for the week-end, busied themselves about the mansion today. John, the youngest son, started back to his Harvard Classes last night and Elliott, another son, and his family left for their Texas home today.

Extend Trade Pacts, Plea Of Roosevelt

Congress Is Asked for 3-Year Continuance; 'Emergency' Cited.

Program Will Promote 'Durable Peace,' Says President in Letter.

By Sidney Olson.

Vigorously emphasizing the "emergency conditions" still prevailing in international trade relations, where high tariff barriers yet operate against American trade, President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to continue the reciprocal trade agreements program.

The President's special letter to Congress, received as the House Ways and Means Committee opened hearings on a resolution to extend the act for three years beyond its expiration date of June 12, was part of a four-point Administration drive yesterday to impress the committee with the necessity for the act's renewal.

The other three points were the appearances of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper and United States Tariff Commission Chairman Robert Lincoln O'Brien before the committee.

Doughton Gets Letter.

The President's letter was addressed to Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the committee. It urged continuance of the trade agreements program to promote a "durable peace" and a "balanced economic recovery," and stressed the importance of the measure's influence in "arresting the world trend toward national economic isolation, which seemed almost irresistible three years ago."

The President warned:

"In the present unfortunate state of world affairs we dare not, in justice to ourselves, relax our efforts or abate the vigor of our leadership in a world-wide movement for durable peace through economic prosperity."

The day's hearings were enlivened by repeated verbal jousts between six Republicans on the committee and the three witnesses. Repeatedly, Representatives Allen T. Treadway, Massachusetts; Harold Knutson, Minnesota, Roy Woodruff, Michigan, and Frank Crowther, New York, all Republicans, headed a continuous onslaught on Secretaries Hull and Roper.

Grilling Borne Patiently.

The two Cabinet members bore the grilling patiently, for the most part, but Secretary Hull lashed back on several occasions. Representative Knutson, seeking to point out that while the Secretary insisted world conditions had been bettered under the trade agreements, conditions actually had grown worse, with war looming, said:

"Do you recall a time when people and conditions were more in a state of unrest in the world than right now?"

The grave, white-haired Secretary snapped back:

"Yes, in 1932, when 40,000,000 people in this country had little to eat and wear."

When Knutson asked later, "is it true that Great Britain has refused to enter into a trade agreement unless we pass a mandatory neutrality law or make a war-debt settlement?" Hull retorted spiritedly:

"No, that's the invention of some trouble-making person more interested in measly, picayunish problems of their own than in the bigger objectives of this program."

"Chinquapin Question."

A later insistence by the Congressman brought the answer from the Secretary: "That's a chinquapin question." (The expression is colloquial, literally referring to the chinquapin nut, from a dwarf scrub oak in Eastern regions.)

Hull had stressed, as had the President, that "the emergency . . . is not over." His formal statement added:

"The reciprocal trade agreements program has demonstrated its effectiveness as an instrument for overcoming this grave emergency through thoroughgoing economic disarmament, without which enduring prosperity and military disarmament must remain a forlorn hope. There is no alternative program or policy which would lead to conditions of peace rather than economic impoverishment and ever-increasing armaments."

Verbally, to the committee, Hull later stated emphatically, in discussing his "profound feeling of the necessity of passing this resolution midst the present world threats of future controversy," that "within

Treasury Grants 60-Day Extension For Jobless Tax

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury yesterday extended for 60 days the January 31 deadline for making the first quarterly unemployment insurance tax payments under the social security act.

Payments may be made any time up to April 1 without assessment of interest.

The taxes are collected from employers of eight or more persons, and start at 1 per cent with respect to employment during the calendar year 1936, increasing to 3 per cent of wages paid after December 31, 1937.

The unemployment taxes are not levied against employes.

The delay was granted because many States recently have enacted unemployment insurance laws, but have not had time to set up administrative machinery.

80,000 Desert Homes As Midwest Streams Rage to Higher Levels

Where Ohio River Flood Rages

Rainfall Is Continuing as Record Crests Are Predicted.

Mississippi Edges Steadily Upward

Entire Populations of 2 Indiana Towns Are Moved to Safety.

The Flood Situation.

Citizens of Portsmouth, Ohio, were given four hours to abandon the low-lying areas before sewers were opened to save the city as the swollen Ohio River lapped the $1,000,000 wall around the 61-foot level.

Tributaries of the Mississippi isolated four cities and towns and threatened to inundate two more, sending 6,000 refugees hurrying from their homes.

At Cincinnati, the swollen Ohio River, fed by constant rain, lapped higher and higher. The meteorologist there said the river stage might reach 72 feet, and already had attained 68 feet. Twenty thousand Cincinnatians were homeless in the east end and river bottoms, and damage already has passed the $1,000,000 mark.

80,000 Homeless.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Nearly 80,000 persons were unofficially estimated homeless tonight in the flooded areas of the Midwest.

In Portsmouth, Ohio, City Manager Frank Sheehan ordered the sirens blown at 11 p. m., warning the populace of the flood-besieged city that the sewers would be opened at 3 a. m., inundating the town's business district.

Meantime, rain or snow continued to fall over a wide section, resulting in predictions by meteorologists that most of the rivers, already running above flood stages, would reach even higher levels.

Red Cross and relief agencies rushed food, clothing and tents and blankets into every zone that called for assistance. Ten States had reported heavy damage.

The entire populations of Lawrenceburg and Aurora, Ind., were moving out. Flood waters of the Ohio River threatened to crush newly built levees. Calls for help were sent to Indianapolis. A special relief train was being made up to take supplies to the stricken areas.

Worst Since 1913.

Thousands of persons stood in a downpour that ranged from 1 to more than 3 inches and watched the inexorable advance of water in the middle and lower Ohio River Valley—called the worst since the disastrous 1913 flood.

At some points business and industry was at a standstill. Householders and merchants moved their goods to upper floors. Trucks hauled valuable stock to the hills. Transportation was crippled.

Bedraggled refugees—many of them had seen icy waters creep to the eaves of their dwellings—sought shelter in schools, box cars, tents, halls and public buildings.

The overburdened Ohio swelled steadily from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Ill. But the worst, meteorologists warned, was yet to come. More rain, turning to snow as temperatures fell, was forecast. The Mississippi edged up hourly.

Three Indiana towns and five in Kentucky were without electricity when flood waters of the Ohio River cut off the Electric Light & Power Co. at Troy, Ind.

At Portsmith, Ohio, a boulder estimated to weigh 6 tons, loosened by rains, rolled 150 feet down a hill and crashed into an apartment house. One woman was injured. Eight families were endangered.

Cincinnati calculated its losses at $1,000,000. The warehouse and provisions district was inundated. Police received more than 500 calls for boats and trucks. Residents were warned the Ohio might crest there at 66 to 68 feet—far above the 52 feet flood stage. Only twice in recorded history has the stream passed the 66-foot mark.

Calls for help sent hundreds to boats to the aid of families trapped along the Ohio upstream from Cincinnati. More than six feet of water lapped in the streets of Pomeroy. Most of the homes in Ripley and Manchester were encircled by water. New Richmond, Higginsport, Rome and Newton were seriously affected.

Hundreds joined the exodus from

Educators Deny Evasion of Economy Act, Ruling Applies Only to U. S. Employes, Civil Service Commission Told.

Flatly denying that it has "evaded" the "marriage" clause of the economy act, the board of education yesterday voted to inform the Civil Service Commission that it intends to continue reappointing married teachers, who resigned to safeguard their husband's, or wife's Government job.

The board by unanimous vote reaffirmed its policy in a reply to the commission's challenge that in rehiring such married teachers it was not carrying out the letter and spirit of section 213 of the act.

The section prevents the employment of both husband and wife with the Government.

In upholding its reappointment policy, however, the board pointed out that the Civil Service Commission, itself, ruled in 1934 that the "marriage" clause did not apply to employes of the District government—only Federal employes were to be affected.

In view of this ruling the board of education was without power to prevent the re-employment of a teacher who had resigned because of section 213, according to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools. The board concurred in this opinion.

"The object of the board is to obtain the services of well-qualified teachers," declared Dr. Ballou, "and there is no reason for setting up a rule to keep out such teachers."

For an interval of several months following the enactment of the economy act in 1933 school officials passed over No. 1 teacher on the list of eligibles for appointment—

Four Air Raids Shake Madrid, Take Huge Toll

Non-Combatants Given 3 Days to Evacuate; Malaga Also Bombed.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Friday, Jan. 22.—Squadrons of rebel airplanes Thursday night and early today made four devastating air raids on Madrid. Bombers, protected by pursuit ships, dropped more than 70 high explosive bombs which spread death and destruction over a wide area.

Buildings throughout the city were shaken and thousands of window panes were broken.

An immediate check-up on casualties was impossible, but the death toll was expected to be large.

Madrid was preparing for bed when Gen. Francisco Franco's "black birds" swooped over the city and dropped their cargo.

Thousands of citizens scurried to the protection of cellars and subways as one defending crash followed another.

The last raid occurred at 12:37 a. m. and lasted 10 minutes.

Ordered to Leave.

Madrid, Jan. 21.—Defense authorities tonight gave the civil population 72 hours to evacuate Madrid, permitting only those engaged in combat or public office to remain.

Tokyo Cabinet, Jeered in Diet, Is Facing Fall

Dissolution of Houses Only Hope; Leaders Deny Army Domination.

Tokyo (Friday), Jan. 22 (AP).—Premier Koki Hirota's cabinet decided today to ask the throne for dissolution of the Diet, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported.

Tokyo (Friday), Jan. 22 (AP).—The cabinet of Koki Hirota, badly shaken by its hostile reception yesterday in the Diet, where it was pilloried as under the thumb of the army, today confronted a choice between its own resignation and dissolution of the House of Representatives.

Vigorously attacked in both houses, booed and jeered at, criticized as militarist-dominated and pro-Fascist, the government sought and obtained a 48-hour truce in the bitter political warfare.

Finance Minister Assailed.

The climax of yesterday's stormy session in the lower house came when Kunimatsu Hamada, a leader of the Seiyukai, second largest party in the house, offered to commit suicide by harakiri if the war minister, Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi, could prove Hamada's previous speech had "insulted" the army.

Terauchi was one of four outstanding ministers who were met with boos, jeers, and laughter as they tried to defend government policies. Premier Hirota, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, and Finance

60 Pneumonia Deaths in D. C. Recorded Since First of Year

With empty offices and overworked physicians attesting to the effects of an epidemic of influenza and serious colds in the city, Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday warned District citizens to safeguard their health.

At the same time the United States Public Health Service revealed that latest statistics show there are 23,258 cases in influenza in the country.

District Health Department records list 209 cases of influenza and 14 deaths since January 1. Pneumonia cases in the same period total 128 with 60 deaths.

Dr. Ruhland said, however, that the statistics do not give a true picture of the widespread sickness in the city. Only the most serious cases are reported. Dr. Ruhland said, and the records do not reflect the thousands of cases of severe colds in the city.

The health officer said that the influenza cases reported are of the "mild" variety and not comparable to the virulent type of the disease which swept the country in 1918.

Serious complications may result from an attack of "mild" influenza, however, Dr. Ruhland warned, and emphasized the dangers which may result if victims attempt to disregard treatment.

"It is of the utmost importance that a person stricken with the infection should go to bed immediately and stay there until his physician tells him to get up," said Dr. Ruhland.

"People here do not seem to appreciate the importance of convalescence. It is essential that the body

Sanford Bates Quits as Head Of U. S. Prisons

Penologist Accepts Post With Boys Clubs; Bennett Named Successor.

Sanford Bates, outstanding American penologist, has resigned as director of Federal prisons, and his assistant of eight years, James V. Bennett, has been appointed to succeed him, Attorney General Cummings announced yesterday.

Bates is retiring from the public service to accept a $15,000 a year position as executive director of the Boys' Clubs of America, which has its headquarters in New York.

His successor is a career man in the Government service, a graduate in law of George Washington University, and a resident of Chevy Chase.

Rise Was Outstanding.

He entered Government work in 1919 via a competitive civil service examination which brought him the job of assistant investigator in the Bureau of Efficiency.

Bennett's rise from that position to the post he now assumes is one of the outstanding recent examples of a career rise in the Federal service.

After a tenure with the personnel classification board, where he rose to the secretaryship, Bennett was transferred to the Department of Justice and assisted in reorganizing the Bureau of Prisons.

In addition to his G. W. degree, he holds an A. B. from Brown University. He entered the Federal service as a Rhode Island resident.

Commended by Roosevelt.

Departure of Bates was marked by letters voicing regret on the part of President Roosevelt and Cummings. Bates' letter of resignation was dated January 4. The President, in his letetr to Bates, said:

"In common with all who are familiar with your work in the Department of Justice, I sincerely regret that the Administration is to be deprived of the fine public service you have rendered with such marked distinction.

"The type of work you are about to undertake is of vital importance and presents a congenial task, for which in every way you are abundantly qualified."

19 Years in Prison Work.

The retiring director had spent 19 years in prison work after he quit a Massachuetts State political career in 1918 to become commissioner of Boston penal institutions at the behest of Calvin Coolidge, then Governor.

His reorganization of the city's institutions and establishment of colonies of defective delinquents were among a series of achievements which gave him recognition which has since become international.

"Boy's club work has had an appeal to me that I could not resist," he told reporters yesterday. "All the money in the world could not drag me out of here if there was not a challenge of work to be done."

The place to prevent crime, Bates said, is among under-privileged youth, and it is there that "the greatest saving of taxpayers' money can be effected."

Tube-Fed Woman Buying Trousseau

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP).—Miss Viola Kirtley, 32-year-old bride-to-be, who feeds herself through tubes in her stomach because she has no esophagus, rested at the home of friends tonight after a strenuous shopping trip for her trousseau.

She planned to return soon to her home in Lincoln, Nebr., where, friends said, she would marry Dr. W. V. Kennedy, young Denver physician.

Since before she was 10 years old, Miss Kirtley has had to feed herself through short rubber tubes inserted into her stomach. Her esophagus was injured, she explained, when she was 3 years old and it closed completely within a short time.

An operation remedied the situation and now she "eats" almost what she pleases before placing the food in her stomach by way of the tubes.

Newsboy to Serve 25 Years in Plots

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (AP).—David Harris, 96-pound news vendor, was sentenced today to 25 years imprisonment for writing extortion letters to Freddie Bartholomew and Jane Withers, child screen stars.

"I heard that people were getting money writing letters like that," explained Harris.

Asked why he selected the juvenile victims, he replied:

"You know I'm a little fellow myself. I picked on the small ones because I thought I could handle them and scare them into paying me some money."

Baroness Ampthill Wins Divorce After 14 Months

London, Jan. 21 (AP).—Baroness Ampthill, now proprietor of a fashionable Mayfair dressmaking shop, has been granted a final decree of divorce from her husband, with whom she waged a four-year fight to establish the legitimacy of her son a decade ago.

She won a decree nisi on November 23, 1935, but the court allowed 14 months to elapse before making the divorce absolute.

Lady Ampthill could not be reached today. A workman in charge of re-decorating her flat said: "I have been looking for her since Christmas to find out what color scheme she wants."

Hotel Workers Return To Jobs in Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP).—The month-old strike of cooks, waiters, waitresses and bartenders in downtown hotels here ended tonight with an agreement meeting union wage demands.

Thomas M. Finn, Federal mediator, and the Rev. John P. Boland, chairman of the Regional Labor Relations Board, arranged the negotiations with employers, who, though signing no contract, submitted a memorandum of understanding stating the wage scales which the union accepted.

Minnesota's Corsican Called 'Petit Caporal' of Congress

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN TOUSSAINT BERNARD.

Farmer-Laborite Bernard, New Gopher State Representative, Opposed to 'Smugness,' Favors 'Political Revolution.'

By Liam Lenihan.

He is a Corsican by birth. Short and dark complexioned, his brown eyes flash with fire when he speaks and his hands gesture each point in the continental manner.

People whose toes he has stepped on dub him "the Little Napoleon." They whisper that he has ambitions to be another "Petit Caporal." But Minnesota's Farmer-Laborite John T. Bernard merely shrugs his shoulders and laughs.

The 43-year-old representative from the Gopher State has little patience with or respect for that "smugness that comes from contented living."

He was born in Bastia, the largest city in Corsica, and at the age of 14 he emigrated to America. His father, mother and one sister had preceded him and had settled in Eveleth in northern Minnesota.

School to Mines.

At that time Eveleth was a small, pioneering town and it was the epitome of Main Streetism to the lonely young Corsican. But he had little time for moodiness—there was school work to be done and the intricacies of a new language to be mastered.

School to mines—that seemed to be the only future for the rising generation of Eveleth. And for ten years Bernard worked as a laborer, the tang of damp earth in his nostrils.

When Wilson's ideology swept the country and the flower of America answered the call of democracy, Bernard laid down his pick and took up the sword.

He spent 15 months in France. Does not care to talk about that now. All that it taught him was that men can die and that war is hell.

His adopted home looked good to him when he returned. But he never went back to the mines. He was filled with a desire to "roll up his sleeves and make America over."

Joined Farmer-Laborites.

He joined the Farmer-Labor Party—then in its embryonic stage—and for a living he worked in the local fire department. But he never had political ambitions, not even three years ago when he overwhelmingly was voted chairman of the St. Louis County Farmer-Labor Association.

One year ago he was re-elected for the same post by the staggering imprimatur of 320 out of 324 delegates. That vote pointed to a political future ahead. He accepted when drafted and was elected.

He is here now and already has been heard from when he denounced what he terms was the "railroading through" of the neutrality bill. In the eyes of Bernard, that bit of legislation was "discriminatory against a duly elected and legitimate government."

Only a few minutes conversation with the Farmer-Laborite will convince one of his political honesty. He refrains from stump speeches and cliches of the word-spieling legislators.

"Tired of Bunk."

He is "sick and tired of bunk," demands concrete action and holds that what this country needs is a "political revolution." And concerning a third party he had this to say: "Unless this Administration proves by its actions and not by its words that it is going to alleviate the sub-subsistence wages of the masses, the Nation that voted it in will rebel and a third party will sweep the country."

The naturalized Congressman is married—to Josephine Dionis, a native of Toulon. He met her on leave from the trenches and returned to claim her nine years later. They have one child, Marie.

Health Bureau Also Hit.

Dr. Ruhland said Health Department figures will not reflect illness resulting from the drenching received by spectators during the Inaugural parade until later in the week.

Ironically, the wave of sickness struck hard at the Health Department. Dr. Daniel Seckinger, deputy health officer and Dr. James Cumming, chief of the communicable disease bureau, were both home sick yesterday.

Another of those stricken with a bad cold yesterday was Miss Gertrude Bowling, chief of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society.

Chiefs of Government departments reported sick leave requests were unusually heavy.

At the United States Public Health Service it was pointed out that while the number of flu cases has risen from 4,000 three weeks ago the total today is still far below the 200,000 recorded in the first week in January, 1929.

In the first three weeks of January, 1936, in the District only 14 flu cases and 9 deaths were reported, but during the same period there were 112 cases of pneumonia and 77 deaths.

Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, president of the District Medical Society, said that while physicians have been working at top speed here for the past several days the state of the city's health was not alarming.

"Most of the sickness is the result of severe colds or grippe," said Dr. Sprigg. "The flu cases physicians have encountered have been for the most part extremely mild."

There were 84 midshipmen in the hospital at the Naval Academy, in Annapolis, suffering from influenza, the Associated Press reported last night. Physicians said, however, the number of sick was about normal for this time of year, considering the regimental strength of 2,298.

Oil Men Will Fight Jacobs Tax Boost

District oil men yesterday began to organize opposition to the 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax recommended in the Jacobs' fiscal relations report.

At a meeting in the Hotel Willard they formed a District Oil Dealers Association and laid plans to hold a mass meeting of oil dealers, filling station operators, service station salesmen and tank wagon drivers.

B. D. Friedman, of South Washington, Va., was elected temporary chairman of the association, the membership of which is expected to include most oil company executives and employes in the District.

Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, jr., Chief of Field Artillery, U. S. A., will be guest of honor at the exhibition drill to be presented by officers and enlisted men of the Sixteenth Field Artillery and Third Cavalry in the riding hall at Fort Myer tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The general will be greeted by a 13-gun salute, and escorted into the riding hall by an especially selected escort of honor from the machine gun troop of the Cavalry.

Spies Supplied Metal Plants, Senate Is Told

Bosses' Group Took Control of Members' Strikes, Evidence Shows.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee added to its record yesterday the story of a strike-breaking and strike-prevention service for 900 metal manufacturing plants.

With officials of the National Metal Trades Association on the witness stand, Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, drew forth testimony and documentary evidence to show that:

Police Records Cited.

That in one instance 16 of 42 strike guards, supplied through a detective agency, had criminal records ranging from rape to robbery and shooting-to-wound.

That the association takes exclusive control of the determination of measures used to combat a strike; the management of the plant involved agrees to make no settlement with the strikers except with aproval of the association.

That the association has what La Follette called a "war chest" of $200,000, untaxed, and constantly replenished by dues payments of 20 cent monthly per worker employed in the member plants.

That upon the passage of the Byrnes law forbidding the transportation of strike breakers across State lines, the association established a recruiting office in each of several States.

Financial Aid Given.

That after the passage of a Wisconsin State law, forbidding the importation of strike breakers, the association assisted a member there with a contribution of $3,000.

The principal witness was Homer D. Sayre, commissioner of the association, whom the committee examined on the purposes of the organization and O. R. Abbott and L. A. Stringham, in charge of supplying anti-strike services in the Chicago and Eastern areas respectively.

Sayre declared himself and the association to be uncompromisingly opposed to the "closed shop," but much in favor of employers meeting their employes to discuss grievances.

Guard's Record Read.

La Follette produced a list of guards kept "in the safe" of the association's Chicago office. He asked if one of them, Lawrence Pfohman, had been sent to a strike at the Addressograph-Mimeograph plant in Cleveland. Abbott replied that such was the case.

The chairman then read into the record a report of Pfohman received from the Chicago police. It listed a police record including charges of robbery, assault to kill, larceny, passing bogus checks and operating a "con game."

La Follette then turned to the strike last May at the Black & Decker Manufacturing Co. at Kent, Ohio. The witness testified that at the association's behest, 42 guards were sent in through a Cleveland private detective agency.

Testimony was that all the costs of transporting, housing and feeding the strikebreakers were borne by the association. Financial statement was presented showing that as of a recent audit the association had more than $200,000 available for its work.

Artists Showing Christ As Jew Are Assailed

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Nazi publication Schwarzekorps entered the controversy over the Jewish origin of Christ today with a spirited attack on artists who depict him with emphatically Jewish features.

The article centered on a new series of passion pictures by Otto Panok which, the Nazi organ said, not only emphasizes Jewish features but makes Jesus resemble Lenin.

The publication urged something be done about artists who portray a Jewish Christ being betrayed by a Judas, with distinctly Gentile features.

Va. Liquor Board Silent On Price Cut Request

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—The State liquor board maintained silence today on the request of Delegate R. Hill Fleet, of Lancaster, for cheaper liquor and better enforcement under the Virginia system to eliminate the bootlegging traffic.

Fleet, speaking before the Oak Grove Community League last night declared the board is making too much profit on its State liquor monopoly. Board profits last year approximated $3,500,000, or nearly 25 per cent of the gross.

some party stalwarts feel the party may be handicapped in the next Presidential campaign by lack of relief rolls and believe something should be done to take their place.

Although the committee approved the Morgan plan in general, leaving details to be worked out by a committee to be named by Chairman Farley, it was criticized by Edmund C. Shields, Michigan committeeman. He did not object to the idea of raising a war chest but he thought the plan to put such work in charge of State finance directors impractical.

He contended donors to political funds like to make their contributions direct either to the national committeeman in the State or to the Democratic State chairman in order that they may obtain recognition for their gifts. The contributions should be made to the men to whom the donor will return in a few weeks seeking a job or some favor, he argued.

"Well, that's what we are here for, isn't it?" retorted Shields.

"A very frank answer, Ed," Farley rejoined as laughter spread through the Willard Hotel ballroom.

$500,000 Expense Set.

The committee also approved the treasurer's report, which, among other things, proposed an allocation for expenditures during this calendar year of $500,000 for the national committee. Morgan asserted such a sum was necessary "in view of the tremendous demands being made upon the national committee and the importance of keeping in touch with State organizations."

"I hope that it may be possible," the treasurer stated, "to reduce this amount by careful economy, but in order to keep our organization functioning properly, even in off-election years, and the continuous contacts that the chairman must keep up with the various State leaders and other party workers and the distribution of certain amounts of literature, I do not think it will be possible to reduce this figure by any considerable amount."

Morgan reported the committee's deficit on November 30 was $497,619, of which $153,532 had been incurred prior to the Democratic convention last June, and $344,087 resulted from the subsequent campaign. The various State organizations, he said, had been asked, on a quota basis, to raise $281,800 for retirement of this deficit, leaving slightly more than $200,000 to be raised from other sources.

Victory Dinners to Aid.

He pointed out that one means of paying off this balance of the deficit was revenue from the series of Victory Dinners planned for March 4 throughout the country along the same lines at the Jackson Day dinners of a year ago, when the committee raised $345,000 above expenses.

The treasurer also explained the committee had on hand 1,500 out of 2,500 copies of a deluxe edition of the Democratic Convention Book, personally autographed by the President. He explained plans to sell the remaining copies at $250 each, with the committee netting $150 a copy. He figured the committe might received $225,000 from this source.

Morgan also reported that during the campaign the committee had received a total of $3,857,312, including $33',000 which had been borrowed. Contributions totaled $3,271,508, which compared with $1,407,432 in contributions in the 1932 campaign. During the last campaign sale of the convention book netted the committee $214,032, and sale of advertising in that document, after commissions had been paid, produced $19,675.

Vice President Garner, Texas committeeman, attended the meeting and made a brief speech. The committee voted to seat Wirt G. Bowman and Mrs. Samuel White as committeeman and woman from Arizona. After the meeting Chairman Farley entertained the committee at luncheon.

Firm Is Formed To Make Plane Safety Devices

New Radio Compass Expected to Reduce Number of Crashes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—Formation of a new corporation for the manufacture of airplane safety appliances by absorption of four companies already in the field was announced today by Vincent Bendix, manufacturer and donor of air race trophies. One is the Radio Research Co., Inc., of Washington.

Among the products of the new concern, Bendix Radio Corporation, will be a directional radio compass which Bendix described in a formal announcement as "the best obtainable, we believe, and a device which will reduce the number of crashes."

He cited the recent series of air mishaps in the West in stressing the necessity for better appliances in the cockpit for the determination of a pilot's position when he has "lost" the radio beam he generally follows.

"The radio compass," explained Charles Marcus, a director of the new corporation and vice president of the parent concern, Bendix Aviation Corporation, "can receive signals from three to five times as far as the ordinary beam receiver, due to the inefficient transmitting antennae necessitated by the beam's character."

L. A. Hyland, another officer of the new corporation, said the Bendix compass practically would eliminate "night effect," or distortion of signals.

In addition to the shielded loop direction finder, the Bendix Radio Corporation will manufacture a large number of communication accessories, including field localizers—radio signals marking landing field runways—and blind landing equipment.

In the course of the interview which followed Bendix's announcement, Marcus said two of the five major American transport companies had contracted to install the Bendix directional radio.

"It will be impossible for a pilot to lose his course with this compass," he said, "if he can hear any radio station signals at all."

Other companies absorbed were the Radio Products Co., Dayton, Ohio, and the W. P. Hilliard Co., and Jenkins & Adair, both of Chicago. Bendix said the Washington laboratory would serve mainly the needs of the Navy; that at Dayton, the Army Air Corps; those at Chicago, the air transport lines and private owners, and a branch at Oakland, Calif., civil agencies.

The corporation president added that included in the new corporation's personnel were more than 100 aviation and communications experts.

Port Strike Action Is Left to Leche

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 21 (AP).—Acting Gov. Earl K. Long today notified the joint maritime strike committee in New Orleans that he would not intervene in the port strike there.

He said he would leave any action to be taken to Gov. Richard W. Leche after Leche returns from Washington.

Robert H. Meers, chairman of the committee, wired the Governor asking for a conference on intervention on Meers' charge that "law enforcement has broken down in New Orleans and the police are flouting law and decency."

The charge was made in a mass meeting of strikers and sympathizers.

Mother Objected To Seventh Wife

Providence, R. I., Jan. 21 (AP).—Trial of the action of William T. Harris, jr., of Riverside, Calif., to break the $260,000 will of his mother, the late Mrs. Carrie Louise Ritchie, of Providence, was featured today by testimony of her former chauffeur that Harris "faded into insignificance" in his mother's eyes after taking "a seventh wife."

The will cut Harris off with a $1,000 bequest, and $25 a month in the event he should survive his two sisters, Mrs. Marie Louise Montgomery, of Bay Shore, Long Island, N. Y., and Mrs. Edwin D. Hague, of Boston, according to testimony at the contest in superior court.

Arthur Sherman, the fromer chauffeur, testified that when Mrs. Ritchie heard of the last marriage of her son on Christmas Day, 1934, it was "most upsetting" to her. She had been led to believe her son had had six wives, Sherman said, and "she objected to the seventh."

Eastern Rails Unite to Fight Wage Increase

Labor's Bid for 20 Pct. Boost Held Threat to Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—Eastern railroads will present a solid front in opposing demands of the five major railway labor unions for a 20 per cent wage increase, it was indicated today in carrier circles.

Managements of the big trunk lines and the smaller systems alike were said to view the bid for higher wages as a serious threat to railway recovery, now in good stride after nearly five years of acute depression.

Executives generally declined to be quoted by name in the absence of more complete information on the proposed demands of the brotherhoods, but some expressed belief the majority of roads could not prudently grant any wage increases unless their revenues showed a substantial increase.

Railroad statistical quarters estimated a 20 per cent wage boost for workers in the five unions would add $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually to the wage accounts of some of the larger roads. The demands, it was contended, would exceed the 1936 net incomes of many carriers.

The last increase in base wage rates of railroad workers was voted in 1927.

Police to Close Roads as River Rise Continues

Severe Damage Here Held Unlikely; Maryland Areas Suffer.

Waters still were rising in the Potomac and tributary streams last night, and National Park police prepared to barricade several low-lying roads here. No severe damage was anticipated here by experts, but to prevent danger, roads will be kept clear of traffic. The Potomac was 18 inches above normal early last night.

Upstream, in Maryland, citizens anxiously awaited today's dawn to see how high the flooded Potomac and Nanticoke Rivers had risen. Residents of both sections recalled disastrous floods during the past two years.

More rain was expected during last night and this morning. The Weather Bureau did not hold out any hope of diminution of the heavy rains of the past few days, after yesterday's short respite.

The most serious flood condition continued to be in nearby Bladensburg, where the Anacostia was out of its banks and for a while covered the Baltimore-Washington Highway. The water was almost two feet deep there at one time, though the road was reopened to traffic yesterday.

Water still flowed over Beach Drive in Washington, while Blagden avenue in Rock Creek Park was also cut off, at Allison street. Park Police last night barricaded the Park Road in Anacostia Park between the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge and the Eleventh Street Bridge.

It was believed Hains Point might be inundated during the night. However, the Point has been closed to traffic a week and a half for road repairs. No additional precautions are needed there.

"Some unimproved roads are practically impassable," Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the State roads commission, warned Maryland motorists last night. He said that while there have been few washouts, most dirt roads were rendered unfit for travel.

The Monocacy River was out of its banks, overflowing the lowlands of Frederick County. There were no indications of a serious flood danger there.

Up at Harpers Ferry.

At Harpers Ferry the Potomac was 9½ feet above normal, having risen 18 inches during the past 24 hours. This was high, but still far short of the height of 36½ feet reached last March.

At Cumberland the Potomac was up to the 8-foot level. This was 11 feet below flood level. At Williamsport it was up 7 feet, but with no immediate danger.

A school bus driver at Fredericksburg said he had to detour 6 miles with a busload of children because a bridge had been washed out along his route.

A temporary bridge over the Nanticoke River, near Springfield, W. Va., was carried away by flood waters last night. Flood improvements put in since last spring's disaster, however, were believed to be able to keep the river under control.

Woman, Attacked, Left in Creek, Dies

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 21 (AP).—Severely beaten, comely Mrs. Anita Botelho, 21, was found in a creek near Mills College today and died en route to a hospital.

Ice covered the victim's hair and torn clothing, and two workmen at first thought the woman was dead.

Mrs. Botelho, who had been criminally assaulted, lay half-submerged in the small ice-covered creek.

130-Pound Man Saves Woman Twice His Size

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 21 (AP).—There was some humor in tragic flood situations.

A 250-pound woman overturned a rescue boat manned by 130-pound George Angel, of the East End Y. M. C. A. marines. Angel dove into the deep water and after a hard struggle brought the women back to her flood-surrounded home.

Kentucky lowlands. A passenger train was ditched by washed-out rails near Slaughters. Several persons were hurt. National Guardsmen were ordered to stand by for duty at Hopkinsville, Livermore, Covington, Maysville, Marion and Mayfield. Troops were requested by officials of Wickliffe, Eddyville and Augusta. Parts of Frankfort, on the Kentucky River, were threatened.

At Newport, Ky., 50 city blocks were submerged and six steel mills suspended operations. At Dayton, water covered 30 blocks.

Residents of Hazelton, Ind., gathered on knolls to see waters of the White River flowing through homes and buildings they had quit before the levee collapsed. Six persons who fled from Cannelton and Tell City termed the flood the worst in their experience. Part of Richmond was inundated. The Ohio backed into stores and homes at Aurora. Engineers feared levees near Vincennes would not hold. The Ohio lifted over the 45-foot level at Evansville.

Streams were on the upsurge in ten States—Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Illinois, Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and North Carolina.

Pittsburgh—in the path of the $300,000,000 floods last March—prepared for a rise of six feet over the 25 feet flood stage at the junction of the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio.

At Memphis, U. S. engineers gathered their forces after a meteorologist said the Mississippi might reach the highest level since the disastrous 1927 overflow.

The Midwestern office of the Red Cross at St. Louis reported 4,000 persons had been driven from homes in Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas. Motor boat crews brought the stranded from isolated houses along the St. Francis River in southeastern Missouri and northeastern Arkansas. At Senath, Mo., the flood was reported the highest in history.

Army engineers asked the 1,500 residents of the Birds Point-New Madrid, Mo., area to evacuate.

The Wabash inched up toward the 1913 flood level at Maunie, Ill. Many left their homes there and in Golconda. Both sought Red Cross assistance and medical supplies. At Golconda the Ohio River spilled 8 feet of water on Front street. At Rosiclare business establishments were flooded.

Roanoke River Floods.

Point Pleasant and Huntington, W. Va., arranged to care for approximately 4,000 persons forced to flee by the rising Ohio. Water invaded every business house in Point Pleasant. Boats were sent to the aid of families marooned on the second floors of their dwellings.

Rain raised the Roanoke River in North Carolina, spreading waters across low land near the coast. The Cape Fear and Neuse Rivers overflowed.

Coast Guard headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y., started 28 Guardsmen, 6 surf boats and a trainload of equipment for Evansville, Ind. The Coast Guard at Chicago planned to send six more boats to Evansville tomorrow. Six already have been dispatched.

The American Red Cross sent 12 additional disaster relief workers from Washington to points in the lower Ohio River Valley last night, following reports of continued heavy rains and rising waters in the Ohio and its tributaries.

Ten Coast Guard boats were dispatched upon request of the Red Cross to Evansville, Ind., and two were sent to Hazelton, Ind., where a levee broke yesterday, flooding the town, which has a population of about 500 persons. Six boats and crews were sent from Chicago and six from Buffalo.

The Red Cross Public Health Nursing Service in Washington had notified a number of nurses to be ready today to go to the flooded zones, in the event that a serious health situation develops. Two nurses had arrived in McLean County, Kentucky, to aid the sick and to work in co-operation with State health officials.

One death was reported at Tylertown, Miss., where a 4-month-old colored child drowned in overflow water. The mother saved an older child.

A man and woman, both ill of pneumonia, were isolated in their homes near Kennett, Mo., where the St. Francis River was out of its banks.

Power Is Cut Off.

Troy, Ind., Jan. 21 (AP).—Flood waters of the Ohio River cut off the electric light and power company here tonight, leaving three Indiana towns and five in Kentucky without electricity.

Towns without electricity are Troy, Tell City and Cannelton in Indiana, and Hawesville, Hardinsburg, Cloverport, Lewisport and Irvington in Kentucky.

Troy and Tell City also were without a water supply. Their water plants are operated by electricity.

7,000 Leave Lawrenceburg.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Jan. 21 (AP).—The 7,000 residents of Lawrenceburg evacuated their homes tonight, moving into distilleries located on high ground, as the Ohio River passed the 67-foot mark and threatened to break through the levee which protects the city.

A few miles farther downstream at Aurora the river climbed steadily up the hillside on which the city is built. Approximately two-thirds of the business district was inundated, along with 20 to 30 blocks of the residential area.

The water supply at Aurora was expected to be cut off some time tonight.

B. & O. Quits Service.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Continued steady rains sent the Ohio River rolling toward levels of the disastrous flood of March, 1936, tonight as southern West Virginia relief agencies mobilized for instant action.

Midway between Huntington and Parkersburg lies Point Pleasant, an isolated town of 3,500. No highways were open and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced it was discontinuing service on its Ohio division.

1,900 Tennesseeans Homeless.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan 21 (AP).—Flood waters in middle Tennessee rolled over wider areas tonight and an estimated 1,900 persons in the Cumberland River Valley were homeless.

River authorities said crests would not be reached before Sunday.

The forecast was for intermittent rains tonight and Friday, probably followed by snow.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21 (AP).—A second general rain within 24 hours in the upper Ohio River watershed brought predictions tonight of high water about the steel city which ranged from 3 to 5 feet above the "danger point."

W. S. Brotzman, veteran chief of the United States Weather Bureau, estimated a level of 31 feet at the junction of the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio rivers during the day. He lowered this to 28 feet after rain ceased, and with the second downpour starting tonight, said:

"I think 28 feet will be about the top. But that is not based on any continued rainfall. The Monongahela is virtually stationary with the Allegheny rising slowly. If this rain continues, then any estimates must be subject to revision."

Coast Guard to Rescue.

Asbury Park, N. J., Jan. 21 (AP).—New Jersey coast guards completed preliminary arrangements tonight for speeding men and boats into the floodswept Ohio River Valley.

Chief Boatswain R. W. Hodge, aide to Commander Simon R. Sands, of the fifth district, said that the crews to be dispatched would depend on where they were to go. If, for example, they were ordered to West Virginia or Kentucky, the call probably would be relayed to stations in the Atlantic City, Longport and Ocean City area.

"That would be the best place to ship the boats from and we have a lot of them there," he said. "We could take them into Atlantic City and a crane would put them on the train. It takes only a few minutes to load a boat."

Flee Danger Zones.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Refugees and levee patrols raced out of danger zones tonight as raging rivers smashed through barriers and swept into towns of Southwest Missouri and northeast Arkansas.

While the mighty Mississippi rose to flood crests indicating imminent danger of a major flood, its tributaries isolated four cities and towns, threatened to inundate two more and sent 6,000 refugees hurrying from their homes.

Abandoning hope of saving the St. Francis River levee from Cardwell to Kennett, Mo., U. S. engineers, who for days have been fighting the raging rivers, hurriedly ordered 2,000 workers to evacuate.

While the workers hurried out of the danger zone, taking the few remaining residents with them, the St. Francis drove new clefts into its levees near Senath, Mo., and poured a boiling torrent of water around Cardwell and Arby, Mo., isolating the tiny towns completely.

Black water lapped over the railroad tracks at Cardwell tonight and was expected to cover the lowland town by morning, City Marshal John Hardy told the United Press by telephone.

Chicago Zoo Buys Eland for $2,000

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Chicago Zoological Society wrote out a check for $2,000 today and ordered a female giant eland for its menageries at Brookfield.

Director Edward Bean said when the large antelope arrived from the Sudan this spring it would become the first one ever exhibited in the United States.

The eland was the zoo's first exotic purchase of 1937. Last year it paid $4,500 for a pair of baby gorillas, both females; $1,000 for an Indian elephant, $875 for a Malap tapir, $620 for two sloth bears and $1,372 for a batch of 196 monkeys.

Victim of Heart Ailment.

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—A coroner's jury decided today that heart disease caused the death of Mrs. Flowerree Grey Leonard Forgan, 42, Chicago and New York society woman, who was found dead January 9 in the bedroom of her apartment. She was the divorced wife of David R. Forgan, jr., stock broker.

'Flood Days' Celebrated.

Business Area To Be Flooded At Portsmouth

Screeching Sirens Warn Citizens to Leave City; Sewers to Be Opened.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Jan. 21.—Screeching sirens and roaring factory whistles at 11 p. m. tonight gave citizens of Portsmouth four hours to abandon the low-lying business district before sewers are opened to let in the muddy Ohio River flood waters at 3 a. m.

City Manager Frank Sheehan decided to reduce the period for evacuation from six to four hours and advance the alarm signal from midnight to 11 p. m. as the swollen stream lapped the $1,000,000 wall around the 60-foot level.

Exit Is Orderly.

The city's river front streets, Sheehan said, would be covered by several feet of water by 5 a. m.

A steady movement from the besieged sector became a double-time but orderly rush after the "abandon city" warnings were sounded.

The city furnished fire trucks and all available rolling stock to help move household goods, merchandise and other valuables out of the zone.

A new call for volunteers added about 100 more men to the thousands already fighting to save what they could from the imminent flood.

The ominous river lapped around the 61-foot level, and the opening of sewers was decided upon as the only possible means of saving the concrete flood wall and preventing a general disaster.

There was excited, but orderly industry throughout the city tonight as steady driving rain continued over 24 hours without let up.

Sheehan, Col. E. P. Lawlor of the Ohio National Guard, and other officials kept up a ceaseless patrol of the floodwall, encouraging hundreds of emergency workers as they stowed sandbags wherever seepages appeared and kept pumps going to protect the city now below water level.

The Ohio National Guard rushed 1,000 cots and other relief equipment to the scene by the only road that gives access to the city.

The city manager decided not to attempt to place sandbags atop the wall. It would be useless, he said, as the river certainly was going beyond the point where any sandbags would help.

He ordered Civilian Conservation Corps and Works Progress Administration crews to turn to helping move valuables.

A National Guard unit was mobilized for action and the adjutant general's office sent Col. E. P. Lawlor here from Columbus to determine on additional aid.

All available boats were rounded up. The towboat Kentucky, with a barge and rowboats, also was sent from Cincinnati and a Coast Guard unit was expected.

The Selby Shoe Co., one of the largest manufacturers of women's shoes in the world, packed sandbags high around its plant, called in every man who could be obtained, and prepared to fight off the flood.

Screeching sirens and roaring factory whistles at 11 p. m. today gave citizens of Portsmouth four hours to abandon the low-lying business district to the muddy flood at 3 a. m.

Warehouse Goods Moved as Floods MenaceRichmond

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Warehousemen on the James River Harbor were busy here tonight moving goods and preparing for a flood crest of from 18.5 to 19 feet expected tomorrow afternoon.

F. N. Hibbard, meteorologist in charge of the United States Weather Bureau here, said that streams in the James River drainage area began falling rapidly today and that rains had ceased. Sudden hard rains early tomorrow, however, would upset the flood crest predictions, he said, and further endanger waterfront property.

Chief of Police Saves Woman From Icy River

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Barbara Debroskey, 50, Bellaire, Ohio, bakery worker, rested in a hospital tonight after a chilly plunge into the rain-swollen Ohio River.

Police Chief Clyde Baker, who pulled off his overcoat and dived into the river after the woman, said she had tried to commit suicide. Baker said residents of Shadyside, alarmed by the woman's unusual actions at the river's edge, had summoned Baker.

Wall of Water Encircles Two River Villages

Cardwell, Arby, Mo. Cut Off as Workers Abandon River Levees.

By the United Press.

Cardwell, Mo., Jan. 21.—Engineers tonight gave up the fight to hold the St. Francis River levee between here and Kennett, Mo., and called some 2,000 workers out of the area.

The surging river, swollen higher by fresh downpours, smashed new holes in levees near Senath, Mo., and at Parker's Island.

Completely Surrounded.

"We are completely surrounded by water because of fresh levee breaks and we are faced with a shortage of food and fuel," City Marshal John Hardy told the United Press by telephone.

"No one has suffered particularly yet, but supplies are running low. We have got to do something soon. We have been trying to get boats but so far we have been unable to get them."

He said engineers were predicting murky floodwaters, 18 to 20 inches deep would rage into the flat-surfaced little town.

"The water is up to the railroad station now and is rising at nearly an inch an hour, Hardy continued. "Engineers believe we'll be flooded throughout the town by morning."

Railroad 7 Feet Under.

The little town of Arby, Mo., a few miles away, also was surrounded by floodwaters and was threatened by the same fate as Cardwell.

The railroad entering Cardwell was under as much as 7 feet of water in some sections, Hardy said. Highways were under 3 to 4 feet.

W. E. Davis, 60-year-old farmer, dropped dead on the porch of his home here tonight as he and his family sought to rescue livestock. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack.

Rebels Cut Off Ship Carrying U.S. War Goods

Nazis Aid Fascist Fleet in Effort to Seize $2,000,000 Cargo.

By the United Press.

Saint Jean de Luz, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 21.— The Spanish rebel navy, aided by German warships, tonight spread a blockade from the French border to Gibraltar in an effort to capture a $2,000,000 cargo of war materials from the United States.

The cargo, consigned to the loyalists from the Vimalert Co., Ltd., of Jersey City, is aboard the Spanish steamer Mar Cantabrico. The ship was halted off Sandy Hook by United States Coast Guard cutters on January 6 while Congress was voting on arms embargo.

The steamer had passed the 3-mile limit, however, before passage of the bill in Washington.

One Day Overdue.

The Mar Cantabrico, which sailed from New York with eight crated airplanes, gas masks and other war materials, was one day overdue at the Biscay coast.

(The Mar Cantabrico was reported to be at Vera Cruz, Mexico, where she arrived a week ago to take on additional arms and munitions. New York port authorities cleared the vessel to Vera Cruz, indicating it will be another ten days or two weeks before it arrives in Spanish waters.)

The Bay of Biscay has been unusually rough, making blockade running easier than a dash through the Straits of Gibraltar and up the Mediterranean coast to Valencia.

German Ships on Guard.

Several German warships were said to be backing up Gen. Franco's Basque fleet of armed trawlers. The 44 ships of Franco's main fleet are guarding the entrance to the Mediterranean.

Neutral naval officers said the chances were 20 to 1 against the freighter getting through Franco's net.

Franco was said to have ordered every ship under his command to halt and search every freighter carrying "suspicious deckloads" regardless of whether the craft flew a Spanish or foreign flag. He believed Capt. Jose Santa Maria might have painted out the Mar Cantabrico's name and substituted another.

Four Air Raids Shake Madrid, Take Huge Toll

uation committee announced, "will be taken from their homes by designated authorities and removd."

Citizens were ordered to assemble at Garcia de Paredes street, designated the center of evacuation administration. To protect unoccupied homes against vandalism, Communists urged authorities to place a special watch.

As the defense junta pushed its evacuation plans, Madrid residents watched a spectacular aerial "dog fight" under cover of a thick mist that gave them relief from the Fascist shelling.

Government planes roared into the air to give battle to insurgent bombing planes after several projectiles had been loosed on the city. The aircraft droned in and out of thick, low-hanging clouds, their machine guns spitting steel, and the Fascist machines finally sped away.

The mist hid targets from insurgent gunners and there was comparative quiet until shortly before dark, when the defenders unlimbered some of their big guns, challenging the attackers to an artillery duel.

At Cerro de Los Angeles, 8½ miles to the south, Socialist militiamen idled in their trenches on the side of the hill from which the town takes its name—"The Hill of Angels"—which the government troops renamed "Red Hill" after they nearly took it from the insurgents.

They made themselves reasonably comfortable, despite cold winds and rain. Some even played football near the entrenchments and others strummed guitars.

(In southern Spain, Fascist planes bombed the port of Malaga, apparently in preparation for an attack on the city by a land force under Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, which has had the assistance of insurgent vessels in its drive from Algeciras.)

(The Leftist administration of the Basque provinces of northern Spain declared in a statement that 14,000 persons had been executed by the Fascists in Navarre Province since the civil war began. It also charged German cruisers with helping to lay mines in Bilbao harbor.

(Manuel Azana, president of the Socialist government, who had been in seclusion at a Catalan convent, reached Valencia to preside over a meeting of the cabinet, which has made its headquarters there since fleeing Madrid.

(Azana, whose departure from Barcelona was understood to have been at the insistence of other government officials, had said he later would inspect the Madrid front.)

Tokyo Cabinet, Jeered in Diet, Is Facing Fall

Dissolution of Houses Only Hope; Leaders Deny Army Domination.

Minister Eiichi Baba shared the representatives' hostility.

Early today Finance Minister Baba, whose record budget, with its unprecedented army and navy appropriations had been an outstanding target for the legislators, said he had expected such opposition.

He said the cabinet must meet to decide its course of action, "but the only alternative seems to be dissolution (of the lower house) or en bloc resignation of the cabinet."

(Dissolution would mean a general election within two months.)

Hamada's attack on cabinet and army took the form of a demand that the military be divorced from the civilian government. He charged that the army interfered in government because it desires a dictatorship.

"Unprecedented national expenditures are leading the nation to financial panic, throwing industry into confusion," declared Hamada. "The diplomacy of the militarists has caused a general deadlock."

Gen. Terauchi, tall, bald and grim, replied angrily. He denied charges of profascism and said the army followed the principle of co-operation between the people and the military. Hamada, he declared, had made "false charges" against the army.

The war minister repeatedly was interrupted by jeers and shouts from the floor. Finally he resumed his seat, his temper obviously aroused.

Demanded "Insult" Be Shown.

Hamada demanded the general cite specific passages in his speech "insulting the army." Excitedly he declared he was a subject of the Emperor, with the backing of 90,000,000 Japanese, that Gen. Terauchi had no cause to warn him.

Admiral Osami Nagano, navy minister, summoned a conference of high naval officers to discuss the navy's attitude toward Hamada's speech.

The stormy lower house session lasted more than five hours.

Arita was greeted with laughter and groans as he attempted to justify the anti-Communist pact concluded with Germany last November. Baba was received with even more hostility as he tried to outline the 1937-38 budget, which totals 3,041,000,000 yen (about $870,000,000), about 32 per cent higher than the current budget, which was a record one.

The government also met hostility in the usually complacent House of Peers. Viscount Chifuyu Watanabe, a leader of the Kenkyukai, largest group in the chamber, warned the cabinet against the evils of dictatorship and fascism.

Storm Moving East Toward Texas Coast

New Orleans, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The United States Weather Bureau today ordered northwest storm warnings for the Texas coast in a bulletin issued at 3 p. m. Central standard time.

A disturbance over the lower Rio Grande Valley is moving eastward and "will be followed by strong northerly winds and much colder weather, with rain tonight and Friday," the bulletin said.

France Ready To Bar Recruits In Spanish War

Premier Blum Set to Act as Soon as Group Decides Control.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 21.—Socialist Premier Leon Blum, armed with unanimous parliamentary approval of his bill to ban French volunteers from Spain, announced tonight he was ready to act at the instant the international nonintervention committee decides on the means of control.

Despite the assertion of Senator Henry Lemery that the Senate was "reduced to the conditions of Hitler's Reichstag," the upper house adopted the measure with no opposition votes and 30 senators abstaining.

LeBrun's Action Awaited.

It now goes to President Albert LeBrun for his signature. It already had won unanimous approval in the Chamber of Deputies.

Under the bill, the government, by decree, can prohibit enlistment of Frenchmen on either side in the Spanish civil war for six months. Persons trying to recruit volunteers can be fined as much as 10,000 francs ($460) and imprisoned six months for the first offense and one year for the second.

Men now in Spain would not be affected.

Blum, in urging unanimous Senate sanction, said he wanted to "show the world France is sincere" in attempting to localize the Spanish struggle.

Alluding to German newspaper comments following upon the chamber's approval of the measure, the premier said:

"The press of a certain country took it unexpectedly as proof of our hypocrisy and bad faith. Decidedly there are judges difficult to satisfy."

I.C.C. Tax Criticism Irks Morgenthau

By the Associated Press.

Informed officials said yesterday that Secretary Morgenthau had protested to President Roosevelt against the Interstate Commerce Commission's public criticism of the tax on undistributed profits.

Disagreement over application of the tax to railroads first came to light last week. At that time Morgenthau and chairman Carroll Miller, of the Commission, discussed the matter with Mr. Roosevelt.

Miller, in line with policy expressed in the commission's annual report, contended the law should be amended to exempt certain financially weak railroads. Morgenthau did not agree.

Well-posted persons said Morgenthau's protest to the President, written prior o the conference last week, questioned the propriety of the Commission attacking an Administration tax measure. The Treasury chief was said to have argued that any recommendations for changes should be made by executive departments.

Nazi Program For Unification Opens Jan. 30

Germany Will Be Divided Into Natural Units Under Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 21.—Unification of Germany, with elimination of old state lines, will get its initial push at the Reichstag session January 30, a high official said today.

Two cabinet decrees to start the new program—to be completed in four years in conjunction with the end of Germany's four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency—will be announced when the parliament reconvenes, the official declared.

Specifically, the two measures would make every government official a federal employe, athough his functions might be confined to his state, and would establish new geographical lines to combine districts which have been incorrectly separated.

Within four years, the official sad, Germany will be rearranged by districts based on similarity of origin, dialect and customs in the population, and the old state lines will be eliminated completely.

At that time, Col.-Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, who is director of the four-year economic plan, is to become Reichschancellor, the government representative said.

(For some time there have been reports in various sources that Adolf Hitler soon would give Goering the post of administrative head of Germany, with Hitler only the title of "Fuehrer"—leader.)

Authoritative sources indicated Hitler, in his address at the Reichstag session, might reply to the address of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the House of Commons Tuesday, in which he asserted Germany's actions could decide Europe's future.

Peace at home and abroad will be Hitler's theme, his intimates said.

Whether the Reichstag also would hear a pronouncement on Germany's wish for colonies was declared "more than doubtful" by a high official.

Beware The Cough
From a common cold
That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Copeland Bill Protest Causes Jailing of 56

Striking Seamen Held in Norfolk for 'Failing to Move On.'

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Jan. 21.—A mass protest against the Copeland bill, which seamen claim is "breaking" the maritime strike, landed 56 strikers before a special session of police court today and left them tenants, overnight at least, of the city jail.

Every police radio car in the city was dispatched to the sea service bureau of the United States Shipping Board this morning, where the 56 men were arrested on a police charge of "failing to move on."

At 3:30 p. m. Justice Clyde H. Jacob in police court fined each $5 and on motion of Defense Attorney Ernest S. Merrill fixed appeal bonds at $25.

Later, Attorney Merrill informed Judge R. B. Spindle, jr., in corporation court he could not post the bond and asked thair release under a recognizance bond, but Judge Spindle continued the hearing until tomorrow morning.

As a result, the 56 strikers went to the city jail.

The wholesale arrest came on orders from Col. Charles B. Borland, director of public safety and chief of police, who early in the strike reached an agreement with strike leaders that no more than four pickets would be allowed at one place at any time.

Federal Action Sought.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.—Government labor conciliators declared flatly tonight further Federal action would be necessary to end the maritime strike.

They made such a report to Secretary of Labor Perkins while San Francisco's Mayor Angelo J. Rossi called a conference tomorrow of State, city, and county authorities to formulate demands that the Government intevene.

With the tie-up in its eighty-fourth day the conciliators, E. P. Marsh and E. H. Fitzgerald, said negotiations were "nearly at an end and could not result in complete agreements."

"We feel," said their statement, "that public interest is paramount and that some action toward a speedy settlement of the disastrous controversy must be taken * * *"

Eastern Seamen to End Strike.

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Twelve hundred striking seamen early today voted to end the three-month insurgent Eastern maritime strike, subject to ratification by the Pacific Coast maritime council and strikers in Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Two-Tenths of 1% Alcohol 'In Blood' And One Is Drunk

One is drunk, scientifically speaking, if he has as little as two-tenths of one per cent of alcohol in his blood.

This statement was made yesterday by Dr. Thorne M. Carpenter, of the Carnegie Institution, who said that by analysis of a single drop of blood it is possible to determine how much alcohol a person has consumed.

Then, he pointed out, it can be stated definitely whether he has crossed the line between sobriety and intoxication. Although scientists differ somewhat as to the exact quantity of alcohol necessary to render a person irresponsible, it is generally agreed that two-tenths of one per cent in the blood is sufficient.

Ordinarily, he added, less than a pint of whiskey would provide that amount.

Two Men Injured In Crashes Here

William M. Pierce, 57, of Savannah, Ga., who is staying in Washington at 848 Delafield place northwest, was injured seriously late last night when he was struck by an automobile, driven, police said, by Sidney Gerstenfeld, 20, of the 300 block, Central avenue, Capitol Heights, Md.

Physicians at Garfield Hospital, where Pierce was taken after the accident, said he had suffered compound fractures of his left leg and left arm and a possible skull fracture. Police were holding Gerstenfeld pending the outcome of the victim's injuries.

When his automobile struck a parked truck in the 2600 block, Nichols street southeast, David M. Shaw, of 518 Raleigh street southeast, suffered possible concussion of the brain and internal injuries. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where physicians siad his condition was serious.

Schacht, 60 Today, Engaged in Duties

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP).—Hjalmar Schacht, Hitler's acting minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, will celebrate his sixtieth birthday tomorrow.

At an age at which many men hope to retire, the energetic Dr. Schacht is still so much in the active foreground of events that his resignation or dismissal would be a severe jolt, German businessmen said.

And that, despite the fact his resignation or dismissal has been rumored periodically and expected in well-informed quarters for more than a year.

Zoning Main Highways Proposed to Engineers

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Zoning of main highways to keep "honkey tonks" and "mushroom growths" away from the roads was recommended to the American Society of Civil Engineers today.

The society, at its eighty-fourth annual meeting, also heard an opinion that wider highways were more dangerous than two-lane roads.

Double Indemnity Paid.

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP).—The New York Life Insurance Co. filed a bill of interpleader in Federal Court today in which it admitted liability of $9,391.85 under a double indemnity $5,000 insurance policy on the life of Joseph W. Bolton, slain last June 15 by his wife.

$40,000 Wiped Off Overdraft Against Montgomery County

Codd, State Road's Auditor, Assures Group That Much Will Be Taken Off; $150,000 More Sought by Representatives.

Montgomery County representatives returned from a five-hour conference yesterday with William A. Codd, auditor for the Maryland State roads commission, with assurance that at least $40,000 of the overdraft claimed by the State roads commission would be cleaned from the slate.

The county representatives felt that about $80,000 had been accounted for but were certain of $40,000. They again will go to Baltimore to argue on approximately $150,000 more that the county claims should be charged to the roads commission.

The alleged overdraft had reached nearly $300,000 when the State roads commission finally finished its search through old records but payments made at the expense of road upkeep in the county last year has brought this to about $180,000. This will be reduced further if the items agreed on yesterday are allowed by the roads commission and may be wiped out entirely if the county contention that the State should pay the $100,000 construction costs of the underpass under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks and the item of $23,000 expended for resurfacing Wisconsin avenue is upheld by the roads commission members.

Frank H. Karn, president of the Montgomery County board of commissioners; Paul M. Coughlan, county commissioner for the Silver Spring District; John McDonald, county engineer; members of the accounting firm of Wooden and Benson, who made the audit for the county, and Albert M. Boulc, counsel to the Montgomery County commissioners, represented the county at the conference with Codd yesterday.

The conference lasted from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. without an intermission for lunch.

Two additional classrooms for the Rockville Elementary School and proper treatment of the school grounds were urged in a resolution adopted yesterday by the Parent-Teacher Association of Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville.

Miss Marjorie Billows, supervisor of art of the county schools, and Miss Jessie Rowdybush, teacher of art at Richard Montgomery High, addressed the meeting. Attendance banners were awarded to Mrs. Margaretta Voght's room in the high school and Mrs. Lucy Barnsley's room for the elementary school for having the largest number of parents in attendance. A shower for the new cafeteria of the elementary school will be held at the February meeting which will be held in the elementary school.

The annual father and son banquet of the Woodside M. E. Church will be held today at 6:30 p. m. at the church auditorium. Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, will be the speaker. The toastmaster will be Dr. Howard D. Dozier of North Woodside.

James Hepbron, of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Division, and Harry Greenstein former chairman of the Board of State Aid and Charities and an official of the Hebrew Charities of Baltimore, will be speakers at an open meeting of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters today at 2:30 p. m. The session will be held in the commissioners hearing room of the Rockville courthouse. Greenstein will discuss special legislation pending before the Maryland General Assembly while prison legislation to be considered by the assembly will be outlined by Mr. Hepbron. A short business meeting at 2 p. m., will precede the speaking program. Several bills pending before the Legislature of particular interest to women will be discussed. Mrs. Raymond Clapper of Chevy Chase, president, will preside.

D. C. Hospital Named in Suit For $50,000

Dr. Oliver Cox Asserts Emergency Officials Barred Patients.

Dr. Oliver C. Cox, 4616 Argyle terrace northwest, yesterday in District Court brought suit against the Emergency Hospital, the members of its board of directors, and the executive staff because, he asserted, his surgical patients were barred from the hospital without cause or without any charge or insinuation against him.

The physician, through Attorneys Gardiner & Gardiner, and James M. Earnest, said that since last August 7, up to and including the filing of the suit, he had been denied the hospital's "courtesy list," members of which receive the hospital's facilities.

Dr. Cox named as defendants in a $50,000 damage suit, the following physicians: Dr. James F. Mitchell, Dr. John H. Lyons, H. L. Derner, H. A. Fowler, Edward R. Gookin, Joseph Kreiselman, H. M. Kaufman, G. W. Leadbetter, A. B. Moore, William B. Mason and A. R. Shands. In addition, Karl W. Korby, William F. Gude and George White, who compose the rest of the directors staff, were named.

The physician said that since he had evolved his "highly successful" methods of surgical work, he had performed 3,228 appendectomies, of which 2,013 were acute, and in 361 of which there was a rupture. He said the mortality among his patients had been less than four-fifth of one per cent.

Although the Emergency Hospital has stricken his name from the "courtesy list" all other hospitals included it, he said, and since the date when the omission was made, he has performed 442 operations. The suit asks an injunction to restrain the omission from the list and damages from those who allegedly ordered the exclusion.

Mercersburg Academy Debate Teams Chosen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mercersburg, Pa., Jan. 21.—Eight members of the school who will participate in the annual intersociety debate at the Mercersburg Academy here were selected yesterday. The debate climaxes the mid-winter activities at the academy and will be held between the Washington Irving and John Marshall literary societies on February 20.

Press Agents Use New Court Building As a Movie Screen

The $10,000,000 United States Supreme Court Building was transformed into a motion picture projection screen last night by two enthusiastic Hollywood press agents.

Horrified Supreme Court guards who had become convinced that the greatest of all indignities was perpetrated on them when a red flag was nailed to the top of the court flagpole a year ago, became speechless when they found huge and eerie figures of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin moving across the marble facade.

Ninth Precinct policemen were called to talk for the Supreme Court guards. They gave a parking ticket to the driver of the movie truck and told the press agents they could argue their constitutional rights to publicize the film "Servants of the People" with, but not on, the Supreme Court. The film will have its premier in Washington tonight.

School Board Given Dinner At Alexandria

Economics Class Honors Members With Meal in Cafeteria.

Members of the Alexandria School Board, C. Page Waller, chairman, and members of the Alexandria City Council were entertained at dinner last night by the home economics class of the George Washington High School, in the school cafeteria, with Miss Clara Humphreys in charge. The dinner was prepared and served by members of the class.

City Manager E. C. Dunn will go to Richmond this week to ascertain if it is possible to secure a PWA loan to build an addition to the high school. Superintendent of Schools T. C. Williams having reported to the council that the present capacity is inadequate. Present enrollment is 1,207 pupils, and this number is 300 in excess of the number for the class rooms, permitted by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools.

Fitzgerald Council No. 459, Knights of Columbus, will hold an entertainment tomorrow night for the observance of Greater K. of C. night, at the home, St. Asaph and Cameron streets. Wives and daughters of the members will be special guests at the gathering.

Lawrence W. Corbett will install the recently elected officers of the council on Wednesday, January 27.

Thomas Tomlin, 26 years old, giving his address as Washington and Montgomery streets was fined $35 and costs on a charge of reckless driving, yesterday morning in police court, by Judge James Reece Duncan. He was taken in custody at the South end of the highway bridge, after being chased by Corporals Ellmore and Snoots from the 600 block of North Washington street to the bridge. Tomlin was driving at the rate of 70 miles an hour, the officers stated.

The funeral of Mrs. Haney, wife of Clinton Haney, who died Tuesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Annie Robey, 209 Wolfe street, will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Cunningham funeral home, 809 Cameron street. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The installation of officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Engine Company No. 5, Alexandria Fire Department, was held Wednesday night by Mrs. C. B. Jewell, installing officer. The officers are Mrs. Katie Shaw, president, succeeding Mrs. Leola Zimmerman; Miss Marian Swan, vice president; Miss Libby Shaw, secretary; Miss Grave Davis, assistant secretary; Miss Margaret Shaw, treasurer, and Mrs. Betty Entwisle, chaplain.

The district quarterly meeting of the Free Methodist Church was opened last night and services will be held at 10:30 a. m., and 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. through Sunday. The Rev. J. M. Jennings is in charge of the meetings, and the local pastor, the Rev. L. R. Giuer, extends a welcome to all visitors.

The Alexandria Chapter of the Order of De Molay will celebrate the fourth anniversary of their organization on Friday with a dinner and dance at the George Mason Hotel. Elmer G. Ridgely, assisted by all past master councilors, is chairman of arrangements.

Woman Returns to Work After 5-Day Hiccoughs

Miss Plante, racked intermittently by spasms from January 10 to January 15, attributed her cure to antispasmodic drugs, prescribed by her physician, Dr. Michael J. Kranichuck. The doctor had prescribed two standard U. S. pharmacopeia formulas, Hoffman's anodyne and benzyl benzoate.

Prince Georges Board Suspends Liquor License

Mt. Rainier Man Charged With Not Serving Regular Meals.

Charges that he failed to serve regular meals as required by law yesterday resulted in the temporary suspension of the liquor license of Carrol N. Klein, proprietor of Klein's Tavern, Mount Rainier, Md.

The order, issued by the Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners at Upper Marlboro, will become effective January 25 and will last until February 11.

Granting of Klein's license last fall by the State liquor board after the county board had refused precipitated a bitter fight between wet and dry forces in Mount Rainier.

Falling in their efforts to have the license revoked, dry leaders last Monday secured the town council's approval of a proposed bill for a liquor referendum. The bill provides for a popular vote to be held prior to May 1, on whether or not sale of alcoholic beverages shall be allowed in the town limits. Consent of the Legislature, now in session at Annapolis, will have to be secured before the vote may be conducted.

License Suspended.

The board also suspended the license of Peter Cokinos, proprietor of the Hollywood Inn, near Camp Springs. The order will be effective January 25 to February 11. Inspector E. Bernard Sweeney charged Cokinos with allowing beer to be sold after 2 a. m. and to intoxicated persons.

The beer license of Bartram L. Biggs for his establishment near Clinton was suspended indefinitely. Inspector Sweeney complained that Biggs was not the actual owner of the place.

The application of Louis Rosenfield, Colmar Manor, for a license to sell beer and light wines was approved. Joseph King, Capitol Heights, was refused a license for off-sale, beer, wine and liquor.

Rescue Squad Funds Asked.

Capt. Clarence Gasch of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad yesterday appealed for donations of money, blankets and bandage material.

Declaring that the rescue unit's bank balance was only $200 and that it owed $500 for a new ambulance chassis, Capt. Gasch said:

"What we want to impress upon the public is that these ambulances are not county ambulances and not one of our men receive a cent for their services."

Last year, Capt. Gasch said, the unit purchased a new ambulance costing $2,800 and a new chassis for $537. However, he said, the demand is now becoming greater than the supply of money for the maintenance of these ambulances.

Chief items in the operating expenses for the unit, he said, were $30 a month for gasoline, $20 for medicine and $120 a year for repairs.

A total of 915 calls were answered by the Bladensburg unit last year, he said. Of these, 523 were emergencies and 390 sick calls. The average distance each patient wss carried amounted to 14¼ miles.

Three Arraigned Today.

The three young coal truckers from Glen Burnie who tried unsuccessfully to hold up and rob the Bank of Brandywine early last month will be arraigned today before Judge Joseph C. Mattingly in Upper Marlboro.

The youths are John R. Mason, jr., 21; Carl Harmon, 20, and Thomas Jack Long, 19. They have been in the Marlboro Jail since several days after the thwarted holdup on charges of attempted robbery.

The would-be bank robbers fled empty-handed when William T. McPherson, 65-year-old cashier, defied a command to "stick 'em up" and sounded the burglar alarm. One of the bandits, however, fired a shot which struck the cashier in the leg, inflicting a minor wound.

Murphy Ball Chairman.

Lieut. Thomas F. Murphy, commander of Headquarters Company of the National Guard, has been appointed general chairman of the President's Birthday Ball committee at Laurel. A dance will be held January 30 in the Laurel Armory to raise funds to combat infantile paralysis.

In accordance with the plan approved by President Roosevelt, 70 per cent of the proceeds of the ball will be devoted to infantile paralysis work in the community and 30 per cent will go to the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation Fund.

Co-operative Views Contrast in Debate

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Consumers' co-operatives contrastingly were pictured in a national broadcast debate tonight as a threat to workers' wages and farm incomes and a solution for depressions and a preventative of wars.

J. Frank Grimes, president of the Independent Grocers Alliance of America, said they may lead to "a complete change in the type of Government which we now call America."

Taking issue with this view, Murray D. Lincoln, of Columbus, Ohio, director of the Ohio Farm Bureau, attacked what he called "ill-advised attempts to smear the co-operative movement with the stigma of radicalism, communism and socialism."

Six-Ton Boulder, Loosed by Deluge, Smashes Building

Portsmouth, Ohio, Jan. 21 (AP).—A huge boulder estimated to weigh six tons, loosened by the heavy rains which brought flood conditions, rolled 150 feet down a hill today and crashed into an apartment house at suburban New Boston, injuring one woman and endangering the lives of the members of eight families.

The boulder tore out one entire wall of the building, which was occupied by 30 persons. Mrs. William Arrowood, 42, was knocked unconscious but her condition was reported later as not serious.

Virginia Gas Tax Near $16,000,000

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—The State of Virginia collected $15,849,615.36 in gasoline taxes during the calendar year 1936, a gain of $1,715,773.09 over the 1935 figure, John Q. Rhodes, jr., director of the State division of motor vehicles, reported today.

Rhodes said the total gas-tax return exceeded budget estimates by $216,000.

Harrison Herd Leads Fairfax In Butterfat

Average Milk Production for Association 697 Pounds.

The report of Fairfax County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for the month of December shows there were 22 herds with 734 cows, 94 of them dry, on test.

The average milk production for the association was 697 pounds, and the average butterfat production, 28.85 pounds. Sixteen cows were sold for beef, and 2 for dairy purposes. One hundred and sixty-seven cows averaged 40 pounds of butterfat.

THE 1936 DISTRICT C.P.A. EXAMINATIONS

Of the ten successful candidates in the November examinations five were graduates of this school. Likewise, in the spring 1936 examinations more Benjamin Franklin graduates were successful than graduates of the prescribed accounting course of any other school. Moreover, this is true for the entire past ten year period. ☆ ☆ But the primary purpose of the Pace Courses—taught in this school—is to train students to become leaders in the accounting profession. # Welfare Load Declines 30% From 1935 Top

11 Pct. of Population Still Gets U. S. Aid, Survey Shows.

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's relief load has dropped nearly 30 per cent from the peak of more than 5,300,000 families and single persons in January, 1935.

This was disclosed yesterday in a new Federal survey compiled by Emerson Ross and T. E. Whiting, statistical experts in the Works Progress Administration.

Simultaneously, Treasury figures indicated since 1932 about $10,000,000,000 of Federal funds has been spent under the heading "Recovery and Relief."

The Ross survey showed the "net number of relief persons" in the peak month of January two years ago was about 16 per cent of the total population. His latest adjustments carried the statistics to September of last year, when close to 3,500,000 families and single persons were receiving Federal relief money. This was about 11 per cent of the population. Isolated figures compiled by the Works Progress Administration reflect a further downward trend since then and indicate that perhaps less than 3,000,000 family heads and individuals now are drawing checks from Federal relief pay windows.

The WPA statistical experts have estimated the average relief recipient probably shares his income with three other persons. On that basis between 20,000,000 and 21,000,000 persons were "on relief" at the peak, and less than 12,000,000 now are dependent on Federal emergency spending.

As for the cost of relief, the Federal expenditures began with $300,000,000 delivered to the States by the Reconstruction Corporation in 1932. The next year the Civil Works Program took $802,000,000.

From May in the same year through November 30, 1936, the Emergency Relief Administration made more than $3,000,000,000 available to the States.

Convicted Forger, Girl Facing Murder Trial Marry After Meeting in Cell Block of Hopewell Lockup.

By the Associated Press.

Hopewell, Va., Jan. 21.—He was a convicted forger and she was awaiting trial for the slaying of her brother-in-law. Their cells adjoined in the city jail here where he was serving his sentence and she awaiting trial. Naturally, they struck an acquaintance.

It began last summer when 18-year-old Kathleen Phelps, the girl who shot her brother-in-law as the aftermath of "a date with him on a bet," was put in the jail. The girl said her brother-in-law had attacked her at their home in a jealous rage because she received attention from another man.

Police put her in a cell next to one occupied by C. P. Abernathy, of Richmond, who was in jail because he signed the wrong signature to a check.

Kathleen told him about her life. He told her about his. They exchanged intimate notes, held hands through the front bars, fell in love.

The girl was tried, convicted and sentenced to five years in prison. But the court set aside the verdict and ordered that she be given a second trial. She went back to the jail, was placed in the same cell.

On Christmas Day the court released Abernathy and the two were separated by his freedom. But a week later Kathleen was released in bail to await her second trial set for February 10.

Today the girl wrote to a Hopewell friend that she and Abernathy were married on January 12 at Williamston, N. C. They are honeymooning in Washington.

Communist Paper, Before Trial, Hints 17 to Be Executed

Moscow, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The Communist party organ Pravda intimated today that Karl Radek, internationally known Soviet publicist, and 16 Bolshevks who go on trial with him Saturdty, will be shot.

Asserting that the wizened, humorous little journalist and his associates plotted with foreign powers to war on the Soviet government, Pravda said:

"The Proletarian Court will pay them in full measure for their low treason to the motherland."

Competent observers believed the phrase indicated that the fate of Radek and his co-defendants has been determined—and that it will be death.

Standard Laws On Crime Asked By State Group

Council Urged to Adopt Four-Point Program to Help Police.

The Council of State Governments, opening its third general assembly, will be asked today to campaign for enactment by the States of four uniform laws to accelerate the war on crime.

Culminating 15 months of intensive research, the council's interstate commission on crime late yesterday voted to submit the four-point program to the full assembly, comprising nearly 300 executives and legislators from 44 States.

The commission's recommendations, whose adoption by the council is virtually certain, are for State passage of model laws which would:

Eliminate the confusion, red tape and other handicaps which hinder the extradition of fugitives.

Secure the attendance of persons wanted as witnesses in criminal proceedings being carried on in another State.

Authorize other States to enter into compacts under which they agree to supervise parolees from other States on a mutual service basis.

In a discussion on crime prevention, Judge Richard Hartshorne, chairman of the interstate commission on crime, urged institution of a study to determine the feasibility of setting up junior CCC camps for wayward boys between the ages of 9 and 16.

CCC Experiment Cited.

The speaker, who sits in the Essex County (N. J.) Court of Common Pleas, pointed out that he has placed many young men on probation with the understanding that they shall enroll in CCC camps. In every instance, he declared, the experiment has been successful.

"If camp life can rehabilitate young men above 17, why should it not be tried for boys under that age who are too young to enter the CCC and who are not 'bad' enough to be locked up in reformatories?" the judge asked.

The four model laws drafted by the commission, some of which already are on the statute books of several States, climax a period of research begun in October, 1935, and in which outstanding faculty members of law schools from coast to coast assisted.

All four have been gone over with fine-tooth combs, said Judge Hartshorne, to make them constitutional, workable and expedient.

At a meeting of the interstate commission on conflicting taxation, P. E. Ward, member of the Ohio House of Representatives, said the public must be brought to realize it must pay for governmental services just as it pays for private services.

Citizens demand the conveniences made possible by municipal, State and Federal governments, but balk at paying for them through taxation, Ward said.

The Council of State Governments will convene at 9:30 o'clock this morning, with Paul V. McNutt, former Governor of Indiana, presiding. He is president of the council.

Speakers this morning will be Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Board and a former president of the council.

Brownlow to Speak.

Tonight's banquet at the Mayflower, where the meeting is being held, will be addressed by Louis Brownlow, chairman of the President's Committee on Administrative Management; City Manager Clarence A. Dykstra, of Cincinnati, a member of the Jacobs committee which recently reported on District-United States fiscal relations, and Henry W. Toll, executive director of the council.

A message from President Roosevelt will be read at the dinner.

New, Speedy Local Anesthetic Reduces Danger of Bleeding

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—A new, fast-working local anesthetic, which reduces danger of bleeding, was announced today in Science, official journal of American scientists.

The anesthetic is a new, artificially-made chemical. It combines, in experiments on animals, the announcement states, the chemical effects of novocaine and epinephrine. It has not yet been used on human beings.

The announcement was made by Raymond L. Osborne, M. D., of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. The idea of the anesthetic, he explained, is to constrict the blood vessels, so that the pain-killing part of the drug is not washed away, and the anesthetic effect can last longer.

In medical practice, this construction of blood vessels has been accomplished with epinephrine, or adrenalin. But these drugs, Dr. Osborne states, cause nervousness in some persons.

In operation the epinephrine is frequently used to reduce bleeding. The artificially-made local anesthetics, he points out, usually have tended to increase bleeding. Animal tests of the new pain killer have been made with good results on nerves, eyes, internal and external organs, and on blood pressure. Anesthesia was produced definitely within one minute.

The new substance is named epicaine and its chemical structure given as alpha beta alphaethanonehydrochloride. The medical profession already has in use more than 30 local anesthetics. Most of them are made by synthetic chemistry.

Glass Shortage Closes Detroit Auto Factories

Four Chrysler Units Shut Down Despite Near Strike Accord.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 21.—Despite prospective settlement of glass industry strikes, the shortage of that product affected motor car manufacturing lines tonight.

Chrysler Corporation closed the Detroit plants of its four divisions—Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler—until Monday announcing that present sources were unable to supply sufficient glass to meet requirements of the five-day production week that has been in effect since January 1. Approximately 50,000 workers were affected.

Motor industry observers said they expected settlement of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass strike to open the way for replenishment of Chrysler and some other manufacturers' supplies by week after next.

Charges Company Hedging.

At Pittsburgh Glen W. McCabe, president of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, made a charge, denied by the company, that Libby-Owens-Ford at Toledo was "hedging" on a settlement of strikes affecting its 7,000 employes "using the argument that General Motors is down flat, that General Motors is their big customer and that they do not need the glass anyway."

The glass workers and the United Automobile Workers of America, whose strikes have resulted in idleness of 135,000 General Motors employes, have a "joint council" for discussion of strike moves. Both are members of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Agreement of General Motors officials, reported by Secretary Perkins at Washington today, not to negotiate with any group other than the U. A. W. A. for the time being, was regarded here as a possible aid to resumption of negotiations between corporation and union.

Cotton Association Attacked in South

New Orleans, Jan. 21 (AP).—Ben J. Williams, president of the Southern Shippers Association, assailed the American Cotton Co-operative Association here tonight, charging it "stands revealed as a Government financed cotton firm, controlled by an inter-related oligarchy of officials drawing high salaries."

Williams said his statement was prompted by a resolution adopted by Co-operative Association leaders yesterday that any further investigation of cotton marketing include private cotton firms and cotton exchanges.

Williams asserted statements "made by Co-operative officials are in the nature of generalities which are in direct conflict with the facts developed by the McKellar hearing in Memphis in 1935."

Hard-Boiled Collector Declared Outmoded

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The hard-boiled bill collector was described as outmoded to the convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association today.

"More humane and modern methods" in reminding a customer of his obligation were prescribed by Joseph H. Fowler, collection manager of the Jordan-Marsh Co., Boston.

WPA, NYA and CCC Aid Flood Sufferers

With more than 7,000 families homeless as a result of floods in six States, over 4,000 Works Progress Administration workers, NYA youths and CCC enrollees are engaged in rescue work and in efforts to prevent further flood damage, it was announced yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator.

Margaret R. Burke Buried.

President Last Hope as Peace Plans in Auto Strike Collapse

Lewis declared the union was maintaining its refusal to withdraw "stay-in" strikers from two General Motors plants in Flint, Mich., the cause of the breakdown of negotiations between the company and the union last Monday. The company held the union had agreed to withdraw the strikers from all five plants involved. The union contended that after it had evacuated three of the plants it learned that General Motors was planning to discuss collective bargaining with another organization, the Flint Alliance, after the negotiations with the union. It charged such plans were a breach of faith. The grim peace efforts of Government officials and Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan had since been devoted to bringing about a resumption of those negotiations.

To Start on Ford, Chrysler.

Lewis also declared at his press conference that "as soon as General Motors signs up I expect Mr. Henry Ford and Mr. Walter Chrysler to do a little collective bargaining." The remark has been heard frequently that Lewis would not "tackle" the Ford "buzz saw," since, it was contended, Ford probably would "promptly shut down" and wait until the men were willing to return to work.

The C. I. O. leader called the Flint Alliance episode "the most stupendous double-cross in the history of industrial relations." He declared the union would not place itself "within the power of General Motors to double-cross us again." He said evacuating the plants would mean disarming the union while the company kept its "arms," its "detectives, tear gas, John Doe warrants and machine guns." He declared the union was ready to negotiate at once, under the status quo, but the company insisted on evacuation of the plants.

Congressional Investigation.

He declared a resolution calling for a Congressional investigation of General Motors and its financial set-up was ready for introduction.

Stating there would be "no half-baked compromise in automobiles or steel," another industry he intends to organize, Lewis declared:

"This is no time for neutrality or pussyfooting."

Asked if he considered this was the proper time for the President to intervene he replied:

"That's up to the President, but labor intervened for him."

He said there had been no request for intervention.

Competitors Benefit.

He declared the strike "was never in better condition," or the determination greater, that settlement of the glass strike helps General Motors' competitors, that salesmen for G. M. C. are going over to competitors, and that while "financial interests in the steel industry insist that General Motors fight it out," he was sure "they can't spend enough" to defeat the union.

At Sloan's conference, he was surrounded by William S. Knudsen, Donaldson Brown, and John Thomas Smith, vice presidents.

Sloan, announcing the company officials had decided to leave the Capital after seeing a report of Lewis' remarks, was asked what part of the statement caused the action. Later a reply was given which reporters were permitted to use. It was to the effect that "it is plain from Mr. Lewis' statement it would be impossible to get together on the one condition precedent to reopening negotiations; that is getting the strikers out of the plants."

Must Find Solution.

"It is a terrible thing," Sloan said, "to keep 200,000 men out of work. We must find a way to get them back to work. We are working most earnestly to find a solution of this most difficult problem."

He said that he had planned to explore the suggestions developed at the General Motors conference with Secretary Perkins, but after seeing the Lewis statement he felt "it was useless at this time to discuss further the ideas we had."

He denied charges that the company had sought to prevent an election under Labor Relations Board direction, to determine the bargaining agent by which the employes chose to be represented.

Sloan declared the company held it "unreasonable" to ask them to negotiate with a group "in illegal possession of our plants."

Any Worker Free to Join.

Asked if General Motors is opposed to unionization of employes, he said that any individual worker is permitted to act independently or can join any group, that there can be as many groups as seems desirable, and the company will deal with each. He said that had been the policy since August, 1934.

The company officials declared they had had to remove guards from plants held by the strikers, and that no one was there to represent the company. The plants had been "seized," it was contended.

Asked how the company planned now to get the strikers to leave, Smith said he was "sure their responsible leaders will convince them they should."

The Lansing agreement by which negotiations with the union were to be started last Monday was killed by the Lewis statement, it was asserted.

160,000 Cars Behind.

The company officials said they were 160,000 cars behind schedule, due to the strike, but declared they chose rather to "think of the $1,000,000 a day in wages lost to the employes."

Situation "Vital."

They declared the situation "very vital" to hundreds of thousands of persons and many communities. They held they had "gone very far" in the Lansing agreement not to remove machinery from the plants or attempt to operate, in order to get the strikers to leave the property while negotiations were under way.

Sloan denied Lewis' charge that there was a "united front" of financial and industrial interests.

"There is no such concerted action at all," he said. "In General Motors we operate independently. We run our business as we think it should be run. And we make our own decisions."

He said he had notified Secretary Perkins of the decision to leave, and said he was "very grateful to Miss Perkins and Gov. Murphy for their efforts."

Later it was said at Miss Perkins' office that she had "no comment" on the breakdown of all the efforts of the past four days.

War Manuscript Of Washington Sold at Auction

Letter by Jefferson Davis Also Is Included in Rare Collection.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—A letter in which George Washington expressed his readiness to give up the Revolutionary War written only six months before peace articles were signed in Paris, was sold for $160 today in one of the biggest and most unusual auctions of rare manuscripts and books ever held.

For two days collections from four notable private libraries were knocked down in a public sale at the American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, netting $18,795.50. Previous minimum estimates of art dealers were that the 387 lots, from sets of worm-eaten books to yellowed letters, would bring at least twice that amount.

Buyers of the Washington letter, of another by President Jefferson Davis of the Confederacy, denying he was captured in women's clothes, which brought $225, and of a manuscript record of the Senate of Genoa in Christopher Columbus' time, sold for $200, were not disclosed.

Washington's 750-page letter, written by an aide-de-camp on May 8, 1782, was apparently addressed to Gov. Trumbull of Connecticut. It said in part:

"But if the States will not impose, or do not collect and apply taxes for support of the war, the sooner we make terms the better—the longer we continue a feeble and inffectual war, the greater will be our distress at the hour of submission. * * *

"While acting in my military capacity, I am sensible of the impropriety of stepping into the line of civil polity, my anxiety for the general good, and an earnest desire to bring this long protracted war to happy issue (when I hope to retire to that peaceful state of domestic pleasure, from which the call of my country has brought me to take an active part, and to which I most ardently wish a speedy return) I hope will furnish my excuse with your excellency * * *"

Saved by His Wife.

Davis' letter, written to the Rev. W. M. Green, said:

"When ordered to 'halt,' I dropped the water-proof cloak and shawl from my shoulders, and advanced toward the man who ordered me to halt, in the identical cloth I put on for the purpose of having this photograph taken * * *. My good wife, seeing the cavalry man drop his carbine to fire at me, ran up behind me and threw her arms around my neck to stop me. My purpose was thus thwarted and saying 'God's will be done' I turned to lead her back to her tent * * *

"A soldier from Maine published a statement in contradiction of the vile story of my being disguised in female dress * * *"

Regulations Set For Cleaning Firm

Baltimore, Jan. 21 (AP).—Federal Judge William C. Coleman laid down a number of stipulations today under which Bornot, Inc., of Philadelphia, is to operate the Footers Dye and Cleaning Works at Cumberland.

A committee of employes told Judge Coleman at a hearing that the Bornot Co. had discharged a number of employes and had reduced the amount of work done at the Cumberland plant.

Gold Inaugural Medal To Be Given President

A limited number of the Inaugural medals designed by Joseph Anthony Atchison, Washington sculptor, for the second Inauguration of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner, are still available, according to announcement yesterday of Robert W. Woolley, chairman of the Inaugural medals and souvenirs committee.

Only 1,000 of the 1937 Inaugural medals were cast and the die has been destroyed. Two of the medals were executed in gold and will be presented to President Roosevelt and to Vice President Garner.

The Director Of Prisons.

President Roosevelt's "sincere regret that the Administration is to be deprived of the fine public service" rendered by Sanford Bates will be shared by everyone familiar with his achievements as director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons. The influence of Mr. Bates on the American penal system cannot be summarized in a few words. But some idea of his contribution to this much-neglected phase of governmental service can be gained from the fact that under his skillful direction the management of prisons has become a truly scientific occupation.

Mr. Bates was "discovered" by Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, brought to Washington by President Hoover and continued in service under President Roosevelt. This continuity is itself a tribute to his ability and professional attitude. During his eight years in Washington that attitude has become the rule in the Federal penal system. All the personnel of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, except the director, assistant director and the parole board, now hold their jobs on a permanent "career" basis.

In practice the position of director, too, is regarded as a professional job to be filled by the most competent executive available within the bureau. James V. Bennett, the new director, has been his predecessor's right-hand man. His appointment was a most significant recognition of the high personnel standards inaugurated by Mr. Bates.

The professionalization of the bureau's personnel system stands out conspicuously at the moment. But it is only one of many improvements inaugurated by Mr. Bates. He put the Federal parole system on a sound footing and greatly extended its operations. He abolished special privileges in the prison system, instituted humane discipline and opened new opportunities to prisoners through educational, library and vocational guidance facilities. Thanks to his foresight, the prison system is now more satisfactorily operated than ever before, even though the retiring director would be the first to agree that ample room remains for further improvement.

Having built up an efficient organization, and set a precedent of intelligent as well as faithful service, Mr. Bates is making an entirely logical transition when he steps out to become executive director of the Boys Club of America. His efforts are shifting from the rehabilitation of prisoners to the prevention of crime, a subject in which he has always been keenly interested. If he is equally successful in this field, his services may be of even greater value to the country than his good work in the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Continuous Discharge Books.

There is no reason to believe that the "continuous discharge books," against which striking seamen demonstrated here this week, are fundamentally undesirable because they appear to have been employed as a means of blacklisting active union men. The trouble, as noted by Secretary Perkins, seems to lie in the abuse rather than the use of this provision of the Copeland act.

Of course, any device which identifies an employe may conceivably be used to his detriment. But many seamen have for years been struggling to obtain the protection afforded by use of the continuous discharge book. The dangers made possible by the traffic in fake discharge papers are notorious. By such means qualified sailors may be displaced by incompetents with resultant jeopardy to the safety of passengers and crew alike. And strikes may also be broken more easily when a supply of unskilled labor can be recruited without too close inquiry into the authenticity of the employment records of the crew.

For all these reasons there was general satisfaction over the passage of the law providing for continuous discharge books. In this record should be entered only the data needed properly to identify the seamen in search of work. There should be no place in these records for adverse notations on the matter of union membership. They are designed to insure that only qualified seamen should hold responsible posts at sea and should strictly be confined to that purpose.

It may be that amendments to the law are needed to protect seamen against any possible misuse of the new system. Such changes can surely be made without suspending even for a limited period the essential safeguards afforded by the continuous discharge book.

Inadequate Zoning.

When the District Alley Dwelling Authority began to function its usefulness was believed to lie solely in the field of slum reclamation. Every one familiar with the authority's work to date agrees that it has made a commendable start toward the transformation of Washington's inhabited alleys. In recent weeks, however, a wider value in its work has become apparent.

The job undertaken by the A. D. A. was not only one of wiping out unsightly areas of disease-infested shacks. John Ihlder, executive officer of the authority, has often pointed out that the mere destruction of slums is no solution of the problems they create. To complete the task of reclamation land so cleared must be rededicated to some useful purpose. It is the policy of the A. D. A. to utilize each area taken over in the way which appears most advantageous to the community.

In pursuit of this policy the authority recently decided to construct an apartment house for 31 Negro families on a site extending from Blands alley to W street, between Second and Fourth streets northwest. A simple but attractive three-story building has been designed. Although it is to be built and operated without subsidy, rentals will range from only $25 per month for two rooms and bath to $35 for four rooms and bath. It is scarcely necessary to add that there is a heavy demand for accommodations of this kind and that the rentals are substantially below the average charges for apartments in the same neighborhood.

In its efforts to keep costs and rentals at a minimum the authority might have been expected to plan a building to cover as much of its site as the zoning regulations would permit. But it did not do so. The A. D. A. is interested in sound community planning as well as economical slum reclamation. This building will cover only one-third of its site, the greater part being carefully landscaped.

Large areas in Washington are already losing their value as residential centers because they are overbuilt. Apartment houses have been crowded together with little consideration for either light, air or privacy. The fate of such areas can be read in the experience of congested sections in any modern city. Yet our zoning regulations permit corner apartment houses to cover as much as 90 per cent of their sites and the coverage may be as high as 60 per cent in the case of other apartment dwellings.

Obviously these restrictions are totally inadequate to maintain desirable standards even in the construction of new living quarters. Washington of all cities ought not to tolerate such short-sighted building policies. The landscaped layout insisted upon by the Alley Dwelling Authority in building for a relatively low income group throws into bold relief the need for thorough overhauling of the District's zoning regulations, with special attention to the break-down of restrictions which spot zoning has encouraged.

Maryland Chamonix.

Washington snowbirds, if not already moulting in despair over the unseasonable weather, may find cheer in the news that plans are being drawn for a Chamonix in nearby Maryland. State forestry officials see possibilities for an excellent winter sports resort in the mountains of Garrett County at Oakland, near both the West Virginia and Pennsylvania borders.

A tract of 650 acres in the Swallow Falls State Forest is high enough normally to insure skiing and skating throughout the winter months. Moreover, it is no farther from Washington than many of the stations to which special "snow trains" from New York and Boston regularly carry carloads of winter sports enthusiasts on week-ends at this season. CCC boys at Oakland are already at work on a dam to form a lake which could be used for hockey and other skating and presumably they could provide ski trails if the resort develops into reality.

What one CCC unit can do, presumably another can. Could the Oakland boys, then, after their skating project is finished loan their working plans to the Capital? The Maryland development sounds very attractive but Oakland is a farther haul than many an outdoor fan will care to undertake. An artificial ice rink such as Baltimore and many another city already boasts would make it much less of a risk to include skates for junior on the Christmas shopping list.

Plaint On Pleats.

Trains, literally, aren't what they used to be. First the smokestack went the way of all smoke. Then the gas lamp, lighting the coaches with its puny rays, flickered a fond farewell. Now soot and dust reluctantly give way to air-conditioning. Streamlining transforms the lumbering behemoth to a "silvery shaft of stainless steel." Meals improve, porters' grins grow wider, fares are reduced.

But what does it profit a traveler to gain all these things if he lose his sleep? And in spite of every modern improvement, pullman sheets have heretofore remained tucked as tightly as ever!

For years the problem of how to get into one's berth easily and quickly has been a major one. It was necessary for the weary traveler to have a smattering of jiu-jitsu, sleight-of-hand and the patience of Job. Two ways were open to him: the direct method, being that of the inchworm slowly working southward, and the indirect or corkscrew approach. In neither case did the sheets give an inch, except at the foot, thereby causing an Icelandic system of ventilation.

At long last a new order of berth-making is at hand. "Avoidance of all binding," according to an issue of Pullman News, "is made possible by what is termed an 'accordion' or 'bellows' pleat." This startling new discovery seems on analysis to boil down into leaving the bedding loose on the getting-in side. Time marches on! And after 69 years the Pullman Co. has learned how to make a bed!

Excessive Demands.

Railway executives concede that the outlook for the roads in 1937 is rosy, viewed from the standpoint of improving business conditions which presumably mean larger net earnings. However, regulatory difficulties and labor demands are now threatening to offset the gains of the recovery period and plunge the roads into fresh distress. The recent refusal of the I. C. C. to extend the emergency surcharges, pending disposition of applications for permanent rate increases, was a severe blow. It meant loss of revenues estimated by the carriers at over $100,000,000 per annum.

Now another shock is dealt by the decision of the five big railway brotherhoods to demand an increase of 20 per cent in pay—a rise that would add an estimated $116,500,000 to the pay rolls. Last year the carriers had a net income of about $150,000,000.

Even assuming that the losses from elimination of freight surcharges are more than offset by the larger traffic volume of the present year, the roads would be seriously set back if forced to meet these new wage demands. Some now struggling "out of the red" might again find themselves unable to meet fixed charges and expenditures for repairs and new equipment would certainly be curtailed, to the detriment of the durable goods industries.

The railway unions are not only demanding wage increases but their spokesmen are urging legislation providing a six-hour day with eight-hours pay, and other measures designed to force the roads to increase the number of employes.

If the railway working day were unduly long, or if railway workers were paid less than living wages, the inadequacy of earnings to support a higher wage outlay would not be a conclusive answer to demands for better terms. The problem then would be how to provide additional sources of income out of which to pay decent wages. But railway labor is scarcely to be numbered among the underprivileged third to whom the President referred in his inaugural address.

Commissioner Eastman has often emphasized the substantial identity of interests between the railways and their employes. That means that the unions cannot secure more jobs and better pay for their members if they pursue tactics calculated to gain immediate advantages for themselves regardless of the unfavorable effect upon the earning capacity of the roads.

Wage demands which would add large sums to operating costs at the present critical stage of recovery, might easily threaten curtailment of services, abandonment of plans for expansion, and consequent loss of jobs, existing and potential, for rail labor.

O Pshaw!

The moment when the royal secretary brings the Shah of Iran his weekly batch of foreign clippings must be exceedingly trying for the advisers who cluster round the Peacock Throne. For there is no telling when this survey of press comment will be followed by a severance of diplomatic relations with still another country.

The Iranian Legation here in Washington is occupied only by a custodian, and Secretary Hull is no longer on Reza Shah Pahlevi's calling list, because months ago irreverend American journals falsely alleged that His Majesty had once worked as a stable boy. Certainly no slander was ever intended by this tactless anecdote. Were that useful occupation attributed to the youth of any American statesman he would welcome it, true or false, as vindication of the log cabin to White House saga. But the ruler of the land of Omar thinks differently. And American relations with the country still best known to most of us as Persia languish as a result.

From our crude country the blunder was perhaps to be anticipated. One would expect better from the polished French, those masters of diplomacy and arbiters of protocol. Yet the Shah has now recalled his Minister to Paris and threatens other reprisals because a French newspaper columnist has had the execrable taste to make a pun on the words Shah and chat. It appears that the curious French pronounce their word for cat exactly like the title of the Iranian monarch. And though a Persian cat may look at a king he must not do so in a way which will risk confusion of identity.

All this would seem to put Mahmoud Djam, prime minister of Iran, into just what his name signifies to us. If a helpful suggestion can be accepted in the spirit offered, it would seem wise for Djam to cut the clipping services completely out of Iran's budget.

Pity the poor Spanish soldier. He doesn't know who's fighting with him or against him or why.

Four More Years.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The indescribable thing known as the "New Deal" has, through the verdict of a foolish electorate, been extended for another four years. This innovation in American politics already has cost the country something like $28,000,000,000, half of which might well be called wasted, but which, if expended under a wise business administration, would have done much toward placing the business of the country upon a solid foundation, thereby removing the bugaboo of unemployment.

What the next four years of similar extravagance will bring forth none is wise enough to foretell. One thing is certain, however; the country is facing a future by no means bright. The one hope lies in the fact that 17,000,000 solid Americans have not indorsed this ignis fatuus of fancied progress, and upon them the future well-being of our country will largely depend when the inevitable is reached. ### National Coat And Cloth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With due respect and admiration for the lofty, humanitarian utterances contained in President Roosevelt's inaugural address, to many of us it seems singularly strange that not a word was said in regard to the necessity of practicing some of the old-fashioned virtues of thrift, economy and self-denial. Hasn't the time arrived to put a brake on the greatest orgy of governmental spending in history?

Hasn't it ever occurred to our Chief Executive that armies of "have-nots" at one time or another basked in the light of plenty and were reduced to their present unfortunate status through reckless waste, self-indulgence and an utter lack of respect for the commodity called money? Can wasteful, selfish human tendencies be eliminated through legislation or by compelling, through taxation, the cautious and thrifty to share their savings, gained often by brow sweat, with spendthrifts and wastrels? Social Utopia is not so easily gained.

The test of the modern theory of government that a nation can spend its way out of difficulty, thereby removing poverty from the earth, will arrive when the national credit is stretched beyond certain limits. Many may eventually find themselves threadbare that continually ignore the adage of cutting the coat according to the cloth. No national garment can eternally cover its citizens. E. K. G.

Management Of "Seat Of Government."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is more meat and sound sense in any one sentence of Mr. Pusey's article in The Post of January 11 than in all the pages of Mr. Jacobs' titanic tome.

Of the myriads who congregate in this District of Columbia, whether by necessity or preference, few of us are satisfied with the management of District affairs. By compulsion, however, we must admit the fact that under Section 8 of the Constitution of the United States, Congress is given exclusive powers over the "seat of government." Residence in the District of Columbia is therefore not a right but a privilege, enjoyed by grace of the Congress. No person must live here. If by accident he is born here, or of his own free will he decides to reside here, either in Government employ or in other occupation, he does so by suffrance of that same Congress, and must submit to its will and whim.

In the course of years, various forms of government for the District have been experimented with and have all failed, "for the main and simple reason" (as the sapient Penrod says), that the Congress is the supreme authority; and there always have been and always will be "Blantons" in the Congress, though the name may change with every Congress. No matter how efficient and indefatigable the members of the House and Senate committees on the District may be, any "Blanton," can upset their hours of disinterested labor, because, since District affairs are the affairs of all the members of the Congress, necessarily the attitude, of all but a handful of the members of the Congress in both houses, is "let George do it."

When the long and arduous contest in the Continental Congress and the Constitutional Convention over the control and location of the "seat of government" was finally settled, all government under the Constitution was at that time up in the air. In this extremity the simple sanity and sagacity of George Washington was invaluable. In the course of the nearly 150 years of our voyage under the Constitution charted so efficiently and so wisely by said G. W., certain fundamental institutions have become established. Namely: the Supreme Court, the several departments and sundry commissions and boards. But the District is still in a state of floundering flux, and ever will be until a sound understanding obtains of the necessarily unique nature of the "seat of government" under the Constitution.

Looking at the record we find that, according to the telephone book, there are listed under "District of Columbia, Government" (Heaven save the mark—for there ain't no sech animal, as we all know) some 200 or more entities. All of these, of any consequence, should properly be administered by newly created District bureaus in the respective long established departments and commissions and boards of the Federal Government.

For example; taxes belong under the Treasury Department; National Guard, etc., under the War Department; police and courts and all the law officials, under the Department of Justice; health under the Public Health Service; waterworks and other public utilities under the engineers of the War Department; public schools and education under the United States commissioner of education, etc., etc.

The Congress has the authority. Why in Heaven's name don't they exercise it with intelligence? The so-called government is a hopeless scramble. It can't be unscrambled except by the Congress, which must either discharge their responsibility, or else be manly enough to abandon the job.

As to the amount of the contribution of the United States to the maintenance of their "seat of government" that's in the lap of the Congressional gods, and cannot be settled by any phantasmagoric folderol of Mr. Jacobs or Mr. McAneny or any others.

District residents will pay whatever the informed public opinion of the country dictates—and not a penny more or less. The Treasury Department can handle this at least as efficiently as is now done. If the people of this country don't want a decent and respectable "seat of government," let them say so. And if under the plan outlined above, the Treasury Department failed to look after the financial health of the District, we District residents will have to take our medicine.

I can conceive of nothing more to the advantage of the real estate operators of adjoining Maryland and Virginia than the acceptance of the McAneny-Jacobs plan. Every resident of Washington, who can, will move away and leave to the Congress and to Mr. Jacobs and Mr. McAneny the problem of deriving an income from the ghostly vacant residences and apartments of the District of Columbia.

HERBERT FRIEDENWALD.

Modern Architecture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to the reply of Mr. David Lilles to my letter on modernistic architecture, I would say any one can go over the country and pick out thousands of ugly, impractical and absurd buildings. That, however, does not alter the fundamental and everlasting ideas of real beauty.

We kindly ask Mr. Lilles to consider the unchanging beauty and dignity of the Capitol in Washington, with its matchless and lovely dome; the Continental Memorial Hall, the Town Hall at Antwerp, the Trocadero at Paris, the Houses of Parliament in London, the Bourse in Brussels, St. Marks in Venice, the Cathedrals of Milan and Cologne, the Taj Mahal and hundreds of others and tell us candidly if he really thinks these would have been produced by the modern architect?

We do not doubt that Mr. Lilles would advocate removing the dome from the Capitol, to make it "conform" to the Folger Library.

"Enough Diversion Here."

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: It was recently pointed out by representatives of the Federal employes' associations that the average annual salary or wage of these workers approximates but $1,400. This, I presume, is for the entire group and probably averages slightly higher in the Washington area. This is the group of "sportsmen" that is to be called upon to support horse racing at Benning, if and when.

Mr. O'Hara, the New England racing magnate, seems to have long had his eye on the local Federal pay roll "fat cat," and the lure of a half-million dollars in taxes has evidently been too much for Mrs. Norton and her colleagues to withstand. However, one can readily sympathize with the committee in its exceedingly difficult position.

While Maryland is often referred to as an "open State," its racing plants, with the exception of Pimlico, are quite segregated. In other words, they are not at one's back door, and they require deliberate and extended effort to journey thereto. Even Pimlico was originally in outlying suburban Baltimore. So to this extent let us absolve Maryland and the Monumental City.

I suggest careful consideration by the House in the event of a favorable report on this measure. Let the new members, especially, try to understand that our charming Capital City is not just another New York or Chicago. There is quite enough diversion here already, taxes or no taxes. WISE ADVOCATE.

Discovery Of Lee's Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That poem that Whittier wrote about Barbara Frietchie at Frederick may prove a nemesis for old John Greenleaf, as the yarn has grown into a national myth. It is said that Thomas Dunn English had his literary reputation ruined by the sentimental song "Ben Bolt" being seized on and sung by millions—to the exclusion of Mr. English's other valuable works. Poor Whittier may be submerged by Barbara.

But the little town of Frederick has another romantic story which seems to have been lost. Four days before the battle of Sharpsburg, when the Army of McClellan moved to Frederick, a soldier from Indiana found a copy of the plans of Lee hidden in a hollow tree, and three cigars were wrapped up in the valuable find.

This find was the making of George B. McClellan, as he then made a rush for Turner's Gap in the South Mountain, and forced his way in through to catch Lee's Army unprepared for battle at that point.

In my novel, "Opportunity Knocks Twice," Sharpsburg is the high-tide of the Confederacy, and that fatal package of cigars was the turning point of the American war.

Can any reader funish any facts about the finding of those cigars, with Lee's plans wrapped around them? EDMOND FONTAINE.

Shanghai Masquerade

Shanghai, like a vain and beautiful woman, is inclined to swagger a little behind her reputation as "the Paris of the Orient." She is proud of her metropolitan vastness, her abundance of modernistic architecture and her brilliantly illuminated night life. She likes to show off before the thousands of tourists who visit her each year, and before those of us who make our homes in the less sophisticated ports of China.

These tourists, on their part, are often genuinely impressed; but we who have lived for a few years in China—lived in the simple country-side and jabbered clumsily with the villagers in their own language—we refuse to be awed. True, we are dazzled by the size and bustle of the great city. We scuttle across the traffic-slashed streets. We are tempted by the up-to-date English and American shops. We lift our chins to peer at the tall buildings. We look forward to bragging a little when we return to Tientsin and Peking—telling our acquaintances that we have been to all the newest European restaurants and the most fashionable night clubs.

But under the surface which the travelers see, one can feel the heart of China—the heart of humanity—beating. The tourists look for the strange and the exotic; we look for the natural, the universal. And we find it—in countless little unimportant things, incongruous beside the glittering twentieth-century pose which the huge city affects. We do not mean to ridicule it. On the contrary, we like Shanghai the more for it. The face—the ageless human face—is better than the mask.

There was that rainy day when the air was heavy with squalls from a typhoon out at sea, and we were walking down one of the great crowded shopping streets whose very names add glamour to the travel folders. Often we stopped to peer into shop windows in which chic novelties from New York and London and Paris widened our expatriate eyes. And now and then we lingered before the famous curio stores lying along the way—their dim interiors rich with porcelains and bronzes and ivories, with embroideries and scrolls and jades. Gleaming cars waited at the curb; and in and out of the doors stepped smartly dressed white women or Chinese ladies of fashion with slit silken gowns, rouged cheeks and permanently waved hair.

The usual throng of lower-class Chinese was ambling along the damp street, clad chiefly in the shiny black cloth of a Shanghai summer. Ahead of us moved a young girl with a long pigtail down her back—a jasmine peddler, with the little wilted blossoms laid out uninvitingly on a dingy tray. She was chattering with an older girl who walked alongside, and she did not notice that we were just behind her. All at once she halted abruptly to adjust her tray; and we bumped into her with a sharp impact.

A funny shock of surprise lit her face when she glanced around and saw that it was a foreigner with whom she had collided. She shook with a sudden gay tittering—catching hold of her friend's sleeve and gasping breathlessly. As we marched on past the plate-glass windows full of gorgeous curious and smart imported goods we could hear the diminishing cadence of her laughter: a young girl with the giggles.

* * * *

And there was the night when we had gone to dine and dance at the top of one of the great new structures, in a sleekly modernistic room which looked out for miles over the city. Everywhere the dark sky was embroidered with a blaze of colored neon lights. In a bizarre meeting of East and West, the big foreign-style buildings were enlivened with vivid signs depicting the horned roofs of temples and pagodas, while tall Chinese characters flashed their red and blue and green and yellow chorus upon the night.

Leaving the echoes of the jazz orchestra behind us, we sped downward in a chromium-decorated elevator and stepped out into the cool street. No taxi happened to be at hand, so we decided to walk a little way until we found one.

We had not gone far when we crossed a small, dark alley branching from the main thoroughfare. A nocturnal food vendor had set up his lantern, his lacquered boxes and his tiny stove there in the shadows. While we were passing, a strong young man of the coolie class strolled toward him, hesitated and stopped. In the flickering lantern light we could see the muscles of his face twitch with pleasure as he smelled the hot food. He threw a copper onto one of the boxes. The vendor picked up a soiled bowl, filled it with a macaroni-like mixture, thrust in a pair of chopsticks and handed it to the young man. With clicking chopsticks the youth gulped down the food. Then he sighed, wiped his mouth appreciatively, set down the bowl and continued up the dark alley, singing a minor, wandering song in a high voice.

Coronation Show.

THE HEAVY SOUND of male voices through the transoms and the shrill, rising cackle of ladies who have dipped their bills into their third cocktail of the evening indicate that there will be at least some survivors of the Great American Coronation Show.

The valets are hustling through the corridors with soggy clothes for the pressers and gentlemen peering out of bedroom doors wearing shorts or bathrobes, which expose their hairy, blue-veined shanks, crying plaintively for their pants.

Other sounds in the night include the clink of the ice in the pitcher as the boy goes down the hall, and early, premonitory bleats of "Sweet Adeline." It was an ordeal, and some must die of it if there is any truth in what the doctors say about wet feet, exposure and chills, but we got our President, perhaps our last President or the last but one, officially sworn in, nevertheless.

The predicament of the males at the moment of writing is reminiscent of the scenes of distress which seared one's soul in Philadelphia the morning after Mr. Dempsey had yielded to Mr. Tunney that which is known as the highest bauble in Fistiana's realm amid a historic downpour. The sudden pressure broke down the pants-pressing facilities of Philadelphia that dreadful morning after, and to make a disaster worse some of the pressers delivered batches of pants to the wrong hotels.

• • •

IN THE PRESENT case, however, it appears that the Washington pants service is performing well in the presence of a crisis and that in due time everyone will be trousered again, although naturally there is some anxiety, for a man may live without freedom, honor or self-respect but cannot be a man without his pants.

Possibly those who were elsewhere have some notion of what Mr. Roosevelt said as again he stood to his pulpit on the Fourth of July platform facing the back yard of the National Capitol and sounded off on one thing and another. Those who were present for the turning of a page or the spinning of a reel of history will have no idea, however, until they read the text in the papers.

• • •

THE INAUGURATION is an old ceremony by now, and the show had been greatly curtailed this time. In London, on the other hand, they had not buried a king in 25 years, but when it came time to lay away GEORGE V they got their foreign kings and ambassadors in line, even though they had to pull the bedclothes off some of them and pour them into their lion tamers' suits in the dark before the dawn, and the parade went clicking along strictly according to the time table.

In some years of bearing witness to football games in New England and the Middle West, where football weather is often wild and raw, your correspondent never saw the beat of the downpour which made more memorable yet the second inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt. Mostly you may only say of rain that it rained somewhat, rained a lot of rained to beat hell, and let it go at that.

• • •

THE MASS in the park were almost totally deprived of the show for which they had walked up the long, long hill, because the umbrellas shut off the view.

Someone seemed to have an idea that it would be a treat to people exposed to these conditions to observe some thirty-odd governors, lieutenant governors and attorney generals riding slowly by in commonplace automobiles. If that idea was correct, then a good time must have been had, for the governors dragged by haltingly in low gear, waving and blowing kisses and gumming up the works remarkably well even for governors.

Incidentally, Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, who appears to be the Prince of Wales of the present dynasty, was the only one other than the President to ride in an open car, and he made a handsome progress down the line, hoisting his hat and baring his teeth in a very fair imitation of Number One. Moreover, Mr. Earle had stooges planted along Pennsylvania avenue who shouted "Our Next President!" with great spontaneity. This did not appear to take the Governor by surprise, and he may think well of the idea.

There was only one other attraction in the parade of Governors, a lady in a gray car in the Illinois section, who rode with her window down and responded smilingly to cries of "Hi'ya, Toots!" The others rode with the windows shut—which may have been a good thing.

Ben Jonson

17th Century Poet.

The year 1937 marks the 300th anniversary of the death of Shakespeare's intimate friend and rival, Ben Jonson.

Ben Jonson was a classical scholar, a critic, a famous and successful dramatist, a poet, and the literary dictator of London. There are striking resemblances between Ben Jonson of the seventeenth century and Samuel Johnson of the eighteenth. The chief difference is that no one, either living or dead, would ever have dared to think of the latter as Sam, whereas Benjamin Jonson, although it so appears on the title page of his works, was then and now and ever will be Ben.

• • • •

Both were such good scholars in the classics that they could converse fluently in Latin; both were men of enormous size (Ben described his "mountain belly"); both visited Scotland; both had their conversations reported by a Scot biographer; both were dictators, being men of learning and of tremendous convictions; both had their names in the editions of published works of Shakespeare; both were heads of a famous literary coterie, and they met in a famous London tavern.

I wish I knew why Ben Jonson took that long walk to Edinburgh; the distance is 400 miles, and he weighed about 270 pounds. Was he trying to reduce?

Samuel Johnson wrote verse, but Ben wrote poetry. The extraordinary thing is that when this elephantine scholar and mausoleum of learning wrote dainty and graceful lyrics it was as if the elephant tripped as lightly as a gazelle.

• • • •

Perhaps the surest road to immortality is to write a popular song. After 300 years, "Drink to me only with thine eyes," by Ben Jonson, is a universal favorite.

It is easy enough to see how the following song by Jonson (remember that the Elizabethan word "still" means "always") describes a fashion among women exceedingly popular today. But do any of my readers see the difference between the fashion he disliked and its use in 1937.

Still to be neat, still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast;
Still to be powdered, still perfumed,
Lady, it is to be presumed,
Though art's hid causes are not found,

Give me a look, give me a face,
That makes simplicity a grace;
Robes loosely flowing, hair as free;
Such sweet neglect more taketh me
Than all the adulteries of art:
These strike my eye, but not my heart.

Bay State Outlook

Gov. Hurley Promises Happier Days After Curley Regime In Massachusetts, But Dever Ambitions Threaten State's Harmony.

By Joel Underwood.

Boston.

THE CHANGE of administration on Beacon Hill has introduced to the theater of Bay State politics a new cast of characters. Whether the plot entirely changes remains to be seen, but it is safe to say that the dramatic treatment will be different. It is probable that Massachusetts has ahead of it a period of at least partial reconstruction made necessary by the administration of former Gov. Curley, but there are already developing the beginnings of a serious row in the executive family.

Gov. Hurley's inaugural address made some sharp references to certain practices cherished by his predecessor, notably that "successful efforts have been made to circumvent the law by placing upon the public pay roll, under the protection of the civil service, men and women lacking in the necessary qualifications, whose only claim to recognition is political. "The Governor is perhaps overconfident in his promise that the civil service laws will be enforced, both in letter and spirit, but it is a hopeful sign that the administration intends to devote its energies in this direction. It is unlikely that the State will again be treated to the spectacle of such an appointment as the one Curley made to the office of assistant State librarian. The lady in question confessed to the press that her favorite reading was a highly romantic pulp magazine, and that she didn't want the job anyway.

Retirement Of Judges To Be Better Arranged.

ANOTHER MATTER in which Hurley will probably differ from Curley is in the retirement of judges. There has long been a need in Massachusetts for some arrangements whereby judges past the age of efficiency could be retired on adequate pensions. It may now be possible to accomplish this with dignity and fairness to the judges individually and the bench generally. Curley made two separate attempts to unseat some of the older judges but his technique was deplorable for such an astute politician. He attempted to hale them to Boston for a hearing on their fitness and competence for their offices. When most of them did not even deign to answer, the former Governor was stymied, for even he did not dare force them to appear before the notorious executive council.

Gov. Hurley also proposes to reduce the sessions of the General Court to once every two years instead of the annual meetings now required by law. He hopes also to effect the repeal of the pre-primary law, which has been on the statute books since 1932.

This legislation requires the holding of conventions before the primary elections for the purpose of drawing up slates of candidates to contest for the primary nominations. This procedure was based on the axiom that the cure for the ills of democracy is more democracy. Its chief result, however, is the continuation of the old convention system with all the defects of the primary system. It encourages chicanery and manipulation and considerably enhances the cost of conducting elections.

On the question of biennial sessions for the General Court, experience has shown that the chief obstruction has been the court itself, for most members would rather be paid for two sessions instead of one. But there is pending an initiative petition for a change to biennial sessions. If the present General Court gives this petition the necessary affirmative votes, a referendum will be submitted to the voters at the next State election.

The present situation is almost intolerable. Out of every two years the General Court sits at least 12 and sometimes 14 months. Besides this, every second year, the machinery of elections is put in operation. Since this involves a period of four months of campaigning, the result is that out of every two years, 16 to 18 months are devoted to politics of one sort or another, legislative or electoral.

Prospects For Economy Vague In Hurley Address.

GOV. HURLEY'S first State paper, however, has some serious omissions. He has promised an economical administration, but this is the kind of conventional promise which pleases everybody but satisfies nobody. Just what this involves will probably be made clearer in his budget speech. His inaugural address also omits any reference to labor policies, a rather singular ommission in view of the strong position enjoyed by labor in Massachusetts. Nor is there any intimation of a program for the utilities.

But specific proposals for legislation are relatively unimportant at this time. Political morality, not political mechanics, is the concern of the present. The most serious aspect of the last two years doings on the Hill has not been the raid on the judiciary nor the debauchment of the civil service, nor even the hocus-pocus in the letting of contracts for public construction. It has rather been the encouragement in the Commonwealth of a rather jaunty cynicism in regard to the administration of public trusts, old-fashioned as that phrase has grown to sound. Although an uncritical submission to authority is unbecoming, a decent respect for public office is essential to the preservation of good government. Unfortunately, the "who cares" attitude was a rank growth which promised to become the State flower under Curley.

Many breaches will be healed under the new administration, but new ones are in the making. The Walsh-Ely faction is once again in command at the State House, restoring a harmony which was interrupted by Curley in 1934. Former Gov. Ely was conspicuous at the inauguration of Hurley, and the indications are that the Mansfield administration in city hall will be protected from the hostile scrutiny of the Curley-packed Boston finance commission.

Even in the short space of time since the inauguration, however, there is evident a growing cleavage of sympathy between the Governor and the attorney general, Paul Dever. A considerable portion of the inaugural address was directed at the cost of legal fees in the liquidation of banking institutions. As the beginning of a campaign to clear up this situation, Hurley has demoted one Scolponetti, a Curley man in the department charged with these functions. Dever immediately offered Scolponetti a position as assistant attorney general.

Governor and Dever Clashed At Pre-Primary.

This does not mean that the attorney general's office is to become a haven for refugee Curley appointees, for Dever has frequently shown himself to be independent of the former Governor. It does mean that the attorney general and the new Governor are feeling rather cool toward each other.

THE TWO comprise a mutual non-admiration society which dates back to the pre-primary convention last June at least. Hurley's candidacy for the Covernorship was reputedly sponsored by the orthodox or Walsh-Ely faction of the State Democratic Party, while it was understood that Curley would support, for a while at least, the candidacy of Lieut. Gov. Joseph Hurley. Dever, an ambitious young man, was also a candidate but did not receive the nomination. Neither did Hurley, for that matter, and because of it he threatened for a while to campaign against Curley for the primary nomination to the United States Senate. He was later rewarded for his forbearance in this matter by an appointment to a judgeship. Dever had to content himself with the attorney generalship for a second term. His present attitude is interpreted as an early campaign for the gubernatorial nomination in 1938. Hence the estrangement, on the surface at least, between him and the Governor.

That the rift may possibly develop into an insurgent movement within the party is a real possibility. Hurley has announced that he will rely upon his private staff for legal advice. This will deprive Dever of many opportunities for public utterances.

It is to be hoped that there is in store a period of what used to be called "normalcy." The new Governor is not brilliant, but he has about him an atmosphere of rugged sincerity which seems to promise well. At least he won't have to worry about the plans of his predecessor for a while. Curley is said to be alternating between running for Mayor of Boston next year and a possible apointment as Governor General of the Philippines. If he should do the first, he promises to be an important political figure in Massachusetts politics for some time to come, for the electorate will forget the spanking it gave him in November. If the second alternative is an actuality and not merely a trial balloon set up by Curley himself, it would seem to be a pity that friendly relations with the Philippines are held so lightly.

Mr. Duff-Cooper And The Army.

London.

MR. DUFF-COOPER, Minister for War, is an outspoken men. Said he recently, the Regular Army is seriously—indeed ominously—short of men. The Territorial Army is still considerably under strength. If 5 out of every 100 able-bodied men in this country belonged to the Army today the country would have solved its recruiting problem. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the voluntary system is on trial today.

Mr. Duff-Cooper looks rather like one of Mr. H. G. Wells' inhabitants of the moon; a bulbous head set on top of a small cramped-up face perched on top of a short body. And like the lunar inhabitants, he is trained to perform one function, is incapable of seeing changing circumstances and the need of men, and himself to adept. He is the embodiment of the Conservative; nephew of one duke, married to the daughter of another, graduate successively of Eton, Oxford, the Grenadier Guards, the Treasury, the Foreign Office and the War Office; now Secretary of War.

He has written a "Life of Talleyrand," edited Haig's diaries. He has a great admiration for Haig, who would have found it a greater crime to question the standards symboled in the old school tie than to lose the war. Since those same standards rule over the present government, Mr. Duff-Cooper is completely at home in it. He never questions the standards of the social level in which he was brought up, never challenges a vested interest, never questions an archbishop except when the church ventures to talk pacifism, which to Mr. Duff-Cooper is the blackest heresy. His intellectual vanity and arrogance strengthen his verbal attack on people and ideas whose fundamentals he is completely unable to grasp.

• • • •

MR. DUFF-COOPER sees the menace of Hitler's Germany; meets it in prewar nationalistic terms. The remedy is a military alliance with France. Some months ago he said this in Paris, was reproved by the cabinet which was challenged in Parliament on the etiquette of allowing a minister for war to make statements on foreign policy. Times have changed, and Mr. Duff-Cooper is once again in Paris, discussing with M. Daladier, French Minister for War, the details of Anglo-French military co-operation.

At home Mr. Duff-Cooper has cast for himself the job of bogeyman to scare the public into the army, warn them that if they don't come easily they will be forced by conscription. No one damns his lack of tact more than the generals. But it is reliably reported that a conscription bill is already drafted and can be presented to Parliament whenever the cabinet says the word.

True, Mr. Baldwin has sworn to the country that never while he is Prime Minister will conscription be introduced in time of peace. Mr. Baldwin may feel that changed circumstances exonerate him from his promise; or he may still be intending to retire after the coronation, despite his recent beatification. None of his successors has bound himself not to conscript.

IT IS of course, perfectly true that the army finds it difficult to keep itself up to strength. One reason is that the terms of enlistment, the poor pay, the six years of foreign service, the poor food and unattractive living conditions do not encourage recruits. Another, and much more important, deterrent is that stories of the last war have sunken in. Armies spell infantry, and infantry spells trenches, mud, disease, stagnation, mass sacrifices to the errors of some unknown and unseen general.

It is not pacifism that hold back recruits, for the navy and air force are finding all they want. The navy and much more the air force offer movement; in the air force particularly the odds seems much more even in combat; intelligence still seems to count, and there is the lure of speed, the power of machines. Not all Mr. Duff-Cooper's bogeyman stuff will make the army attractive.

The flow of gas masks from the factories is startling; depots are to be filled, instructors are to visit every home, explain the virtues of the mask, the duties of the civilian. So war preparations will thrust themselves into every house. And equally far-reaching although far less obvious preparations are being made for government control of the British Broadcasting Corporation in time of national emergency. The mystery man is installed at Broadcasting House, getting his blueprints ready. Broadcasting is an essential weapon, likely to be more powerful even than a censored press.

And for outside decorations, little test signs are to be prepared, painted with a special yellow paint, which will turn red when touched by mustard gas.

Reports Of Gold And Oil In Ethiopia Circulated

Optimistic Mining Survey Published To Dispel Doubts As To Worth Of Expensive Conquest In Northeast Africa.

By the United Press.

Rome, Jan. 21.—Existence of minerals in Ethiopia has been definitely proved by investigators who have been making mining surveys in Italy's new East African possessions during the past few months. That fact should go a long way toward clarifying Italy's economic future and eventually lessen Italy's dependence on other nations for certain prime materials. It should bring to an end the heated arguments that have been going on ever since Ethiopia became a household word regarding the existence of natural resources.

The optimistic reports have been appearing lately with greater frequency in the Italian press and all the precampaign doubts as to Ethiopia's real worth have been dispelled in the minds of the Italian people.

The results of the independent mining surveys are hailed here as a great triumph over international authorities who repeatedly expressed skepticism and predicted that Ethiopia would turn out to be a "white elephant" for Italy.

Called "Garden of Eden."

Iron, coal, gold, platinum, oil, gas, tungsten and tin as well as salts and sulphur, exist in this possession seven times larger than the homeland, the surveys revealed. As Ethiopia is ideally suited for agriculture because of the rich soil and plentiful rainfall, and rich in water power due to the profusion of rivers and waterfalls, the location of minerals makes Ethiopia a sort of Garden of Eden for Italy.

The only thing remaining to bear out these predictions, of course, is the actual working of the soil and the actual extraction of minerals, which will be the final proof.

Experts have divided their reports into two sections. In the first part they discuss minerals which have been extracted by natives for many years. Although small quantities have been obtained, authorities point out that primitive methods have limited the output and that as soon as modern equipment is installed, production will be speeded up.

The other part of the report deals with undiscovered but "scientifically proved" existence of natural resources. This has been done through the study of topography, the examination or rocks, soil and water and the observation of natural phenomena, such as escaping gases.

Oil in Danakil Region.

One of the most optimistic reports is that compiled by Luigi Dullio, engineer, explorer and diplomat. After years of exploration, which date back to Emperor Menelik's time, he is positive that great quantities of gas and oil exist in the Danakil region.

He declares that he has "absolute proof" that they exist. He adds that the "presence of oil is proved by gas fumes emanating from the land.

"I explored the Danakil thoroughly," he said, "and in a zone several miles long and about 800 yards wide, I found a number of large holes in the ground full of gray, black, red and other colored mud. In some of them, together with mud and gas, there were small quantities of oil. The pressure of gas in some localities is so strong that it can be heard long distances as it escapes."

Iron, another expert declared, abounds in sufficiently large quantities in the region of Saio. It also has been located in the mountains of Dallati, Gulisso, Aira and in large beds at Bal Fur. That it exists is borne out by the fact that natives in these regions for years have made their spears, daggers and spades from this local iron ore.

Gold Sand Found.

Gold has been found in a number of sections in western Ethiopia, in the neighborhood of Dembil Dolla. From Dembil Dolla along the Biribir River there are more than 100 miles of auriferous sand. Gold fields are reported at Bia Buraio, Wollega, Tullu Mao, Borga between Gambela and Bule as well, and in the territory of Beni Sciangui north of Dembil Dolla. Gold is said to exist in the sands of most of Ethiopia's waterways, especially the Baro and Didessa rivers.

In the region of Bia Buraio, natives have been extracting gold by sieving the sands for centuries. Despite primitive methods used, natives have an annual output of about 280,000 grams in this region alone.

Platinum fields have been located near the village of Jubdo as far as Gambela. They have been leased for private exploitation. Platinum is believed to exist in smaller quantities in most of Ethiopia's gold regions.

Traces of tungsten and tin have been found in the Harrar region. The famous Danagil Desert, which is often picturesquely referred to as the "hell hole of creation," is rich in both iodine and potassium salts, also sulphur. Coal is known to exist in the Shoah region, while an excellent kind of lignite seems to abound in the Lake Tana region.

Out-of-Town, City Detectives Hold PickpocketsDown

Activities of out-of-town and local detectives kept Washington comparatively free from crime during the Inauguration, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said yesterday.

Reports show, Thompson said, that not one person was fleeced by pickpockets. Only one known suspected pickpocket was seized, in the lobby of a downtown hotel. He will be released for lack of evidence to prosecute.

Thompson said he had collected the best pickpocket detectives in the country to work with local men in the hotels and crowds. Newspaper stories advertising the coming of these men kept most of the expert "pocket" men away, Thompson stated.

In the 24-hour period ending at 8 a. m. yesterday morning one purse-snatching and two robberies were the only serious crimes reported to police. At least ten are reported during an ordinary day.

Comdr. Porter Dies At Newport, R. I.

Comdr. William Hamilton Porter, jr., stationed at the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., died there yesterday of pneumonia, the Associated Press reported.

Born in Covington, Ky., December 15, 1890, he entered the Naval Academy in 1910. He was a graduate of the Naval War College, taking courses in strategy and tactics, electrical engineering and torpedo instruction. He also was graduated from the Army Industrial College. Commissioned a commander in June, 1935, he served on the U. S. S. Texas before going to the War College last year. Prior to that he commanded a destroyer.

Col. E. B. Bolton Dies In California at 86

Col. Edwin B. Bolton, 86, United States Army, retired, died at Letterman General Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, Wednesday, the War Department announced yesterday.

Born in Mississippi in 1850, Col. Bolton was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in 1875, and served through the various grades until he was made a colonel in 1906. He retired in 1911. Surviving are a stepdaughter, Mrs. Alice Hall, of Pasadena, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. T. J. Robertson, of Memphis, Tenn.

Swift Predicts Better Business Conditions

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—G. F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., told stockholders in annual meeting today that one of the best economic signals of the day is that "business men are more hopeful than they have been in a long time."

He said it is generally agreed that the business situation has improved and that further improvement will be made.

Major C. R. Crim Dies At Hot Springs, Ark.

Maj. Caspar R. Crim, Infantry, U. S. Army, died yesterday at the Army and Navy Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark., the War Department announced. He had been on duty with the R. O. T. C. unit at Ouachita College, Arkadelphia, Ark.

Born in Hartsville, Ind., in 1892, Maj. Crim was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Infantry Section of the Officers Reserve Corps in 1917, and was immediately called to active duty. He was appointed a first lieutenant of Infantry, U. S. Army, serving until 1920 when he was commissioned in the Regular Army. He was promoted to the rank of captain in July, 1920, and to major in 1935. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Gladys W. Crim, of Hot Springs, Ark.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 21.—Mrs. Frederick M. Pelzman, 3004 Thirty-second street northwest, Washington, was elected to a six-year term on the executive board of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhood in its annual convention here.

Red Convicted Under '71 Law Asks Reversal

Ohioan Given Prison Term in Georgia Appeals to Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

Angelo Herndon, Cincinnati colored Communist, urged the Supreme Court yesterday to set aside his Georgia insurrection conviction on the ground an 1871 State statute unreasonably restricted freedom of speech and assembly.

His brief was filed preparatory to arguments next month on his appeal from an 18 to 20 year chain-gang sentence imposed by Georgia tribunals.

Herndon was convicted of violating a Georgia law, passed in reconstruction days, providing that any attempt "to induce others to join in any combined resistance to the lawful authority of the State shall constitute an attempt to incite insurrection."

Herndon cited as evidence his sentence was illegal a recent decision by the Supreme Court setting aside the conviction of Dirk de Jong, accused of violating the Oregon criminal syndicalism law by attending a Communist meeting.

"It is especially important," the brief said, "that a statute which limits the free exercise of constitutional rights on penalty of death, in the discretion of the jury, should provide a reasonably definite rule of permissible conduct so that the citizen may know where the line is drawn and so that, being fairly on the right side of the line, he may not be deemed to have crossed it when inflamed passions rule men's decisions.

"If constitutional rights are to be preserved, the traps which are designed to catch those who unlawfully abuse them, must at least be marked and not concealed by sign-posts so obscurely worded that no one can tell where they may lie, unless prepared to risk his life in the adventure."

The statute authorized a maximum sentence of death.

Herndon asserted there was no evidence he had "advocated or attempted to induce others to resort to force or to engage in acts of violence."

President Calls For Extension Of Trade Pacts

Emergency Still Exists in Foreign Relations, Congress Is Told.

another year or two, with most of the substance of some countries going into cannon and powder and shot and shell instead of into the stomachs of the people—with such an economic program another economic collapse in Europe within a couple of years is apparently almost a certainty."

He stressed the place of the program in world peace rather than in its immediate economic effect on American farms and industry, although he discussed these fully. This insistence on "the larger objectives" brought forth sarcastic remarks from the minority side of the committee room, where the Republican Congressmen strove to show that the program had been hurtful to farmers and industry and even included references to the President as "Santa Claus," mentioned the "6,000,000 little slaughtered pigs," and said "you can't beat four billion dollars."

Tariff Law Defended.

Representative Crowther claimed that the negotiations of the trade agreements were "star chamber proceedings," in contrast to open Congressional tariff-bill hearings, and defended, along with his colleagues, the Smoot-Hawley tariff law, which Hull had called "disastrous."

Secretary Roper ran the committee's gantlet without especial incident, and laid particular emphasis in his statements on the "economic interdependence" of the countries of the world. He denied there had been star chamber proceedings in carrying out the program.

Most colorful of the supporters of the resolution was tall, iron-gray-haired Robert Lincoln O'Brien, the chairman of the tariff commission, who said:

"I have come here to save my fellow Republicans from making the terrific blunder of opposing the Hull trade agreements plan.

Support Is Cited.

"First I want you gentlemen to note that the newspapers of the Nation are practically unanimous in support of the program. Even the New York Herald-Tribune, most potent Republican organ in the country, stated shortly after election that the supreme blunder of the Republican campaign was the Minneapolis speech by Gov. Landon, in which he attacked the trade agreements and said the Administration was selling agriculture down the river.

"Even the Kansas City Star, the foremost Landon supporter, emphatically did not agree with Landon in that speech.

"I want to save you from making the same blunder. Come on in with me, gentlemen, the water's warm and fine." The committee laughed.

When Knutson injected a question to show O'Brien recently had been re-appointed by President Roosevelt, after his original appointment by President Hoover, O'Brien warmly defended himself, insisting he had always maintained the same tariff principles he now upholds, and added:

O'Brien Cites Salary.

"I am a dollar-a-year man, and indifferent to my salary, as indifferent to it as Mr. Treadway is to the profits from his string of hotels in New England." Treadway flushed and asserted his hotel profits were non-existent under the Roosevelt Administration.

Just before all the Republicans except Crowther stalked indignantly out of the chamber, O'Brien said: "You would have been wiser to have taken my advice—the same I offer now—three years ago. There would be more of you here today."

Representative Bartlett McCormack, of Massachusetts, who with Fred Vinson, Kentucky, had borne cudgels for the Democrats all day, criticized the Republican walk-out heartily as the committee adjourned until today, when Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, will be heard.

'Plane Got Away,' Crash Pilot Says

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—A Western Air Express transport liner which crashed on a snow-capped peak above Newhall Pass January 14, killing five persons and injuring eight, "got away from the pilot," a Federal inquiry revealed tonight.

Pilot W. W. Lewis, lying on a hospital bed with his head swathed in bandages, told through crushed lips for the first time the story of the crack-up, second major disaster in the Newhall Pass area in a month.

"The plane simply got away from me," he said. "I had to fight the plane all the way in after we got into rough air. The motors began to weaken and ice started to form on the wings. I just saw a clump of bushes ahead, and then we hit."

Life Insurance Fraud Guilt Admitted by 39

New York, Jan. 21 (A').—Thirty-nine persons, including three physicians, pleaded guilty in Kings County Court, Brooklyn, today to conspiracy charges in what District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan said was a wholesale plot to defraud 100 life insurance companies.

Thirty-eight of the defendants were released in bail for sentence later. Judge George W. Martin suspended sentence on Rose Antonucci, 53, of Brooklyn.

The group was accused of ferreting out persons suffering from fatal diseases and insuring them heavily after sending a substitute to take the physical examination.

Architects Sought For State Library

Richmond, Jan. 21 (A').—A subcommittee of the State library building commission, named to select a Virginia firm to draw plans and specifications for the proposed $1,000,000 building, considered today merits by which the architects should be selected.

Meeting with Wilmer Hall, State librarian, in the old library building in Capitol Square, the group voted to send out questionnaires to all architectural firms in the State asking them to list their qualifications to do the work required.

Text of Roosevelt Letter on Foreign Pacts

Text of President Roosevelt's letter to Representative Doughton (Dem., N. C.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, urging extension of his authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

By the act of June 12, 1934 (Pub. No. 316, of the 73d Congress), the Congress authorized the Executive to enter into foreign trade agreements for the purpose of promoting the foreign commerce of the United States. This authority was conferred for a period of three years. I am very happy to learn that you have introduced in the House of Representatives a resolution (H. J. Res. 96), providing for an extension of this authority for a further period of three years. Such an extension is highly desirable in the interest of our Nation.

At the time of the original enactment, the world was moving in the direction of a progressive destruction of international commerce. Trade barriers had risen to unprecedented heights, and exclusive preferential arrangements were supplanting the rule of equal treatment in commercial relations. As a result of enhanced obstructions to trade and of increasing adverse discrimination on the part of other nations, our foreign trade had suffered an even more drastic decline than the catastrophic fall in world trade as a whole.

Accrued Benefits Cited.

If our agricultural and industrial interests, which had been severely injured by the contraction of their foreign markets, were to regain their deserved place in the international trade of the world and to expand foreign outlets for their products, it was necessary for our government in a time of such emergency to be in a position to bargain with other governments by means of energetic and decisive negotiations. The executive branches of virtually all other important trading countries already possessed power to act promptly. By the act of June 12, 1934, the Congress placed a similar authority in my hands.

Through the exercise of that authority, foreign trade agreements have been concluded with fifteen nations. Improved opportunities for our trade have been secured in such important markets as those of Canada, Cuba, Brazil, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, Switzerland and Sweden. Through our policy of demanding and granting equality of treatment we have obtained removal of discriminations where they existed in the trade agreement countries and guarantees of equal treatment in the future. At the same time our policy has served to reduce discriminatory practice in many other countries.

Resistance to Isolation.

In the process of obtaining improvement in our export positions, the interests of our producers in the domestic market have been scrupulously safeguarded. This was made possible by painstaking effort on the part of the government agencies concerned with the negotiation of trade agreements and by the helpful cooperation of the business community and the general public in making known to the Government their views and desires in the matter and in supplying valuable pertinent information.

Our vigorous initiative in the field of liberalization of commercial policies has been an important factor in arresting the world trend to national economic isolation, which seemed almost irresistible three years ago. Striking evidence of this is furnished by the actions of industrial countries and by the discussions and recommendations of such international gatherings as the recent Buenos Aires conference.

But while accomplishment has been substantial and gratifying, the task is by no means completed. In international trade relations emergency conditions still exist. Barriers operating against our trade are still excessive. Their reduction continues to be an essential requirement of a full and balanced economic recovery for our country. In the period which lies immediately ahead, our ability to act swiftly and effectively in the field of commercial policy will be indispensable, if the present favorable and promising trend toward a normalization and expansion of international trade, upon a friendly and constructive basis of fair-dealing and equal treatment, is to go forward.

Economic Strife Involved.

The development of liberalized trade practices has another effect, which transcends in importance even the material benefits conferred by trade improvement. Economic strife, resulting from inordinate or discriminatory trade barriers, is one of the most fruitful sources of political animosity and military conflict. A policy designed to reduce excessive trade barriers and to establish equality of trade rights is a powerful instrument of economic appeasement and stability.

In the present unfortunate state of world affairs, we dare not, in justice to ourselves, relax our effort or abate the vigor of our leadership, in a world-wide movement for durable peace through economic prosperity.

C. G. Goodloe Dies at Home; Ex-MailOfficial

Virginian Was Appointed to Railway Service in 1889.

Clarence G. Goodloe, 75, former official of the Railway Mail Service, died yesterday at his residence, 1800 North Capitol street.

A native of North Garden, Va., where he was born June 29, 1861, Goodloe originally was appointed to the Railway Mail Service in 1889, being assigned to the line running between Richmond, Va., and Huntington, W. Va.

Later he was reasigned to the line between Washington and Hinton, W. Va., and promoted to the position of chief clerk, serving in that capacity until he was promoted to be superintendent at Atlanta, Ga., in charge of all Railway Mail Service in Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

He was transferred to Washington as superintendent, in charge of Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia, in 1929, and retired on July 10, 1932.

Surviving Goodloe are his wife, Mrs. Sallie Burton Goodloe, and two daughters, Mrs. E. B. Lawless, of Washington, and Mrs. P. W. Meekins, of Lenoir, N. C.

Funeral services will be held at Eckington Presbyterian Church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by private burial.

Trooper's Slayer Will Plead Guilty

Monroe, Mich., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Alcida (Frenchy) Benoit told State police late today that he was prepared to plead guilty in circuit court to the murder of Trooper Richard Hammond.

The surly gunman, who was captured last night after a manhunt extending over all of southeastern Michigan, pleaded not guilty this morning in municipal court despite a full confession.

His offer to plead guilty was made to State Police Sergt. Orva Jackson. He will be arraigned in circuit court at 10 a. m. tomorrow with Mike Delberto, his confederate in the theft of an automobile and kidnaping of a Detroit salesman which led to the pair's arrest Tuesday and later to Hammond's murder. Delberto pleaded guilty to a concealed weapons charge.

Kiwanis Hear Talk Of Security Leader

Walter L. Campbell, chief of the educational division of the Social Security Board information service, was principal speaker at a Kiwanis Club luncheon yesterday.

He reviewed the achievements of the organization and told of his experiences as a member of the constitutional amendment committee at the international convention held at Denver, Colo., in 1924.

Members of the club yesterday observed the twenty-second anniversary of Kiwanis. The first club was chartered in Detroit, Mich., January 21, 1915. There are now more than 1,900 clubs in the United States and Canada, with a total of more than 90,000 members.

Body of N. C. Bride Is Found in Well

Statesville, N. C., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—County officials tonight planned thorough investigation before completing a coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Lou Westmoreland, dark-haired bride, whose body was found in a deep well at her father-in-law's home.

After questioning five witnesses, a jury convened by Coroner M. D. Tomlin adjourned late today without reaching a verdict. Tomlin said the hearing would be resumed next Wednesday.

if that applicant were the husband, or wife, of a Government employe.

That policy was discontinued, Dr. Ballou said, when word came from the Civil Service Commission that District government employes did not come under the act.

However, the commission last month sent a communication to the school board and commented that "any such practice * * * actually constitutes a direct evasion of the intent of the law.

"If the commission, in any individual case, were definitely aware that the Board of Education intended to effect the reinstatement of a teacher or clerk, separated to permit appointment or reinstatement of husband or wife in the classified service, this office would not approve the latter's appointment," the communication continued.

The commission added that "it does not believe that the Board of Education will wish to recognize, or continue, the practice indicated." The letter closed with a request that the views of the board be furnished the commission.

The board stated its position yesterday in a detailed report of its "views," to be forwarded immediately to the commission.

Since he received the December letter from the commission, Dr. Ballou said yesterday that he was in conference with two commission representatives "for nearly two hours" on January 15. The superintendent said he believed the representatives "were satisfied" that the Board of Education is not in position to change its present policy.

This policy is to appoint teachers who qualify, regradless of "martial status," which, according to Dr. Ballou, "is not now, and since 1918 has not been, part of the eligibility requirements for qualified teachers."

'Moratorium' On War Asked By Adm. Byrd

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, made public tonight what he termed an "important" proposal for world peace, submitted to him by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

"The plan is for the English-speaking nations of the world, jointly and in the name of humanity, to propose a six-month moratorium on war," Admiral Byrd wrote.

In reply Dr. Butler agreed to join with him in proposing to the President and to the Secretary of State "that they invite the co-operation of the other English-speaking nations in making to all the signatories of the pact of Paris the proposal which you so cogently advocate."

Admiral Byrd announced here in an address last June 5 he would devote his life to peace. He said the rapid advance of airplane technique provided an added military danger to world peace.

In Boise, Idaho, on a lecture tour last night he reiterated his intention to dedicate his efforts to peace—after one more expedition to the South Pole and another to the tropics.

Prosecutor Rests In Smith Extortion

New York, Jan. 21 (A').—The prosecution rested today in the extortion trial of A. Henry Ross and Max D. Krone, accused of "shaking down" Alfred E. Smith, jr., under threat to expose his brief illicit relationship with a woman.

The defense immediately moved for dismissal of the indictment. The motion was denied.

Smith, in his last witness stand appearance, had corrected earlier testimony as to his payment of money to Krone, private detective, for a "release."

He explained he had not given Krone $1,500 in cash, as he had stated earlier, but rather $750 in cash and a note for a like amount.

Freeze Outlook Perils Fruits In Citrus Belt

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—The worst freeze since 1913, when the entire citrus fruit crop was destroyed, was forecast for Southern California's valuable orange and lemon belt tonight while frigid weather tightened its hold on the Far West.

Weather forecasters warned that the cold might ruin most of the citrus crop, valued at $112,000,000 last year.

Although expressing little hope for the fruit, weathermen warned growers to fire orchard heaters in an effort to save the trees at least.

Early January cold, worst since 1922, already has caused damage estimated at more than $15,000,000. Last night's temperatures, ranging down to 22 degrees, were not believed to have increased the damage seriously.

The magic of snow at Phoenix so bemused Arizonia legislators they recessed their session briefly to have pictures taken and toss a few snowballs. At Yuma, desert summer hot spot, snow fell for the first time in four years.

Salt Lake City's 11 degrees below zero was the coldest in 49 years and its accumulation of 21 inches of snow the most ever recorded there.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

This shows you the Big New Year's Feed they got up for us Wilkens at the Grange Hall

That's me standing up and making ready to undo the wrapping on the presents they all went and bought us. On the further side of the table next me it's Pop Easley that's been distilling close to 20 years. Then comes Dan Coyle. Dan started coopering for our Dad 42 years ago. Next to Dan it's Mell Swank and Baldy Riggle. Baldy's a first rater at sizing up grain if there ever was one. Facing with their back to you it's Bill Alloway up this end—and he's been a cooper 38 years I think it is. Alongside Bill it's Jim Ekas, head stacker over to the warehouse. Then my brother William and my brother-in-law Tom. And then as I said—it's me standing up.

Look at the old timers that help us put up our Family's Whiskey!

Lots of these fellows was making whiskey before ever you were born

I take it there must be a lot of folks wondering who we got helping us fill all the orders that's piling in for this Family's Whiskey of ours. Well I don't know of any better way of showing you than letting you look the men over yourself in this photo here. These men were born and bred in the whiskey business you might say.

Take old Dan Coyle behind the bottle there. He was working with Pa Wilken 42 years ago. And as more than likely you've heard—Pa Wilken's personal experience with whiskey making comes to something even more than 42 years. And that's not mentioning all Grandpa Wilken's experience either. So there's more to The Wilken Family Whiskey than its only just being our Family's Recipe. It's the men that help us make it—real old timers that have been making whiskey their whole life long—or pretty close to it anyways!

Savoyards Are Acclaimed for 'Gondoliers'

Yesterday's Performances Preserved Standard of Brilliant Week.

"THE GONDOLIERS." The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, from London, presents the operetta in two acts, written by Sir William S. Gilbert and composed by Sir Arthur S. Sullivan, with scenery, properties and costumes designed by Charles Ricketts, R. A., and orchestra under the direction of Isidore Godfrey. At the National Theater. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. J. Whitney.

Luiz .....John Dean
Don Alhambra Del Bolero .....Sydney Granville
Marco Palmieri.....Derek Oldham
Giuseppe Palmieri.....Leslie Rands
Duchess of Plaza-Toro.Evelyn Gardiner
Casilda .....Brenda Bennett
Gianetta .....Sylvia Cecil
Tessa .....Marjorie Eyre
Inez .....Josephine Curtis
Chorus of Gondoliers, Contadine, Men-at-Arms, Heralds and Pages.

"The Gondoliers" was presented last evening by the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company and with that meager, yet expressive and entirely comprehensive statement, the current performance should be sufficiently reviewed.

It is on such occasions as these that one feels the inadequacy of even superlatives adequately to represent the unusual musical and artistic treat spread by this distinguished London company.

After the reviews that have appeared the last three mornings, surely no one at this time needs to be told of the excellence of the Savoyards, of how they make vividly real the more or less imaginative characters and narrative of Sir William Schwenck Gilbert, of how they imbue with new lilt, melody and harmony the titillating score of Sir Arthur Seymour Sullivan, or of how they stage the operetta in colorful sumptuousness.

And what has been said of the earlier works is no less applicable to yesterday's matinee and evening production of "The Gondoliers; or, The King of Barataria." It was superb.

Principals Score Again.

If one were obliged to single a few of the company out for especial mention—and such obligation really ought not to be imposed—one might call attention to Sydney Granville, as Don Alhambra Del Bolero, the Grand Inquisitor. With him, abetted by Martyn Green, as the Duke of Plaza-Toro, there is precious little left to be desired for truly smart reading of the Gilbert comedy.

The romances are done by Derek Oldham and Leslie Rands, the gondoliers, and Sylvia Cecil and Marjorie Eyre, the contadine, with Brenda Bennett and John Dean carrying the climactic royal revelation.

The other members of the cast and the chorus gave excellent support to the principals. No little credit should also be given Isidore Godfrey for his admirable direction of the augmented orchestra.

4 Feared Drowned As Car Leaves Road

Newark, N. J., Jan. 21 (AP).—State troopers here reported a car believed to contain four persons had plunged off a nearby highway into the Barge Canal shortly before 11 o'clock tonight.

Identity of the occupants was not learned immediately.

Troopers who rushed to the canal bank said it would probably take at least two hours to extricate the car from the canal.

Brewer Hands Out $100 Checks on His Birthday

Storz smiled and said, "You've had a surprise for me, now I have one for you."

Then he handed every employe a personal check for $100.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Gladys Swarthout, Soprano Star of Opera, Screen And Radio, Arrives in the Capital This Morning

Diva Will Add One More Distinguished Name to Long List of Celebrities Here for International Premiere of 'Champagne Waltz,' at the Palace; Mr. Barry Pinch Hits on Short Notice; Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor Coming to Town; Chat of the Current Theater and Blackstone, Wizard.

GLADYS SWARTHOUT, singing star of stage, screen and radio, and one of America's foremost lyric sopranos, will arrive in Washington this morning to add one more distinguished name to the long list of celebrities who will be in the National Capital tonight to add luster to the "international premiere" of "Champagne Waltz," under the sponsorship of the White House Correspondents Association, in Loew's Palace Theater at 10 o'clock.

BELL.

Miss Swarthout, who costars with Fred MacMurray in this Paramount "silver jubilee" production, has rearranged her concert tour to make possible her presence here tonight. She will arrive in Washington from Asheville at 8:30 this morning and will be greeted by a considerable company of Loew, Paramount and press representatives. Proceeding directly to the Mayflower, Miss Swarthout will interview the press probably at about 9:30. The remainder of the day will be devoted to a particularly crowded social calendar.

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount and honor guest of the silver jubilee celebration will spend this morning receiving friends at the Carlton and will entertain Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen at luncheon, after which the day will be given over to completion of plans for one of the most distinguished motion picture events in the history of the cinema in Washington.

As long as we are on the topic of distinguished visitors to the Capital, it might as well be divulged now as later that according to an eleventh-hour bulletin from Eastern Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, of Loew's, Inc., Robert Taylor and Jean Harlow, two of Hollywood's most radiant prsonalities positively will be in Washington for the President's Birthday Ball celebrations on January 30.

Mr. Barron made this illustrious announcement following a conference at Union Station with Louis B. Mayer, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in charge of production, who stepped off his train briefly en route to Florida, especially to make known his company's intention of participating whole-heartedly in the birthday ball celebrations and the admirable purpose they serve to aid. Similar sentiments were expressed by Sales Manager Al Lichtman and Howard Strickling, head of the M-G-M Hollywood press department, who are accompanying Mr. Mayer on his Florida jaunt.

Mr. Mayer is making an expensive concession in permitting the presence in Washington of Miss Harlow and Mr. Taylor since work will be stopped on their current productions to enable them to make the Washington trip. However, he deems the humanitarian object of the enterprise of sufficient importance to justify the temporary cessation of productional activity. The exact date of the arrival of the stars from Hollywood will be made known in due course.

* * * *

Having arrived at the opening performance of the Washington Civic Theater's production of Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" after a preliminary announcement had been made, yesterday's listing of the cast failed to credit Charles Barry with an excellent performance in the role of Clarence Little, the grocery store keeper.

Mr. Barry was called upon to assume the role on 24 hours' notice, vice Frederick V. Rand, erroneously given credit for the enactment of the role.

Under the circumstances, the merit of Mr. Barry's work is considerably magnified.

* * * *

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, plans a preview of "You Only Live Once," costarring Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda, Monday afternoon at 1:45 o'clock, following which there will be a cocktail party in the quarters of the Variety Club in the Willard and then a six-telephone hook-up with Hollywood whereby it will be possible to interview Miss Sidney across the continent. This sounds very tricky, but usually works out very well.

I once interviewed Margaret Sullavan, in New York, by phone and on another occasion Irene Dunne in Hollywood and on still another Nelson Eddy in Norfolk. All were chummy and delightful chats as clearly and easily audible as a local phone call.

Miss Dunne and I had rigged up a sort of working script in advance, which we promptly abandoned after the first item. From then on, we simply had a swell time talking with each other informally, intimately and with a good deal of kidding thrown in on the side—both sides, as a matter of fact.

I hope it will be that way on Monday.

Take a tip from a friend and don't get into a card game with this fellow Harry Blackstone, who comes to the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater today to headline an hour or so of black magic. The chap is poison.

At the Variety Club a night or so ago, Blackstone whipped out a pack of cards and with no lighting effects, no stage illusion of any sort and no remoteness of audience to make his tricks easier, baffled a roomful of gullibles to the point where they were willing to scream in the futility of their bewilderment.

With an uncanny dexterity, a mental perception that amounts almost to psychic insight and a digital skill that would slay you cold in your tracks, Blackstone whipped those pasteboards around in a manner that was utterly amazing and completely incomprehensible, even to those of us who have been around awhile and were watching him closest.

I'm telling you, don't get into a card game with him—and if you think you haven't any white rabbits in your hat, you also are crazy!

Geographic Society Will Hear Author

Strange sights of strange peoples in strange places will be revealed to members of the National Geographic Society Friday night at Constitution Hall when Alan J. Villiers, author of deep-sea yarns, describes what he and his youthful crew saw while visiting the Singapore-Sidney leg of his recent round-the world voyage.

Villiers, who has been sailing full-riggers since he was a boy, has appeared before the society for several lecture seasons. His descriptions of rounding tempestuous Cape Horn in the famous grain races from Australia to Liverpool, have been popular with Washington audiences.

With motion pictures illustrating his remarks, he will describe peoples who greeted him on his last voyage, who have shown little evidence of contact with white men.

Ted Lewis Settles Suit.

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—A suit to recover $82,500 in damages from Ted Lewis, the bandleader—the aftermath of an automobile accident in which two of the three plaintiffs were injured in 1933 when Lewis' automobile overturned near Pontiac, Ill.—was settled for $3,500 today shortly after the case came to trial before Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer.

Doomed Man's Wife Has Right to Rewed

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP).—The wife of a man under sentence of death has the legal right to remarry, the appellate division ruled today, on the grounds that such a man is already dead under common law.

The court said that the women's second husband cannot obtain an annulment of their marriage on the ground that his wife already had a husband living when she married him.

The appellate division handed down this ruling in reversing Referee Harold J. Hinman's decision annulling the marriage of Harry P. Jones, of Albany, to Nellie C. Jones. Mrs. Jones previously was the wife of Clyde P. Montgomery, sentenced to death in North Carolina in 1922.

Of all Joan Crawford's collection of 10,000 phonograph records, the Bing Crosby's are most worn. Sonja Henie's ice skating thrills me the same way Paul Robeson's voice does. Candidates for prettiest legs: Evelyn Venable (but is she stingy with sight of them!) Must be tough for glamorous stars to look that way with head colds. Bill Robinson uses no set dance routine, so Mrs. Bill goes along to memorize steps when he teaches Shirley Temple. Bing Crosby reminds me of Little Tommy Tucker who Sang For His Supper. Spencer Tracy, after working among frozen fish for two weeks, left a cafe hurriedly when people at an adjoining table dined on codfish balls.

*Lunching with Frances Farmer at Paramount yesterday, we both ordered ham and eggs. Especially indicative of the spirit of the Hollywood actor is this little true story about a certain juvenile who must for obvious reasons be nameless. He had been out of work for months, and was actually down to a budget of one meal a day, when from out of the blue he was blessed with a job. Pay day rolled around and this young actor's kitchen needed groceries like Johnny Weismuller generally needs a haircut? But his first act after he had cashed his check was to rush to a flower shop and purchase eight potted plants for his one-room apartment.

Bathtub Slayer And 3 Others Are Executed

Woman Novelist's Killer, Traced by String, Dies in Chair.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 21.—John Fiorenza, convicted of the sensational bathtub murder of Nancy Titterton, New York housewife, and three colored men, perpetrators of other murders, were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison tonight. Fiorenza, the second of the four to die, entered the execution chamber at 11:09 p. m. and was pronounced dead at 11:12.

Fighting to the last to prove he was temporarily insane when he strangled the novelist to death in her Beekman place, New York apartment last April 10, Fiorenza lost hope of getting a communtation to life imprisonment because of another bathtub murder in New York.

Colored Man Held.

Fiorenza blamed the murder of Mary Harriet Case as ruinnig his own chances to escape the chair. Mrs. Case was killed January 11 and her body flung into a bathtub. Major Green, Harlem colored man, is being held as her slayer.

"Before that happened," Fiorenza told death house keepers, "I thought I had a chance."

The small dark-haired killer, who has a scar on his right jaw and a rash on his left, was responsible for one of the most brutal passion slayings in recent years. Fiorenza returned to the Titterton apartment the same afternoon, "found" the body and telephone police.

Born in poverty, with judgment distorted by sex, Fiorenza called on Mrs. Titterton on April 9, to take a love seat away for repairs. He said he was excited by the soft-voiced woman and determined to return the next day.

Obsessed by his criminal idea, Fiorenza skipped reporting to his probation officer on April 10 and went to Mrs. Titterton's apartment. In his pocket he carried a 52-inch length of upholsterer's twine from his shop.

Mrs. Titterton was surprised to see him but allowed him to enter when he said he wanted to talk about the seat. She was dressed and held a flimsy garment in her hand. Fiorenza moved about the apartment suggesting places for the love seat.

In the bedroom, he suddenly whirled on her, seized the garment and jammed it into her mouth. Mrs. Titterton struggled frantically and tore the gag from her mouth long enough to cry:

"Please don't hurt me."

Fiorenza threw her down on one of the twin beds, bound her wrists with the cord and ripped off her clothing. He took the pajama top and a thin dressing jacket and knotted these about her throat.

After his victim stopped struggling, Fiorenza dragged her into the bathroom and placed her face down in the tub. She was dressed only in stockings which had fallen down to the ankles and a slip.

Fiorenza slashed away the twine and tucked the pieces into his pocket. But he passed over a 13-inch piece lying beneath the woman's body. Mrs. Titterton was still gasping when Fiorenza left, but although she inhaled some water, she died from strangulation.

Lou Titterton, the woman's husband, was at his National Broadcasting Co. offices.

Fiorenza returned to the upholstering shop. He and his employer, Theodore Kruger then took the love seat to the Titterton apartment. They found the body and Fiorenza telephoned police.

For 11 days police questioned scores of suspects, traced every conceivable clew and finally turned to the laboratory. There the strands of the twine were compared with hundreds of others and at last it was traced to Kruger's shop. Fiorenza confessed after seven hours' examination and was found guilty May 28.

Three colored men who were executed with him were Chester White, 33, who killed Willie Howard and Fannie Davis in Nassau County, March 31; Frederick Fowler, 19, and Charles Ham, 20, who killed Harry Deussing, a butcher, last April 3, in his shop in New York. Herbert Russell, 37, who was to die tonight for the murder of Martin L. Harris during a holdup March 7, 1933, escaped with a commutation to life imprisonment.

North Carolina House Favors Court Increase

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 21 (AP).—The House passed a bill today to increase the number of Associate Justices of the Supreme Court from four to six and the Senate received a model child labor measure backed by the State Department of Labor.

Without debate the Representatives approved the court increase by a new constitutional amendment, to become effective July 1, and sent it to the Senate.

Reinhardt Hit Most Talked Of New York Play

Has Taken Place as the Greatest of German Genius' Works.

Saluted by a barrage of unanimous praise from Manhattan's most hard-boiled critics, which was summed up by a news magazine's report that "it is the only theatrical production that has ever deserved the adjectives of stupendous and colossal," "The Eternal Road," Max Reinhardt's great drama-spectacle, at the Manhattan Opera House, though less than two weeks on its way, is already the most-talked-of production in New York.

It gave its first performance on January 7, after more than three years of preparation and rehearsals, before an audience that rivalled the most glittering Hollywood premiere as far as notables are concerned. First-night critics thereupon pounded out on their typewriters such phrases as "an achievement beyond comparison," "visual beauty and magnificence such as the modern theater has never seen equalled," "the stage spectacle of all stage spectacles," "breath-taking beauty," "magnificent," "exquisite," "amazing," "lovely," "deeply thrilling," "incomparable" and other superlatives that are rarely seen in drama columns.

Reinhardt's Masterpiece.

It was universally agreed that of all the world-famous productions which "The Little Wizard of Leopoldskron," as critic John Anderson titled Reinhardt, has staged, this one is his master-work.

Into its making went $463,000; the complete remodeling of the huge Manhattan Opera House originally built by the late Oscar Hammerstein as a rival to the Metropolitan; enlarging of the stage to three times the height of that in any ordinary large-size theater; enough electrical wiring and power to supply fifteen productions; the work of more than 200 stagehands and carpenters to construct and set the tremendous five-level stage; and at least 14 times the usual number of rehearsals required for the usual large-scale production.

During the three crowded acts which unfold a story of modern times interwoven with the greatest and most dramatic episodes of Biblical history, 300 actors, dancers and singers appear before the spectators. A corps of musicians and singers, hidden in a pit beneath the stage and unseen by the audience, their music brought into the farthest reaches of the huge theater by an ingenious system of multiple amplifiers, is used in addition. Some 2,200 lighting cues signal the amazing color changes sweeping over the great spectacle. New York Edison Co. especially constructed a vault beneath the stage with two transformer stations to provide the current needed.

The creative invention of four Titans of the theater went into the making of "The Eternal Road."

The Four Titans.

Franz Werfel, whose "Forty Days of Musa Dagh" was one of last year's outstanding best sellers, and whose earlier drama, "Goat Song," produced by the Theater Guild, is considered a modern classic in the theater, is author of the script and the lyrics. Werfel combines, like Shaw, wide popularity with applause from the most demanding of the critical fraternity for his books and plays, and through his writings has been able to buy himself a Viennese palace, described as the most luxurious writing dugout in the world.

Reinhardt, who staged the entire production of drama, dance, music and spectacle, at 62 is considered the foremost theater director in the world. America first became aware of him through "The Miracle," which he produced here in 1923.

Norman Bel Geddes, the designer whose boldness and originality conceived the breath-taking scenic effects in "The Eeternal Road," is also the producer and scenic designer of "Dead End," now in its successful second year. He created the settings for the American production of Reinhardt's "Miracle" and his realistic settings for a skyscraper scene on the stage in a recent play made news.

Kurt Weill, composer of the music for the production, which rivals an operatic score in scope and depth, is the outstanding modern composer for the theater. Less than 32, he has written the music for more than a dozen productions.

Lisbon in Terror As Bomb Explodes

Lisbon, Portugal, Jan. 21 (AP).—Terror gripped this Portuguese capital tonight as a second bomb exploded in the war ministry wounding five men. Police blamed Communists.

A staircase between the first and second floors was blown up in a repewal of last night's terroristic attacks on public buildings of the city, while authorities rushed guards to strategic points and started a roundup of persons suspected of complicity.

The latest bomb had been placed outside the minister's cabinet room. A postman and a porter were among those injured in the explosion.

Soviet Denies Seizing Japanese Steamships

Moscow, Jan. 21 (AP).—Official quarters denied tonight Japanese steamers had been seized at Vladivostok. They asserted customs officials found the crews had committed illegalities, that some "compromising" articles were seized and the ships then allowed to procede.

(Tokyo advices said the steamer Kongo Maru was seized at Vladivostok and that the steamer Siberia Maru had been subjected to an eight-hour search.)

Pollution Control Bill Introduced in House

A Federal program of pollution control in navigable streams, long sought by Virginia interests, was proposed to Congress yesterday by Representative Pfeifer (Democrat), of New York.

Pfeifer introduced a bill to create a board of pollution control, headed by the Secretary of War and including three members to be appointed by the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Farley Laud Work Done by Miss Dewson

Director of Woman's Division of Democratic National Committee Praised at a Testimonial Breakfast at Hotel Here.

Mrs. Roosevelt and James A. Farley were among those who paid tribute to the political services of Miss Molly Dewson, director of the women's division of the Natoinal Democratic Committee at a testimonial breakfast yesterday at the Washington Hotel.

The event, called the Molly Dewson Roundup, was held under auspices of the women's division of the National Democratic Committee. It was attended by about 200 Democratic women leaders, many of them visitors here for the Inaugural.

The program followed the "reporter plan," which was instituted by Miss Dewson to educate Democratic women for political work. Mrs. Roosevelt, wearing a red dress, gray squirrel coat and black hat, was given an ovation when she was introduced as the "senior reporter" of the United States and "an expert on Molly Dewson."

"The outstanding thing Molly Dewson has done for the Democratic women of the United States has been to make them educate themselves," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "She has also succeeded in making people do things and feel happy in doing them."

Reviewing her long association with Miss Dewson in welfare and political work, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "She always expected the best of me and I tried to give it though many times she must have had her faith shaken in me. I am glad of the opportunity I had to work with her because with her practical ability she has always kept ahead of her the ideals that lay back of her practical achievements."

Mr. Farley said that no individual had contributed more to the "results of the last election" than Miss Dewson. "The women of America were never organized in any election as they were in the last one under Molly Dewson," he declared. He urged the women to continue to work in the next four years to "put over the program of President Roosevelt" in the same way that they had worked to re-elect him.

Miss Josephine Roche, assistant secretary of the Treasury, told of Miss Dewson's work in the National Consumers' League with Florence Kelly. She said this had led in the political field to her mobilizing a "force of women back of a human-rights program."

Representative Mary T. Norton, who spoke on Miss Dewson's political activities, termed her "one of the most practical idealists in politics today."

Other speakers included Miss May Ward, immigration commissioner of Boston; Mrs. June Fickel, former assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the WPA; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, controller of the mint; Mrs. Charles Tillett, jr., former head of the Democratic Women's Speaker Bureau in the recent campaign; Mrs. Emma Guffey Mille, Democratic national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, and Representative Nan Wood Honeyman, of Oregon. Miss Lavinia Engle, Maryland Democratic leader, presided.

The national board of management of the Children of the American Revolution held its January meeting in the administration building of the D. A. R. yesterday morning with the president, Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, presiding.

The only State director present was Mrs. Starling Peterson, of Florida, who gave an outline of the C. A. R. projects in her State. She spoke of the character-building value of the D. A. R. school in Tamassee, S. C., and expressed disappointment because she could not send an underprivileged child from Florida there with the contribution from her State.

Mrs. Sinclair stated that the D. A. R. has only two schools for mountain children which they wholly support, Tamassee and Kate Duncan Smith in Alabama, though they contribute to 13 and furnish many scholarships and large quantities of old clothing to Crossnore, N. C. In these schools the Children of the American Revolution support as many children as their budget will allow.

Mrs. William Wagner, the registrar, reported 187 new members, also that 250 papers had been returned for lack of proper data. These, she said, were accumulated over several years. The board authorized her to secure the services of Mrs. Elmer Curry, genologist, until all papers were brought up to date.

Plans for the national convention were formed, which will include, besides the usual pilgrimages to Mount Vernon and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolution, a visit to the rotunda of the Capitol, where wreaths will be placed at the statues of the 11 Revolutionary heroes there. This ceremony will be in charge of Mrs. Amos A. Fries.

The objectives and attainments of the Women's Workers' Council of Palestine was explained by Mrs. Beba Idelson, secretary of the council, at the Jewish Community Center last night. The meeting was called by the District of Columbia units of the Pioneer Women's Organizations of America.

Mrs. Idelson has a first-hand knowledge of the Arab-Jewish difficulties in Palestine. She expressed the belief that this problem will eventually be settled.

She expains that the Jews, especially the working class, do not want to exploit the Arabs. The Jews are considering only the possibility to utilize free land that has never been utilized by the Arabs.

In this way Mrs. Idelson believes that the Jews can establish their own economy and live happily side by side with the Arabs. She claims that better working conditions for Jewish laborers of Palestine also will benefit the Arab laborers.

The Women's Workers Council is still continuing its work for German refugee girls, she said. The work for refugees is being mainly supported through the efforts of the Pioneer Woman's Organization, the American affiliate of the Women's Workers Council of Palestine. It is in the interest of this work that Mrs. Idelson is touring America.

The members of the Young Democratic Clubs of America celebrated the second Inaugural of President Roosevelt yesterday at a luncheon in the Shoreham Hotel. Besides the Postmaster General and other members of the Democratic National Committee the guests included representatives of the clubs from each State. Each of the honor guests made a brief address. Frank Wickhem, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., president of the Young Democratic Clubs, presided.

The twenty-ninth meeting of the Columbia Historical Society will be held at the Mayflower Hotel January 25 at 8:15 p. m. Allen C. Clark, president, will preside.

The Daughters of Isabelle, Circle 178, will hold their annual card party at the Hamilton Hotel January 25. The proceeds will go to charity.

Included in the list of patronesses are:

Mrs. Margaret C. Belt, Mrs. Mary W. Buchanan, Mrs. Thomas A. Baldwin, Mrs. James B. Buckley, Mrs. John Cammack, Miss Jennie L. Coleman, Miss Margaret M. Colpoys, Mrs. Charles H. Dieck, Miss Elizabeth J. Dolan, Miss Katherine Donohoe, Mrs. John B. Dwyer, Mrs. May Fay, Miss Anne M. Ferguson, Mrs. James B. Flynn, Mrs. James G. # Miss Hepburn, Hughes Elude Waiting Crowd

Star Refuses to Discuss Rumored Plan to Wed; Sportsman Hides.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Prospects for the wedding tonight of Katharine Hepburn, stage and screen star, and Howard Hughes, wealthy holder of air speed records, dimmed when County Clerk Michael Flynn closed his office and asserted he would issue no more marriage licenses before morning.

Meanwhile the two principals in the rumored romance were in hiding. It was not even certain Hughes was in the city, but there was strong evidence he was staying at the same hotel where Miss Hepburn has been registered.

So certain were many persons that the actress and Hughes would appear at the license bureau that a crowd estimated at 300 jammed the office and corridor. Newspaper and newsreel cameramen set up equipment, but saw nothing more unusual than half a dozen policemen clearing a path to the license counter for less publicized applicants.

A single statement came from Miss Hepburn during the day; relayed by a hotel publicity man. It said:

"I won't be out all day. And even if I do, I won't make any statement, either to confirm or deny marriage plans."

The actress is appearing in "Jane Eyre." Hughes was reported to have come here for the opening night, January 11. Then he left, and before coming back set a new transcontinent speed record of 7 hours 28 minutes and 25 seconds.

Hughes has never been married. Miss Hepburn was divorced in Mexico in May, 1934, from Ludlow O. Smith, of New York.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

When the Opponents Bid.

When only one pair at the bridge table is engaged in the bidding, it is amazing to see how often the other pair of players adopts an attitude of complete disinterest in the proceedings. Many times, when there were long waits between the bids, I have heard a player say to his opponents, "Fight it out, boys. Just wake me up when you've reached a final contract." The shortsightedness of such an attitude is best expressed by showing the swing which can be created by careful attention to the bidding. In the hand below, South was wide awake while East and West were bidding their slam. Consequently, he won 100 points instead of losing 1,430 points.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ 9 5 ♡ 3 ◇ 8 6 5 4 2 ♣ 8 5 4 3 2
West: ♠ 8 4 3 2 ♡ A K 10 9 7 ◇ K Q ♣ K Q
East: ♠ K Q J 10 7 ♡ Q J 2 ◇ A 7 3 ♣ A 6
South: ♠ A 6 ♡ 8 6 5 4 ◇ J 10 9 ♣ J 10 9 7

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass | 3 ♡ |
| Pass | 4 ♡ | Pass | 4 ♠ |
| Pass | 4 N T | Pass | 5 ♡ |
| Pass | 6 ♠ | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

West's forcing takeout of three hearts was an example of one of the rare cases when such a bid is made with only one first-round control. Ordinarily, the forcing takeout shows such power that the slam connotation is unmistakable. Naturally, most players hesitate to make so slammish a bid without two Aces or an Ace and a void. West's plenitude of Kings gave assurance that his partner must have Aces if his hand was strong enough for a slam try.

On lead against the slam contract, South thought carefully before touching any of his cards. In each minor suit, there was a safe lead from the top of a sequence of honors. But South disdained the ordinarily excellent sequence leads. He remembered that during the bidding West had jumped hearts to the level of three thus showing a five-card suit. East had raised—indicating a three-card suit. With at least eight hearts in the combined hands of the opponents, South could see that his partner could not hold more than one heart.

Having arrived at this conclusion, South opened a low heart. The particular card he led was of little consequence as it turned out, but he led the six for deception's sake. Declarer won and immediately tried to take out the trumps. But South stuck to his original plan and took the first trump trick with the Ace. Another heart lead was then trumped by North and the slam was defeated.

Co-operative Education Meeting Set for Oct. 20

Richmond, Jan. 21 (AP).—Dr. W. T. Sanger, president of the Virginia Co-operative Education Association, announced after a meeting of the board of managers today that October 20 had been selected as the tentative date for the annual convention in Roanoke.

The board voted to change the name of the association's junior division, numbering about 90,000, from the Junior Community League, to the Student Co-operative Association, and agreed to continue the course in community work which the board sponsors at the summer school session of the University of Virginia.

Plans for the convention of the National Parent-Teacher Congress here in May also were discussed.

Off With the Dance.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.

MRS. JACK BENNY, who loves to dance, danced with Johnnie Green's brother for almost an hour. Benny watched the twirling couple, turned to Green, and warned: "If they dance another number, I'm going to kick that brother of yours right in my wife's back." . . . The film scouts are eyeing Stanley Worth, Vincent Lopez's vocalist . . . Fannie Brice and Beatrice Lillie were discussing the recent series of plane crashes. "I'll never go up in a plane," Fannie vowed. "I'd go if it were necessary," Miss Lillie confessed. They turned to Marc Connelly and asked: "How about you, Marc? Would you go up in a plane?" . . . "Listen," he answered, "I get dizzy when I stand in a thick rug."

WALTER HUSTON still can't understand why the critics haven't been favorable to him as Othello and commended his "Dodsworth" performance instead. That movie was revived here this week—and one of the lines Huston speaks in "Dodsworth" is: "What do you want me to do? I'm no Othello."

LOU HOLTZ, who is returning from England shortly, sustained a severe shock to his vanity last week when he met Arthur Tracy at the Savoy and wanted to show the Street Singer how Anglicized he had become . . . Let's take the train to Denham," Holtz proposed, "and I'll show you how, at the movie studios there. They think I'm a real Britisher." . . . They walked to Charing Cross Station and Tracy asked the ticket vender: "How much?" . . . "Three shillings eight pence," the vender replied . . . Holtz then stepped up and in his best Continental manner, asked: "I just cahn't remembah h' much the farrre is from Chahring Cross to Denham. So annoying donchaknow? Ruhlly annoying. How much?" . . . Without even looking up, the ticket vender answered: "Ninety-one cents."

A LADY who is married to a noted Yale Club broker bribed an employe there to report to her each detail of her spouse's activities—the phone calls he makes and receives, who visits him, what times he comes and goes, etc. . . . all for purposes of securing evidence for a divorce. After long weeks, the break finally came. "Tonight," was the tip, "your husband will visit a lady whom he phones constantly. Here's the address. He'll be there at 11" . . . # Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the National Symphony Orchestra under Hans Kindler with Joseph Szigeti as soloist in Constitution Hall Thursday night. Program: Overture to "Mon Ami Pierrot" (Samuel L. M. Barlow), Variations on a Theme of Chaikovski (Arenski), Galanta Dances (Zoltan Kodaly), Violin Concerto in D major (Brahms).

Bravos, frantic applause and a half-dozen recalls were the aftermath of Joseph Szigeti's masterly and eloquent reading of the Brahms concerto last evening. Whole rows of auditors made no move to depart as the ovation went on; musicians of the orchestra laid aside their instruments to applaud their distinguished colleague, and even the tympanist tapped his drumheads. The enthusiasm of the demonstration went no whit beyond what the artist merited.

There is in Mr. Szigeti's playing an intellectual poise that dominates every clean-cut phrase without restraining in the least the flow of emotional expression. One feels that he is projecting music with a cool brain and a rapid pulse. His polished technique and his impeccable intonation hold one's attention for a time, only to be taken for granted as one becomes absorbed with him in the ideational content of the concerto. While he is a virtuoso, the spell that he casts is not that of virtuosity but of splendid musicianship.

The magnificence of the concerto on the creative plane was matched by the sheer technical accomplishment on the plane of execution. Mr. Szigeti's fine sense of proportion, his subtleties of accent, his delicate perception of tonal nuance, and his unerring taste were matter to give the most captious auditor satisfaction. His was a triumph of pure artistry. That its salience was so sharp was due in no small measure to the sympathy with which Dr. Kindler kept the orchestral pattern in the right perspective.

Two local premieres spiced the first part of the program. Samuel Barlow's overture to his one-act musical legend, "Mon Ami Pierrot," is an excellent piece of writing and well worthy of a later hearing this season. Lively and melodious, harmonically piquant, and just modern enough not to be dated, it is clever and interesting music. The allusions to Lully's style are so adroitly made that they are never obvious but to be caught only by the cognescenti.

Zoltan Kodaly's "Dances of Galanta" are the most attractive Hungarian dances since those of Brahms. Like his predecessor in this field, Kodaly has used authentic gypsy material, but he has gone beyond Brahms in the complexity of harmonic treatment. Tonalities are always preserved, however, and one feels no extravagance of dissonance. Most important of all, he has retained and emphasized that strain of pastoral nostalgia which is an integral part of gypsy passion.

Arenski's orchestral version of the slow movement from his A minor string quartet was a delightful interlude between the two novelties. The compliment to Chaikovski is embodied not only in the choice of the theme for elaboration, but in the very character of the variations themselves. The style of the transmogrifications to which the tune is subjected might be attributed to Chaikovski were Arenski's name to disappear from the score. And there is that best tribute of all, the quotation from the famous "Andante Cantabile," embedded in the center.

College Revenue Rises.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—St. John's College reported incomes of $83,000 in 1935 and $85,000 in 1936. There were 51 scholarships given at the college, 25 of them full scholarships and 26 for tuition only.

Retail Stores Increased 7% In Depression

111,000 Businesses Begun From 1929-35, Federal Aide Declares.

Reviewing the business of retail and department stores for the past year, Wilford L. White, chief of the marketing research division of the Department of Commerce, told a group of store executives in New York that a 7 per cent increase in the number of stores emerged from the depression.

This increase in actual units amounted to 111,000 new stores, which means on a basis of population there is a retail store for every 77 people in the United States.

While stores increased in number, Mr. White told the National Retail Dry Goods Association in his address that between 1929 and 1935 total retail sales for all types of establishments declined 32 per cent. For department stores, however, sales fell off only 24 per cent.

Department store wages declined less than wages paid in other stores. For every 100 employed in department stores in 1929, 90 are on pay rolls today, he said. These 90 received 76 per cent of the wages they received in 1929. While the 1935 pay rolls decreased, wages received by part-time employes increased 47 per cent, he said.

Mr. White told the retailers that the average wages paid are lower than in other types of "white collar" work, principally because so many employes are women. He said that legislation now affecting retailers is "to do what you businessmen have not been able to do for yourselves." He advised the group to pay more attention to the interests of the consumer and less to their own particular demands, if they are to hold their business gains of the past year or so.

Yokohama Greets Eucharistic Party

Yokohama (Friday), Jan. 22 (AP).—With the papal flag flying at her mainmast, the steamer Tatsuta Maru arrived here today from San Francisco with a large party of Americans en route to the International Eucharistic Congress in Manila.

The party was made up of 3 American archbishops, 4 bishops, 11 monsignors, 65 priests and 170 laymen.

While the ship remains in port the Eucharistic delegates will visit Tokyo, Kamakura and other points of interest, using the Tatsuta Maru as their hotel.

Fred J. Simonds, 67, Contractor, Is Dead

Fred J. Simonds, 67, well-known local contractor and builder, died last night at his home, 934 O street northwest. He had been ill for four months.

Mr. Simonds was a native of Washington and had been engaged in the contracting business here for more than 40 years. He was for many years head usher at Immaculate Conception Catholic Church and was a member of the church Holy Name Society.

His wife, Mrs. Ella E. Dick Simonds, survives.

Requiem high mass will be sung at Immaculate Conception Church at 9 a. m. Monday. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Barge Crew Sought In Chesapeake Bay

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—A search was to be resumed in the Chesapeake Bay, near the mouth of the Rappahannock, for two men composing the crew of the barge Accomac who disappeared when the barge broke adrift while in tow.

The tug Startle and the Coast Guard cutter Sebago located the barge ashore on Windmill Point, but the men were not aboard. Officials of the barge company at Baltimore employing the men expressed the belief that they had reached shore safely.

Saitos Offer Opera Tenor At Musicale

Fujwara, Japanese Star, Sings for Guests of Ambassador.

Sciarretti, at Piano, Helps to Entertain Diplomats and Officials.

By Dudley Harmon.

Music in an unfamiliar Japanese key fell strangely but soothingly on American, English and European ears last night when the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained at a musicale. The singer was their countryman, Mr. Yosie Fujiwara, and he was accompanied by Signor Alberto Sciarretti.

In common with most of Washington, Mr. Fujiwara was suffering from a slight cold, but fortunately it wasn't grave enough to interfere with his music. He sang several selections from European opera as well as Japanese songs, and his accompanist gave two solo numbers.

If Mr. Fujiwara, who is an operatic tenor, wants to sing much opera, he will have to remain either in this country or in Europe, for several years to come, according to Mme. Saito.

Not Yet Opera Conscious.

"The Japanese are just beginning to be opera conscious," she said last night. "When we want to hear this kind of music we have to import companies from other countries, but we hope soon to develop our own."

The room where the musicale took place is one of the loveliest in a city which has more than its share of elegant drawing rooms. On the cream colored walls are hung several fine pictures by well known Japanese artists, the clear colors of which contrast well with their light surroundings. Curtains of blue brocade are hung at the windows and over mantels at either end of the room are hung gilt mirrors of a classic simplicity in keeping with the architecture of the embassy.

There was another artist there last night Joseph Szigeti, the Hungarian violinist who played with the National Symphony Orchestra last evening. He arrived with the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi, who had entertained at dinner previously in his honor. The ranking guests at their dinner were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.; Mrs. Claude Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes.

Diplomats Represented.

The diplomatic corps was well represented at this embassy party last evening. There were the Minister of South Africa, Mr. Ralph William Close; Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, wife of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, who wore a chinchilla wrap over her gown; the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen, in a white brocaded gown (Mme. Saito also wore brocade in a pale yellow shade with a corsage of orchids and a double necklace of Japanese pearls); the Counselor of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness Rossi Longhi, and the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz—she wore a black gown with a shawl of black chiffon embroidered in white flowers.

From official and residential society came Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis—she wore green satin and gardenias; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman with Miss Alice and Miss Laura Tuckerman—the two latter were in white, and Miss Laura Tuckerman had a band of rhinestones in her hair; Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, in a deep blue gown with a train; Mrs. William E. Borah, in an ermine wrap; Mrs. McCook Knox, in peach satin and orchids; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie in blue velvet and Mrs. Sherman Miles in black taffeta with a corsage of gardenias.

Mme. Saito was assisted in receiving by Mme. Yoshizawa, wife of the retiring Counselor of the Embassy. She wore a lovely gown of pale blue crepe made with a slight train. The other members of the embassy staff and their wives were also present, and on the alert to see that the guests enjoyed themselves.

Isabel T. Perry Becomes Bride

At a quiet home wedding performed in the presence of members of the family yesterday, Miss Isabel Tracy Perry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cecil Perry, became the bride of Mr. Woolman Gibson Emory, jr., son of Maj. Woolman G. Emory, U. S. M. C., retired, and Mrs. Emory, of San Diego.

The house was decorated with a profusion of spring flowers in pastel shades. Before an improvised altar of palms, roses and gladioli, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Little of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

Miss Perry wore the bridal gown of her great-aunt, Mrs. Merwin McKeig. It is a handsome model of heavy brocaded satin. About the deep V neck and the elbow-length sleeves are bands of pleated satin. At either side and extending halfway down the long, graceful skirt, are panniers of the brocade edged with a fringe of pearls. The skirt of the 70-year-old gown sweeps into a full rounded train, which is bordered by a dainty ruffle of rare old lace. The bride's veil fell from a cap of rose point lace, also a family heirloom, and was held in place by clusters of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls which belonged to her grandmother, Mrs. Isabel Tracy Nash, of St. Louis, for whom she is named. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, who wore a flowing gown of beige chiffon fashioned on princess lines and with a brief shoulder cape.

Maj. Emory acted as best man for his son. Following the ceremony there was a reception for the family. Mrs. Perry, mother of the bride, was costumed in black velvet with a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Emory was unable to come from the West Coast.

Guests at Embassy Musicale

Clem, Post Staff.

Among the many members of Capital society who attended the musicale which the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito gave last evening were Mr. Justiice Willis Van Devanter, of the United States Supreme Court, on the right; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Mr. Justice Roberts, of the Supreme Court, center, and Mrs. Sanford Raridan, sister of Mr. Justice Van Devanter, now making her home here.

Gov. Barrows, Wife Honored At Dinner Here

Rep. and Mrs. Brewster Are Hosts to 80 Guests at Sulgrave Club.

Gov. and Mrs. Lewis O. Barrows of Maine were the guests of honor at a dinner given last evening at the Sulgrave Club by Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster. The German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, was the ranking guest.

Eighty covers were laid in the ballroom, where the long U-shaped dinner table was decorated with crystal urns filled with Premier roses interspersed with silver candlebra. Mrs. Barrows was gowned in turquoise blue brocaded velvet with coral trimmings and wore a corsage of violets and Talisman roses. Mrs. Brewster wore black velvet with a coronation necklace of rhinestones and carried a colonial bouquet.

Among those present were the Egyptian Minister, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef; Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Senator Frederick Hale, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., Senator Bridges, Mme. Cantacuzene, Representative Allen Treadway, Representative Joseph Martin, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, Representative Warren Magnuson, Representative J. Parnell Thomas, Representative and Mrs. James C. Oliver, Representative and Mrs. Clyde H. Smith, Representative and Mrs. Charles R. Clason.

Also Senor and Senora Almenara, Brig. Gen. J. W. Hanson, Col. and Mrs. Philip V. Fleming, Col. and Mrs Frank W Halliday, Lieut. Comdr. J. M. Fernald, Lieut. Charles J. Whiting, Dr. Florence Hale, Hon. and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Hon. and Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mr. Alfred Cohn, of Los Angeles; Maj. Gist Blair, Mr. John Hamilton, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West.

Also Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Crafts, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Fellows, Col. and Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Col. and Mrs. Charles E. Dustin, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Solomon, Mr and Mrs. Eben Whitcomb, Mr. Roy C. # Irish Envoy, Wife Give Dinner Party For High Officials

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite entertained at a dinner in their apartment at the Shoreham Hotel last night.

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, was the ranking guest. Others present were the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Stephen Gibbons, Bishop James H. Ryan of Omaha, Nebr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Mr. Edward J. Flynn, Secretary of the State of New York, and Mrs Flynn; Gen. and Mrs. Edward L. Logan of Boston; Justice and Mrs. Martin T. Manton, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Conboy, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Stafford, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sweeney, all of New York, Senator David L. Robinson and his niece, Miss Penelope Turton, both of Dublin, Ireland.

Society Notes

Mrs. Roosevelt was the honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury. The luncheon was another in the annual series given in honor of the President's wife by the cabinet hostesses.

Mme. Sze, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, will not be "at home" this afternoon, nor will she observe her day at-home again until February 12. Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, will also not observe her "at-home" this afternoon.

The Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mr. Boaz Long, the United States Minister to their country.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, the director of the mint, will entertain at a tea on Monday in honor of Mrs. John Loomis of Cheyanne, Wyo. Mrs. Loomis is active in Democratic politics.

Miss Janet Richards will give her weekly talk this morning at 11 o'clock at the Sulgrave Club. She will speak on spectacular developments in world affairs.

Miss Richards will speak next Wednesday as usual. She postponed her talk this week because of inauguration.

The Misses Anne and Aletha Harcourt will sail from New York today on the Yucatan for a visit of several weeks to Mexico. On their way back to their home in London, they will stop in Washington for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter Fort, of 2711 Thirty-sixth street, are entertaining at a large cocktail party on Saturday.

Capital Hosts Continue Round Of Gay Events

Dinners and Parties Being Held in Large Numbers Despite Weather.

Rainy weather—'flu epidemics—Inauguration festivities—nothing makes a difference in the round of parties being given by members of Washington society. This month the postman must be staggering under an even heavier load of invitations than usual, for here are a few of the parties that either have been or will take place in the next few days:

Lady Lister-Kaye was honor guest at a small luncheon given yesterday by Mr. Clarence Hewes, who, by the way, is leaving February 1 for his New Orleans home. Lady Lister-Kaye also is from Louisiana, having been Miss Gzuargar del Valle before her marriage. She is a sister of Consuelo, Dutchess of Manchester, and an aunt of the present Duchess.

A glimpse ahead on the social schedule: Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock is entertaining at dinner tomorrow evening. Mrs. Blackiston Wilkins is giving a reception earlier in the afternoon. Mrs. Frederick Bugher is entertaining at a dinner Sunday evening and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney have invited friends to lunch that day.

Mrs. Caroline Hastings is giving a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon, and Mrs. Bowler Hull entertained at one yesterday at her home on Massachusetts avenue. And so it goes in the social merry go round! The commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb have issued invitations for a dinner on Friday, January 29, and Mrs. E. Matthew Hanna has asked friends in for luncheon on Sunday, January 31.

POINTED French Heels that slenderize the ankle are the newest fashion in Spring hosiery. Presented in sheer 3-thread Crepe Twist Lady Luxury Hosiery at 1.15. The Pointed effect is carried out in the Handbag of Gabardine and patent leather, 3.00. Exclusively at Hahn's, 1207 F Street. —ADV.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Enid Sims Snow, now fully recovered from the first round of flu that has taken Washington by storm, is up and out and braving the shopping crowds. Saw her on Connecticut avenue yesterday and she had on a very becoming shade of raspberry knit with Alaskan blue scarf knotted at the neck and a small felt hat of the same rich blue.

• • • •

Well, it looks as though our gay young blades are deserting Washington and heeding Horace Greeley's advice—(as far as Chicago). Ben Birch, who has been toying with the idea of writing, for some time, is at last, so it would seem, going to realize his dream. There is another new magazine about to make its debut, and he has more than one finger in the editorial pie. Frank Fowl, too, has found the Windy City of interest and is planning an indefinite visit there.

• • • •

Speaking of visits and trips, Hebe Reynolds and her family, Gen. and Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds, are having a nice one, and have escaped this beastly weather. They are in Panama by now, after a pleasant cruise dow the Atlantic Coast. After greeting old friends (we'd be willing to wager that Alex McCone will be down to meet the ship) and in between parties there are those fascinating shops along the crooked, narrow streets, where one can find perfumes, embroideries and china for a mere song.

More trips—it is tomorrow, I think, that Marjorie Walsh and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop will sail from New York aboard the S. S. Virginia for the West Coast. They are still thinking about an original plan for an "Hawaiian interlude," but nothing is very definite. For several weeks they will be in San Francisco and Los Angeles and if the spirit moves them they will continue on across the Pacific, providing the strikers are willing and the ships are sailing.

• • • •

Suzanne Wilson, vivacious daughter of our Secretary of Labor, Mrs. Paul Wilson, or Miss Frances Perkins (which ever you prefer) has in her winter wardrobe a very becoming gray outfit. She was wearing it when we saw her. The suit is of a medium shade and simply made, leaving fanciness to the hat which handles it well. It—the chapeau—is a pointed model of gray krimmer and was cocked at a most provoking angle.

• • • •

Stopping for a snack at noontime, we ran into Dorothy Tirrell in black with a vermillion feather on her velvet tam. Seeing her reminded us that we had been hearing rumors about her engagement, but because of too many people, we didn't try any questions.

Lunching at the same smart place was Mrs. George St. George, cousin of the President, who really looks much too young to be the mother of a recent bride, and wears her clothes with a typical New York dash. In brown yesterday, her hat was a saucy flat little affair, its lack of brim made up by two fuzzy bells on one side.

Peruvian Attache Honors Former Envoy at Dinner

The Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was ranking guest at a dinner given last evening at the Mayflower by the naval attache of the embassy, Capt. Juan Althaus, and Senora de Althaus, in honor of Senor Don Francesco Trudela, a former ambassador from Peru to this country, and Senora de Trudela.

Senor Trudela is in Washington now as president of the Peruvian Boundary Commission. Senor Dr. Homero Viteri-Lafronte, president of the Ecuadorian Boundary Commission, and Senora de Viteri were included in the company of 18 present, also Dr. V. A. Belaude, of the Peruvian delegation.

Tea Cancelled.

Owing to a death in the family Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler have recalled invitations to the tea which they were to give Sunday afternoon.

Changes Force Two Diplomats To Leave D. C.

Van der Wyck to Sail Tomorrow; De Bayle Goes in Month.

Diplomats in Washington come and go almost as frequently as French cabinets fall. Today brings news of two departures—that of the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Bayle and that of the Secretary of The Netherlands Legation, Jonkheer H. M. van der Wyck.

As often happens when one is in the diplomatic service, Jonkheer van der Wyck has been transferred so suddenly that he will not have time to bid his friends in Washington good-by. He is sailing tomorrow on the Champlain for The Netherlands. After a brief time there he will go to South America as secretary for a trade mission of The Netherlands government. Jonkheer van der Wyck has been in Washington four years.

Many farewell parties are being given in honor of the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de Bayle, who will leave within a month for Nicaragua. On Saturday evening the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos are entertaining in their honor, and on Wednesday the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro are giving a dinner for them.

Senor de Bayle was appointed Minister only last autumn, after having served as Charge d'Affaires for several months. It is rumored that he will be replaced by Dr. C. Brenes Jarquin, who served as provisional President of Nicaragua in the interim between the fall of Juan Sacasa and the election of President Somozo.

Soviet Envoy, Wife Entertain

Ambassador Sze Is Unable to Attend Because of Illness.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky entertained at dinner at the embassy last night in honor of the Ambassador of China and Mme. Sze. Both Ambassador Sze, stricken with a cold, and his hostess, Mme. Troyanovsky, recovering from an operation for appendicitis, were absent. In place of Mme. Troyanovsky, Mrs. Gregory Grigorien, wife of the Attache of the Soviet Embassy, acted as hostess.

In addition to Mme. Sze the guests were Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Bulgaria, Mr. Dimitri Naoumoff; Mme. Hurban, Representative and Mrs. Herman P. Kopplemann, former Senator Hiram Bingham, the Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Mr. Stanley Hornbeck; the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Mr. Josef Nemecek; the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, Mr. K. Oumansky; Gen. and Mrs. Richmond P. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Swagar Sherley, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Comdr. and Mrs. Joseph McGuigen, Mr. George Bowie Chipman, and the Attache of the Soviet Embassy, Mr. J. Grigorien.

Mrs. Atherton Leaves.

Mrs. Charles R. Atherton has returned to the Todhunter School in New York after spending several days at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Atherton chaperoned several students from the Todhunter School, who attended the Inauguration as the guests of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Stag Dinner to Honor South Carolina Man

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde has issued invitations for a stag dinner on Tuesday, February 2, in honor of Mr. Thomas, Roger Drake, of Columbia, S. C., who will be his guest at that time.

The Rev. Mr. MacBryde also will entertain at a buffet supper on January 31 and will have a party of young people as his guests at the Bal Boheme on February 1.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Are Friends Justified in Telling Girl That Her Beau, a Divorced Man, Has Unsavory Past?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have a very dear friend who is keeping company with a divorced man. This man's former wife had many legal grounds for securing a divorce, but chose grounds which would cause herself the least embarrassment. The conduct of our friend in keeping company with this man is, of course, reflecting on her reputation. More so in this case because all of the parties are residents of the same community and the man's past is an open book to a great number of persons and, unfortunately, to many of the girl's friends.

• • • •

We cannot believe the girl knows the true character of the man, but we have hesitated to tell her because we do not definitely know the extent of the present friendship. It is the consensus of opinion that this man has nothing to offer this girl in the way of a happy future.

• • • •

We believe we are correct in saying that opportunity for meeting and retaining the friendship of the finer type of girl is so very limited for a divorced man that no fine girl should feel herself honored by his attentions. We know of two other girls who gave up this man when they became acquainted with his history.

• • • •

We cannot believe this man can correct his habits and wonder if a girl in her position will not always consider herself inferior to those of her friends who did not marry a divorced man. Certainly she can never be proud of being known as the second wife of a man who was divorced because of his own shortcomings. It seems pathetic, because this girl could easily assure herself of a happier future.

• • • •

Should we divulge our information to this girl and risk losing her friendship? Is the second wife of a divorced man ever considered as occupying an enviable position in a commonplace marriage? Very truly yours, TROUBLED PAIR.

Beware of Meddling.

DEAR TROUBLED PAIR: While I sympathize with your concern for the girl and appreciate the unselfish sincerity of your wish to safeguard her happiness, nevertheless I cannot encourage you to interject yourselves and your opinions into what is quite patently her own affair. She may already know everything you have in mind to tell her; and then again she may not; but in either case, she would probably resent what she would construe to be your meddlesome interference, even though she might realize how well-intended it was.

• • • •

I don't quite get the meaning of your last question, concerning the place the second wife of a divorced man might be said to occupy "in a commonplace marriage." If the marriage is "commonplace," as you suggest—by which I suppose you mean neither of the contracting parties is socially remarkable in himself and comes from a commonplace background—I daresay neither person elevates himself to a particularly "enviable position," in the eyes of society in general. But I suppose this holds just as true of persons marrying the first time as for the second time.

• • • •

Divorce has become so prevalent nowadays that marriage between bachelors and divorcees, and between divorced men and maids has lost the element of shock. Few eyebrows are lifted and few fingers are pointed, unless one of the contracting parties happens to be notorious, of course. So long as the world wags on, however, so long will romantic women continue to delude themselves with the belief that attractive bounders can be reformed by love, learning only through bitter experience that such is seldom, if ever, the case. M. H.

Should She Tell Love?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am very much in love with a certain young man but I have always been afraid to tell him so. I am supposed to tell him by the end of this week whether I love him or whether I don't. The reason I have been afraid to commit myself is because of a certain girl who went with him before.

• • • •

She is the sort who is always making trouble for people, coming to see them when she isn't wanted and so on. But she really loves him and would do almost anything to get him back, this I know. He has told me he only thought he loved her and has tried to show in many ways that he really cares for me, but I am afraid he may discover in time that he really loves her and only thinks he cares for me. She is a beautiful girl.

• • • •

If I thought she was the one he really cared for, I would step out of the picture, but since I can't accept his declarations at face value, I wonder whether I should admit my love for him when there is always the possibility I may lose him later? Thanking you for any advice, which I hope you will give as soon as possible, I am, yours truly, BOBBY.

• • • •

A Tactful Admission.

DEAR BOBBY: Why not tell the young man you care for him a great deal; more than you care for any other young man you know just now; but that you can't say definitely whether you are in love with him because you just don't know. This is sufficient reassurance under the circumstances—enough to hold him if he is genuinely pining for encouragement—and yet isn't committing yourself too seriously. You can always save your face, in case he decides he doesn't really love you, by promptly pretending you knew all along you never really loved him, but were only touched by his presumable devotion.

• • • •

Don't tell him how much you love him unless and until he proposes marriage and don't invest the other girl with so much importance. If the young man says he no longer cares for her and you know she is running after him, the right attitude to take is one of genuine indifference. By worrying about her and letting the young man know you are worrying, you are really pushing her to the front as a potential rival and freely granting her a place which she might never be able to achieve of her own efforts if your own mental attitude were more happily detached.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

Princess Frock Snappy With Belt or Without.

A "DATE" DRESS if ever we saw one—this jaunty Claire Tilden princess frock! Here are lines, young yet sophisticated, tuned to mid-season and spring and their whirl of duties and fun! Wear it belted or free, make it with long or short sleeves; it's up to you! There's flattery for all in this becoming silhouette that's broad-shouldered, that curves inward at the waist, glosses down over the hips, and flares again below. And extremely easy to make for all its chic, is Pattern 218! How about wool or cotton challis, soft crepe, or novelty synthetic for this? Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 218 is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number.

Stars Reveal What Charms Most Noticed

What does a man seek first in a woman? What in a man appeals first to a woman?

Hollywood has just contributed some new answers to these eternal questions. United Press reports the following results of a survey among motion picture players:

Of the persons queried, only one believed that a woman's figure should receive first consideration. James Stewart, brave soul, admitted that he sees curves first.

"If a girl's got a pretty figure, she's a pretty girl. Face, hair, and eyes can be made over, but she's got to have a good foundation to build on."

None of the girls cares a hoot for broad shoulders, the answers indicated, since not one of them listed any muscular preferences. Replies ranged from indefinable traits to dimples and the way a person walks.

"A woman may be a breath-taking beauty," said Nelson Eddy, "but if I detect a reflection of hardness in her eyes, I don't think she's pretty."

Eleanor Powell said she looks at a man's legs first. Then, blushing, she explained, "I'm always looking at feet and legs to see if a person would be a good dancer."

Jean Harlow notices a man's clothes first; Clark Gable watches a woman's walk; Robert Taylor, believe it or not, looks for "little trinkets like flowers or brooches which a woman wears;" Maureen O'Sullivan notices white, even teeth; Myrna Loy observes hair, and William Powell says a woman's feet, especially the toes, have a story to tell.

Joans of Arc More Popular On Stage Than Dumb Doras

JANE PLUMMER RICE.

Jane Plummer Rice, who has played both roles of women achievers and clinging vines, says the achievers appeal most to an audience. She takes the part of a crusading spinster in the Civic Theater's current production, "It Can't Happen Here."

Men as Well as Women Prefer the Achieving Heroine, Says Jane Plummer Rice, Who Has Civic Theater's Crusading Role.

THEATER-GOERS today—men as well as women— prefer heroines who "do things" to the typically fragile, eternal clinging-vines of an older theatrical age. So believes Mrs. Jane Plummer Rice, of the Washington Civic Theater's "It Can't Happen Here" cast.

Men have passed through a reconstruction period in the last 20 years in their attitude toward women just as women have changed in their attitude toward life, she says. In the theater, at least, men are now as interested in women of achievement as are women themselves, she adds.

Mrs. Rice should know. Her appearance as Lorinda Pike in "It Can't Happen Here," which opened Wednesday and will run through next Tuesday at Wardman Park Theater, is one of hundreds of roles she has played. She has depicted both Joans of Arc and Daisy Dumbbells.

Her friends, and particularly her friendly but critical husband, much prefer the Joans. She thinks that women's preference for women "who do" rather than women "who are" is natural, and guesses that men also like the doers because they feel more comfortable with them and understand them better than they do determined charmers.

Defines Charm.

Mrs. Rice herself would much rather play the Joans, for she finds so much more in them to play—all the qualities which seem to her to give a woman true charm—which she defines as poise, completeness, understanding, tolerance, humor and purpose.

"It Can't Happen Here" is the highly controversial play by Sinclair Lewis, which the movies dropped as too dangerous, and which concerns itself with a Fascist dictatorship in America.

Lorinda, newspaperwoman and fighter, who suspects the dangers of dictatorship from the first and urges the men of the play to battle it, is particularly interesting to depict, because she is such a timely person, so very much up to the moment in her problems and solutions, her interpreter says. But Mrs. Rice also finds the role a bit more demanding than some of her other favorites. For Lorinda is never able to relax from opening curtain to closing.

Because she particularly admires women, who have warm hearts, but do not go in for splurgy exhibitions of their sympathy and sentiment, Mrs. Rice enjoys most the few moments in the play when Lorinda lets drop just a controlled hint of her deep emotion and sincerity usually so well hidden by a tart tongue and brusque manner.

Girls More Serious.

Women generally are becoming more serious and responsible in their attitude toward life, and less inclined to be butterflies and charmers, Mrs. Rice believes. She bases her belief partly on her observations as teacher of speech and related arts at Mount Vernon Seminary here for 20 years. In that time she has seen many changes in her pupils, most of them daughters of rich families.

In 1917, as a new teacher at the school, she acted as chaperone at parties and watched the girls order one high-priced delicacy after another, never thinking of touching half of them. Today, having passed through a depression which hit the richest first, they have their own little budgets, know the value of money to the last penny, and have definite plans for their futures. However, she does think that the number and elaborateness of modern entertainment has made young persons much less ingenious than those of a decade or so back.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 21.

TED PECKHAM'S guide-escort business continues to thrive, I find, even though the boy wonder from Cleveland has been abroad trying to open a London office, with handsome younger sons as operatives.

ALICE HUGHES.

Peckham really makes a very good thing out of his service, and maintains an office at a midtown hotel. His handsome young men, he claims, are all graduates of the better grade of ivy university—all discreet, gentlemanly and very nifty on the dance floor. Hundreds of lone lady visitors have taken advantage of the Peckham service for a sizable fee and expenses, and so far as I can learn nothing untoward has ever happened.

Such stunts as Peckham's seems to me to be all part of the current vogue for simplifying life until the old-time personal push has practically disappeared. Down in nearby Rutgers University, in Jersey, a senior named J. Douglas Beckwith has actually been running a "date service" for the past two years—socially teaming the students of his alma mama and the young ladies of the nearby New Jersey College for Women. For his services he charges between a quarter and a half-dollar, and heatedly denies that the romantic angle has anything to do with it. A young man wants a young lady of suitable height and terpsichorean talent to go dancing. Beckwith provides her, pockets the fee. They are then on their own!

All this may be very simple and easy, but is it fun? Weren't the old days, when personal initiative and a little harmless flirting counted, more amusing and warming than this date-by-filing-card? I guess I'm not modern!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Society's pet "mystery man," Dr. Rudolph Kummer, is in town again, sitting at his usual luncheon table in the Colony Restaurant and usually surrounded by the prettiest women in the place. Nobody save Alexander Woollcott seems to know much about the doctor, save that he once worked for Max Reinhardt, and always lives on the finest scale. But local society must have its little mystery, and Kummer provides it! . . .

• • • •

Oh, to be in Florida, now that the bangtails are galloping at Hialeah and the flamingoes are preening themselves in the infield! Drat this town in winter—and drat it in summer, too! My lucky operatives down there say that William Rhinelander Stewart and his beautiful blonde, Janet, are the hits of Palm Beach at present—and why not? . . .

• • • •

I find that now and again there is a case of true, enduring love, even here and now. The other day Donna Schuyler Beekman (how's that for a patrician New York handle?) married William Worthy Coleman—after waiting for him for five years! They fell in love in '31, but Donna was only 17—and so darned if they didn't wait, just as they did in the old-time novels. Interesting to note that all our young folks are not hot-heads who rush off to the suburbs in the early morning to be married . . .

• • • •

One of my Christmas presents was one of these new handbags which has a special compartment in which to carry a book. Oddly enough, the thing doesn't look bulky, either, and is a very handy doo-dad for any girl who wants to snatch a chapter on the fly . . .

• • • •

Remember when big blonde Blossom Seeley was one of the wonders of vaudeville, and her husband, Benny Fields, was just part of the act? Now it's reversed, with Benny the big-shot and Blossom out of the picture. I saw them together at a night club not long ago—and realized all over again what funny monkey-tricks life can play!

Anne Louise Strong, who has lived in Russia so many years and who founded the Moscow Daily News, first English paper in the Soviet Union, has come to town, and is being partied all over the place by our leading radicals and Russian sympathizers. White-haired and pink-cheeked, Anne Louise is a human dynamo, who has made it her life work to explain the new Russia to people outside.

French Women Adopt Bright Scots Plaids

The French woman on a country week-end might well be mistaken as fresh from Scotland, for bright plaids never have been so popular. Stiff little berets that jut out over the right eye are made of woolen Scotch plaid and are matched by a gay plaid stock scarf at the neck. Plaid woolen stockings of the same design are warm and practical. The stockings come in full length size or just to the knee with a rubber band woven into the top of the stocking to hold it in place.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Nervous Bowel.

We are engaged constantly in pouring into the stomach a mass of food material that looks good, tastes good and smells good. As soon as it has been swallowed we promptly forget the matter unless the stomach or the intestine or both remind us—sometimes forcibly—that we have made a mistake.

It is not a certain rule, however, that the functions of digestion are always at fault. Behind the secretion of gastric juices and the movements of the intestine lie thousands of nerves which, if disturbed, irritated or upset will interfere decidedly with the assimilation of food. We may then have what is called nervous indigestion or functional bowel distress. Few of us realize the tremendous load we compel the nervous system to carry and that it gets out of balance now and then need not be wondered at. Even the heart may exhibit its effects in skipped beats or extra beats with the sensation of turning flipflops inside the chest.

Modern Strain a Factor.

Back of the nervous bowel lies the stress and strain of modern life. Worry, fear, unhappiness, irritations within the home or while at work, and petty annoyances may culminate in a type of disorder known as nervous fatigue. When these emotional affairs assert themselves in the digestive tract patients may complain of numerous symptoms, chief of which are nausea, vomiting, belching, diarrhea, rumbling noises in the abdomen, collections of gas in the colon, and sometimes abdominal pain.

The problem is primarily one of tracing the difficulty to its source. Is it organic or is it merely functional? If a peptic ulcer is present, if there is some obstruction at the stomach outlet, or if inflammation exists in the colon, we recognize positive tissue changes sufficiently obvious to account for the symptoms. If, on the other hand, no evidence of disease is uncovered, the physician must look deeper into the patient's life habits, diet, nervous responses, etc.

Diet Highly Important.

Of paramount importance is diet. Inasmuch as pain is usually complained of, food should be confined, at the outset, to boiled milk, milk toast, and meat soups containing rice or barley. The digestive tract should be rested as much as possible, even at the risk of mild starvation. If the pain abates within a few days—and it usually will—cooked cereal and boiled rice may be added. Later cheese and meat are allowed.

Remember that all this time there are no vegetables, not even potatoes. If there is a reappearance of pain with loose stools recourse must be had to boiled milk and milk toast for the first few days. Only when the symptoms have practically disappeared should one risk the addition of vegetables and fruits.

Health, Spirits Kept in Tune By Relaxation

Sense of Leisure Possible, No Matter How Hard One's Work.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

A SENSE of leisure is good for both health and spirits. Too few housewives and mothers possess this sense of leisure. Their defense will be, of course, that their work is to blame. After all, with meals to cook, a house to keep, the needs of husband and children to look after, what time for leisure is left?

But it is not leisure so much as a sense of leisure which is in question. They are very different things. A doctor prescribing for a patient with a high blood pressure once gave the following directions: "Do as much as you have to do, but do it in a low-pressure way."

The same suggestion can be made to the woman who pushes through her work with a full head of steam on. She cannot bear to see anyone idle. She drives her husband and children as relentlessly as she drives herself, to attend to things which would keep for another time.

There is no opportunity to sit and chat or think. There is always a task waiting to be done. She keeps the whole house breathless and uneasy. Even when she is at the mending basket she does not relax. She always sits in a straight-backed chair to sew, and works with energy and decision.

The best place to practice relaxation is over the family mending. Darning and patching, done in the right surroundings, can be delightful occupations. A comfortable chair, and someone reading aloud or chatting while one works, and what might be a maddening chore becomes a pleasure. With busy hands and mind at rest, real conversation becomes possible.

Once the technique of mending has been acquired, a little sense of leisure will have been gained, which may in time seep through to other phases of life.

Develop Your Personality

YOU'D give anything, you say, for personal charm that reaches out and draws people to you. But how much does a magnetic personality really cost? A little thought, a little time—that is all.

A little thought toward strengthening your good points—a charming smile, alertness, a sense of humor—and checking selfishness, sarcasm, conceit. A little time cultivating other people.

One secret of personal charm is your ability to like people. That means mixing with them, making the most of chance meetings, arranging to see again the people you like best. And after you've won their friendship, don't take it for granted. Be as enthusiastic and interested as when you were first attracted to them.

You can't cut yourself off from people and expect to turn into a likable person. Studying people, their interests, hobbies, hopes, helps you to like them. Learn, too, to be sensitive to other people. Recognize when you please them and when you irritate them, even though they try not to show they're ruffled.

Our 40-page booklet, IMPROVING YOUR PERSONALITY, tells how to get best results for the time and thought you spend acquiring personal magnetism. It shows how to make your voice, your manner, your appearance, your temperament more attractive. It wakes you up to your own possibilities and guides you to a charming, well-rounded personality.

Send 15c for our booklet, IMPROVING YOUR PERSONALITY, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Coffee-Flavored Foods Suggested In Recipe Contest

You don't have to drink coffee to enjoy its pleasant and unusual flavor eclairs, souffles and sauces taste in cakes, bread, ice cream, frosting and jelly. You may also flavor eclairs, soufflés and soucés with the grains from the savory bean. Bavarian cream and marshmallow whip flavored with coffee are also delicious.

If you have a recipe using coffee, enter it in The Post recipe contest. You may win a cash prize. The cash awards for this week are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

Type or write your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Foods Editor, so that she will receive it not later than Saturday noon. Be sure to copy your name and address clearly on your recipe. Only one recipe may be submitted by each contestant.

W.B. Hibbs, 72, Capital Broker, Dies at Home

William B. Hibbs, 72, prominent in the brokerage business in Washington for many years and founder and senior member of the W. B. Hibbs & Co., brokerage firm, died yesterday at his home at 725 Fifteenth street northwest.

A former president of the Washington Stock Exchange, "Billy" Hibbs rarely missed a session of that body. He had a wide acquaintance among public men.

Mr. Hibbs was born in Gordonsville, Va., but came to Washington while a young child. He started his career selling newspapers in the financial district. After gaining an education here, he entered the brokerage business, later established his own firm and for half a century was one of the best-known financiers in the Capital.

Some years ago he reorganized his business and in addition to his partner, W. W. Spaid, took Karl Corby and J. Thilman Henrick into his firm. During the World War Mr. Hibbs was very active on Liberty Loan committees. He served as director of many business firms, and was a member of many organizations such as the Racquet, Alibi and Chevy Chase Clubs.

He also belonged to the Board of Trade, the National Press Club, the Metropolitan Club and the Congressional and Montgomery County country clubs. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of the American Bankers Association and the District Bankers Association.

Mr. Hibbs served as a trustee of the board of the National Homeopathic Hospital and Providence Hospital, and was a Republican.

He enjoyed good health until quite recently, and celebrated his seventy-second birthday on December 11 with a merry group of friends at his Virginia estate at Leesburg. Many Washington friends telephoned and telegraphed best wishes.

Mr. Hibbs knew a long list of Presidents personally, and likewise was a confidant of many prominent political figures. His financial advice was widely sought and his friendship greatly prized.

Surviving Mr. Hibbs, who was a widower, are a daughter, Mrs. Helen Hibbs Legg, of Washington; three grandsons, one great-grandson and two sisters, Mrs. Blanche B. Homiller, of Washington, and Mrs. Charles McClellan, of Detroit.

Mr. Hibbs will be buried from St. John's Episcopal Church after services at 1:30 tomorrow. Interment will be private at Rock Creek Cemetery.

9 Plane Victims Buried in Mexico

Mexico City, Jan. 21 (AP).—The bodies of nine persons who died ten days ago in the crash of an airliner on a mountain in Vera Cruz State were buried today at the scene of the disaster.

A relief party reached the scene Tuesday morning after cutting its way through a jungle.

Daniel Ellis, operations manager of the Mexican Aviation Co., owners of the plane, reported the discovery of the wrecked airliner and the burial of the victims after he returned to San Vicente, 30 miles from the scene of the disaster.

He reported the bodies were so charred only one could be identified, that of a woman passenger, recognized by the rings she wore.

Veterans Storm State Capitol to Save Man

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Disabled American War Veterans tonight stormed the State Capitol in an attempt to prevent William Clark Mitchell, convicted torch murderer, from becoming the first white man in this century to hang in Mississippi for the slaying of two colored men.

Mitchell, bespectacled, 55-year-old veteran, is under sentence to hang February 11 for drenching the two with kerosene and burning them alive.

Drunk Driver Swears Off.

Riverhead, N. Y., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—John Kiley, 37, tonight promised he would never drive while drunk again. Convicted for a second time, he was ordered to copy in longhand once a month for the next year the 2,200-word article, "—And Sudden Death," which describes how bodies are crushed in auto accidents.

Bishop's Death Affects Future Of Coughlin

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 21.—The death of the Most Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, stanch defender of Father Charles E. Coughlin in several controversies, made uncertain tonight the radio priest's future.

As plans were made for Bishop Gallagher's funeral Tuesday, many church leaders speculated whether Father Coughlin's activities outside the church would be affected by the appointment of a new bishop, who governs all priests in the Catholic diocese of Detroit.

Father Coughlin, who announced after the November 3 election that he was quitting his radio talks, has inquired in New York about obtaining Sunday radio time. Whether Bishop Gallagher's death would change these plans could not be learned.

Bishop Gallagher recently urged Father Coughlin to resume his speeches, and, in one of his last public statements, said:

"I hope the people call him back to the air where he belongs."

Father Coughlin's entrance into American politics through his National Union for Social Justice, followed by bitter attacks on President Roosevelt, split the opinions of church leaders. There were hints of possible disciplinary action by the Vatican.

Bishop Gallagher, although he never aligned himself with Father Coughlin's union, again and again defended the priest's right to criticize.

Churchmen here did not expect the Pope's illness to delay the Detroit appointment, some even expressing a belief that it might be hurried because of the size and importance of the diocese.

Hearings Slated For 2 Policemen On Drunk Charge

Two Metropolitan police privates will appear before a Police Trial Board next Tuesday on charges of being intoxicated while on duty at the Inaugural parade Wednesday.

The policemen, H. L. Hoover, of the Third Precinct, and L. B. Martin, of the Eighth Precinct, were suspended from duty Wednesday night when superior officers reported they were found unfit for duty.

Hoover, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards said yesterday, was located at Nineteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, on his way to the parade route. He was suspended on the complaint of Sergt. B. C. Beach, of the Seventh Precinct.

Martin, reports at headquarters show, was located in the old Post-office Building. His suspension came about when Sergt. C. E. Perry made a report to his superiors.

H. G. Lloyd Dies; Morgan Partner

Philadelphia, Jan. 21 (AP).—Horatio Gates Lloyd, a partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, and Drexel & Co., Philadelphia, died at the luncheon table in his suburban home at Haverford today. He was 70.

Lloyd was having luncheon with his younger son, Richard Wingate Lloyd, when he was stricken with a heart attack. A physician found the banker had died almost instantly.

Reckless Drivers Face Jail in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—Judge David A. Robb warned that persons convicted in circuit court here of reckless driving or operating an automobile while intoxicated will be sentenced to jail for terms ranging from one day to the maximum penalty.

Judge Robb gave his ultimatum to drunken drivers in affirming the verdict of Magistrate Hugh R. Muir, of Lonaconing in the conviction and three-month jail sentence of Harvey Upole. Upole had appealed the conviction to the circuit court.

Seven Miners Killed.

Chesterfield, Eng., Jan. 21 (AP).—Seven miners were killed and four badly burned in a pit explosion at Martham Colliery at nearby Duckmanton today. The bodies were recovered.

Durand Decision.

First, it was the Donovan case and now it's the Durand decision, and if there still is any doubt about the wisdom of creating an independent tribunal before which employes can bring their individual grievances it should be dispelled by the recommendation for such a tribunal by the committee of labor experts who held the Durand hearings.

Such a tribunal would seem as advantageous for the agency as the employe. Twice now impartial airings for cases of alleged union discrimination have been secured through picketings. Obviously other groups with grievances will be tempted to do likewise—former Justice Lodge, No. 21, has already made the threat.

No matter what the outcome is, picketings leave bad after-tastes, just as an order to reinstate an employe previously dismissed must prove embarassing for both the employe and his supervisors. A court of appeals by settling disputes before an impasse is reached and "face" becomes involved, would seem the answer to the problem.

This is a note on a story that might have been. A friend of ours in the Patent Office telephoned yesterday morning quite excitedly to say that a Joseph Kennedy, of New York City, had invented a furnace. Could it be the Joe Kennedy who headed the Securities and Exchange Commission? Investigation showed the furnace Kennedy's middle initial was E, while the SEC Kennedy's middle initial was P for Patrick . . . Oh well, better luck next time.

Administrator Niles.

Thad Holt's job as assistant WPA administrator in charge of labor relations, has been filled by David K. Niles, formerly in charge of such information service activities as radio and motion pictures. Niles is a Bostonian and has served as State relief administrator in Massachusetts. He was also one of the persons to be infected by the forum bug that Commissioner of Education John Studebaker has popularized. Niles' help found the Ford Hall Forum in Boston.

During the war, he worked in the information service of the Labor Department. He also was with the educational bureau of Paramount pictures for a time. He joined the WPA staff here in Washington last July . . .

And while we're filling WPA vacancies, Truman Felt is handling the job that Jesse Irvin left to go to Social Security. Like Irvin, Felt worked with WPA's press chief, Morton Milford, on the Miami Daily News.

AAA's Consumers Counsel has just completed a survey showing that 32 of 2,029 families interviewed in Baltimore and St. Louis have never used oranges, and 352 have never used grapefruit.

Esperantists.

One of our readers informed us yesterday that Dr. Frederick G. Cottrell, who recently was awarded the Washington engineering medal, is among other things an outstanding Esperantist—which seems a good enough peg on which to hang a little story of how the international language is faring among Government employes.

There is a local Esperanto Club, headed by Ernest G. Dodge, of Civil Service, which meets for study Tuesday nights at the Thomson School. The club also sponsors a beginners' class on Fridays in the pages' schoolroom in the Capitol with Gerald F. Small as instructor.

Esperanto is an easy language to learn—Small assured us even a newspaper columnist could master the tongue in three to five months. The vocabulary consists principally of about 2,000 root words, there are no irregular verbs and only 16 rules of grammer. Esperantists like to say that the whole grammar can be written on a postal card.

Most prodigious of the 19 Government Esperanto speakers is Mrs. Ivy K. Reed, of Labor. She has written two widely used Esperanto grammars and has translated Shakespeare's "As You Like It"—the Esperanto rendition of "well done, thou good and faithful servant" (remember ?) is "vi bone farin, bona kap fidela servisto."

John C. McDowell, chief of the dairy herd improvement division, at Agriculture, is another enthusiast—his wife once taught Esperanto—and is preparing to translate some agriculture articles for an international Esperanto magazine. Other Esperantists are Kenneth F. Rogers, Postoffice Department; Mabel G. Hamilton, Tariff; Kathleen Prutz, Veterans; Joel C. Winkjer, Agriculture; William W. Pegues and Paul Winter, War; William Patzer, Navy; Rose Matera, SEC; Frieda Thume, Interior; Virginia Ehrenberg and Robert L. Bailey, Civil Service; Dean McLaughlin and Billie Bullard, PWA, and James F. Abel, Office of Education.

Postals.

New officers of General Land Office Lodge, No. 153, are William S. Towner, president; Mrs. Laura E. Turley and John M. McMechan, vice presidents; Edna Murphy, secretary; Nellie B. Jeffery, treasurer, and Frank W. DeFontee, sergeant at arms. District department delegates are Towner, John P. Hennessey, Hannah Riordan and Charles B. Bolick.

Rainbow Division veterans will hold an inauguration meeting tomorrow night at the Wardman Park . . . Secretary of Agriculture Wallace radio talks on farm tenancy at 10:30 tonight over the Columbia system . . . New developments in marketing of fresh fruits and vegetables will be described today by F. G. Robb, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, before the Canadian Fruit Jobbers in Montreal.

When the Senate convenes at noon the Congressional Record uses the term "12 o'clock meridian" . . . Last week's fan mail for the Office of Education's "Answer Me This" broadcast reached a new high with 5,390 litters . . . The Smithsonian Institution added nearly 500,000 specimens to its collections last year . . . Profits of the Welfare Recreation Association jumped from $99,852 in 1934 to $157,941 during the last fiscal year.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I don't claim to be no financial expert and besides some other fella is writin' that stuff in this paper, but if I happen to know anything that'll help you keep your finger on the economic pulse of this country, I think I oughta tell you.

Durin' the depression days, a man walked in to Doc Meier's Drug Store down home and told him he wanted to borrow a dollar until times got better. Doc handed the man a dollar without a flicker of an eye lash.

Some of the old "mossbacks" down home told Doc "You'll never see that man again," but Doc says "No, I know human nature. That man will be back."

Just the other day the same man walks into Doc Meier's Drug Store and he says, "Do you remember six years ago—I came in here and asked you for a dollar and you said you never turned a man down?"

Doc Meier says, "Yes, what about it?" and the man says, "Well, are you still game?"

Court Urged For Troubles Of U. S. Staff

Labor Mediators' Group Also Advises Durand Be Reinstated.

Committee Clears Ousted Federal Employe of Inefficiency Charge.

Creation of a permanent tribunal before which Government employes can bring their individual grievances was urged yesterday by a special committee of Government labor mediators in recommending the reinstatement of Robert Y. Durand, dismissed last April from the Federal Power Commission.

Durand's discharge was protested in picketing demonstrations by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, as having been based on his union activities. The commission contended it was because of inefficiency.

In recommending Durand's reinstatement the committee cleared Durand of the inefficiency charges and upheld the union's claim that he had been fired because of labor activities.

Union Effect Seen.

"We cannot escape the conviction," declared the committee, "that some degree of opposition to the union centering about Durand affected the supervisors responsible for the termination of his services."

The decision was based on hearings held several months ago. Committee members are Edwin S. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board; Otto Beyer, of the National Mediation Board, and Hugh L. Kerwin, of the Labor Department's conciliation service.

Urging that a "sincere effort be made to accomplish Durand's reinstatement and to give him every opportunity to make good," the committee went on to advocate the creation of a permanent grievance tribunal.

"Our experience in listening to this case convinces us of two things, first that it is important for Government employes to have some tribunal before which they can bring individual grievances, including charges of discrimination for union affiliation or activity; and second, that such a tribunal should be permanently established in the Government and not merely created as was the present committee."

Authority Requested.

Authority to conciliate disputes between employes and supervisors was requested by the Civil Service Commission in its annual report; while two bills that would establish a civil service court of appeals—the sort of tribunal recommended by the committee, have been introduced in Congress.

Although the committee's decision was advisory, not mandatory, Commission officials indicated during the course of the hearings that such a verdict would be respected. Some technical difficulty may arise, however, as since last April the section in which Durand worked has come under the merit system, while Durand does not have Civil Service status.

The commission is expected to recommend Durand's being blanketed into the Civil Service as was done with the other employes in the agency.

Hailing the decision as a "decisive victory for the right of Government employes to belong to and be active in unions of their own choosing," the Federation endorsed the proposal for the creation of a court of appeals.

D. F. Meiklejohn Burial Is Today

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (AP).—Funeral services will be held in Glendale tomorrow for David Forbes Meiklejohn, 60, mining expert who died Tuesday.

He was a friend of former President Hoover. He spent 15 years in the State of Guanajuato, Mexico, developing silver and gold properties, and figured in several adventures during the revolutionary regimes following the Diaz administration.

Pickets Allow Plant To Reopen in Erie, Pa.

Erie, Pa., Jan. 21 (AP).—Pickets withdrew from the strike-closed Continental Rubber Works today, and office workers were permitted to enter the plant for the first time since the strike was called Sunday. Six hundred workers were involved.

A company spokesman said a joint company and union statement would be issued later tonight looking toward possible settlement of the labor controversy.

Auto Accident Fatal For Traveling Couple

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 21 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Ferney Everett Rodgers, of Portland, Oreg., were killed and their 5-year-old son, Tommie, critically injured 4 miles south of Pickens, Miss., early tonight. Their automobile crashed into the rear end of a wagon.

Fernie Rodgers, jr., 3, a fourth member of the family group in the car, was unhurt.

Anne Perley's Funeral To Be Conducted Today

Hollywood, Jan. 21 (AP).—Funeral services for Anna Perley, early player in silent motion pictures, will be conducted here tomorrow. She died yesterday, aged 57. She was born in Boston.

Her most notable role was in Thomas Ince's "Civilization."

41 Nonresident Pupils Allowed In D. C. Schools

Re-Enrollment Approved by Board in View of 'Kemp' Case.

The school board yesterday approved re-enrollment for next semester of 41 nonresident pupils admitted to District schools, since the "Kemp" case ruling of last fall. The District Court decision required the Board of Education to admit any nonresident pupil, who has a parent employed in the District of Columbia.

At the same time the board authorized the transfer of 38 nonresident pupils (enrolled previously in District schools) who will be promoted next week from elementary schols to junior high schools, and of 51 more from junior high schools to senior high schools.

Dr. Ballou reported there are approximately 2,000 nonresident pupils now in District schools.

"The figure," he said, "would probably be 3,000, if, since 1933, we had not barred many applicants from junior high schools."

Goes to Appeals Court.

Until the "Kemp" case ruling, the board admitted nonresident pupils only when doing so did not crowd existing classes. The ruling has been advanced to the Court of Appeals for reconsideration.

Washington's public school enrollment has increased by 656 pupils in the last year, Dr. Ballou reported. On January 14, of this year, there were 93,312 pupils enrolled. At a corresponding date a year ago there were 92,656.

"The relative increase is less than it has been for a number of years," the superintendent commented.

Senior high school classes will be opened for the first time next month in Anacostia Junior-Senior High School. In addition to the 70 Anacostia Junior High pupils who will be promoted next week, there will be nearly 250 Anacostia area pupils now attending Eastern High School transferred to the new building.

Experiment to Be Dropped.

With the launching of the junior-senior high program at Anacostia, the "supervised study" experiment now in effect there will be discontinued, the board voted.

Dr. Ballou recommended discontinuance on the grounds that it would be "inadivsable to try to operate the school on two class schedules." He also thought it impractical to begin the senior high school program on a "supervised study basis.

The plan, devised by Assistant Superintendent Chester W. Holmes, then principal of Anacostia, was designed to eliminate home study.

The board voted to forward to the District Commissioners a request for deficiency appropriations of $1,250 for the accommodation of colored deaf mutes, and of $12,000 for a heating plant at the Berret School.

Processing Tax Refund Sought by Ala. Firm

By the Associated Press.

The Anniston Manufacturing Co., of Anniston, Ala., appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday in its effort to recover $270,000 paid to the Government as floor stock and processing taxes under the agriculture adjustment act.

Its appeal attacked constitutionality of the 1936 revenue's act's sections which provide that refund shall not be made for any taxes levied under the invalidated AAA unless the claimant establishes that he bore the tax burden and did not pass it on to consumers.

U. S. Subsidy For Housing Is Advocated

Responsibility Seen With Those 'on Right Side of the Tracks.'

Mrs. Simkhovitch Urges Reduced Cost for Low Income Groups.

It's high time people fortunate enough to live "on the right side of the tracks" did something about housing conditions of those who don't, believes Mrs. Mary K. Simkhovitch, of New York, widely-known advocate of slum clearance projects and low-rent living quarters for small wage earners.

In Washington to attend the fourth annual meeting of the National Public Housing Conference, Mrs. Simkhovitch said yesterday that proper shelter for the masses could be made possible only by Government subsidies. "The immediate problem is money," she said. "Only by mobilizing sufficient capital for large-scale operations can decent housing be provided for the millions who need it. Since 1933 20 States and the District of Columbia have created local and municipal housing authorities, thoroughly conversant with the needs of their communities, and standing ready to co-operate, but the Federal Government must start the ball rolling."

$6 Per Room Per Month.

Mrs. Simkhovitch said further that the cost of housing for lower-income groups must be brought down to a rental figure of about $6 per room per month. "The 1933 survey of 64 cities indicated that two-thirds of all rent-paying families in those cities could not afford to pay more than $6.25 per room per month," she continued. "They were reduced to living in dwellings 50 per cent of which had no baths or central heat, while 18 per cent were declared entirely unfit for use."

In this connection she mentioned, also, that figures from the Brookings Institution indicated that even at the height of prosperity in 1929 fewer than one-half the families in the United States could afford to pay $300 a year rent. "Private builders, unaided, have been unable to furnish new housing at rents below $11 per room per month," she said. "For the average family apartment of 3½ rooms this amounts to between $400 and $500 a year."

Only One Argument.

The only valid argument against Government subsidies for low-rent housing "is the one based on the philosophy that everyone should have an income large enough to pay the rents which private builders must charge if they are to furnish decent, modern housing without Government aid," Mrs. Simkhovitch declared. "As a practical matter this means postponing the meeting of the problem indefinitely, for it has been amply demonstrated that private enterprise cannot provide the kind of housing which is technically possible at rents the great mass of wage earners can afford."

Government aid for housing should not be considered an added expense to the community as a whole, in Mrs. Simkhovitch's opinion, "because when costs are compared to savings in health, fire protection and juvenile delinquency, it is evident that a comprehensive program for Federal and State aid for low-rent shelter is a public investment of the soundest kind."

Mrs. Simkhovitch believes this is the psychological time to push a low-cost housing program. "The President referred to the problem in his Inaugural address," she said, "and a bill providing for a Government subsidy to this end will be introduced, we hope, during this session of Congress."

Conference to Show Needs.

Registration for the conference, which will last through Sunday noon, will begin today at the Willard at 1 p. m. Among the speakers who will address the conference are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Robert F. Wagner, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Langdon W. Post, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority; Spencer Miller, jr., director of the Workers Education Bureau; Dr. Verne A. Zimmer, of the United States Department of Labor; Edward H. Foley, jr., of the Public Works Administration; H. A. Gray and Clark Forman, directors of the housing and power divisions, respectively, of the Public Works Administration.

The program today includes the annual membership meeting at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, 15 Dupont circle; a meeting of the board of directors at the Willard at 5:30 p. m., and a public dinner at the same hotel at 7:30 p. m.

Norton to Seek Action Monday On 'Red Rider'

Bankhead to Be Asked Today to Put District Bill on House Calendar.

The question of whether the Kennedy bill to repeal the "red rider" will be called up in the House next Monday will be put to Speaker Bankhead today by Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee.

Although Mrs. Norton has been authorized by the committee to call up the measure, she is uncertain as to whether the Speaker will grant the District its customary fourth Monday this month.

The Speaker at a press conference before Congress convened stated that he did not consider the repeal measure of paramount importance, and he indicated that he would rather see it delayed.

Last year he persuaded members of the House District Committee to withhold the Sisson repeal bill because of the approaching fall elections. He said that a vote at that time might embarrass some of the Southern Democratic members.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, had the bill placed on the House calendar and No. 1 District bill last Tuesday through a clever maneuver. As there are no other District bills on the calendar, the whole of next Monday afternoon can be devoted to a discussion of the "red rider" if the District day is authorized.

With Thomas L. Blanton no longer in the House, sponsors of the repeal measure believe that it can be passed in one afternoon, with no filibusters attempted.

The measure has the indorsement of Mrs. Norton and the promise of stanch support by House liberals, both Democrats and Republicans.

Appealing Poster For Birthday Balls To Appear Today

One of the most appealing posters in the history of the President's Birthday Ball, produced through the contributed efforts of artists, engravers and publicity workers, will appear in Washington today, calling the public's attention to the gala celebrations the night of January 30.

The poster depicts a youngster, suffering from infantile paralysis, sitting blanketed in his wheel chair, with a wistful, yet cheerful expression in his eyes.

"I can play when I get well," is printed beneath.

The orginal drawing was made by Lemuel Thomas, of the Lohr Art Studios. C. Melvin Sharpe and Ed B. Scholtes, of the publicity committee, directed the production of the poster. They obtained necessary cuts from the Standard Engraving Co., lithography from Webb and Bocorelski, and paper from the Stanford Paper Co., all without cost.

Verdict Permits Judge To Shave 3-Day Beard

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 21 (AP).—A directed verdict gave Federal Judge John D. Martin a chance today to shave a three-day growth of whiskers.

The judge, president of the Southern Association of Baseball Clubs, announced he would not shave until the verdict was returned in a war risk insurance case.

The luxuriant beard fell before a barber's razor this afternoon after Judge Martin decided the issue with a directed verdict for the Government.

New Orleans 'Roasts.'

New Orleans, Jan. 21 (AP).—The calendar said it was midwinter today, but the thermometers didn't agree. The mercury went up to 78 degrees, a common temperature during the past week and several hotels and restaurants turned on their cool air-conditioning systems.

Shrine Picks A. M. Daniels As Potentate

Walker Again Is Chosen Recorder; Ghiselli Retains Post.

The members of the Order of the Mystic Shrine last night elected a new line of officers for the coming Shrine year, and also elected representatives to the imperial council session, to be held in Detroit, Mich., in June.

New potentate of the Shrine is Ara M. Daniels. The other line officers are Granville Gude, chief rabban; Stanley D. Willis, assistant rabban; Karl E. Jarrell, high priest and prophet; Earl E. Shinn, oriental guide; Frank E. Chiselli, treasurer; F. Lawrence Walker, recorder.

Representatives elected to the imperial council are Past Imperial Potentate Leonard P. Steuart, F. Lawrence Walker, Allen H. Potts, Ara M. Daniels and Robert P. Smith.

Walker Has Long Service.

Walker's election as Shrine recorder extends his term of service in that position to 18 years. He has served as representative to the Imperial Council for 19 years. Ghiselli has been treasurer of Almas Temple for 14 years.

Daniels, the new potentate, is a native of Washington. He attended public schools here and graduated from George Washington University with an engineering degree. He was with the Navy and Agriculture Departments for 20 years, employed as a mechanical engineer. For the past 20 years he has been a private consulting engineer, specializing in heating and ventilating work.

Daniels is a contributor to the Encyclopedia Britannica and has served as contributing editor to various trade papers. He has also written and published several books on engineering.

Holds Many Honors.

He is senior grand steward of the District Grand Lodge, F. A. A. M., a thirty-second degree Mason, of Albert Pike Consistory; past master of Pentalphia Lodge, No. 23, a past high priest of Mount Vernon Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons; a member of Brightwood Council, No. 6, R. & S. M.; DeMolay Commandery, No. 4, K. T., Esther Chapter, No. 5, Order of Eastern Star; Capitol Forest, No. 104, of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon; Convention of High Priests; Capitol Court, No. 50, of the Royal Order of Jesters.

The new Potentate is a member of the University Club, Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity and the Washington Board of Trade. He served as president of the Masters' Association in 1930 and of the High Priests' Association in 1932.

The new officers were installed by Past Imperial Potentate Steuart, Robert S. Regar, past potentate of Almas Temple, acted as master of ceremonies.

Quadruplets Born To Mother of Ten

Montreal, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Prematurely born quadruplets—two boys and two girls—were being rushed by ambulance from St. Thomas, a nearby village, to the St. Justine Hospital here tonight.

The four babies were born to Mrs. Arcade Rondeau, a farmer's wife, already the mother of ten children. They reportedly were in a grave condition.

Government officials ordered the babies rushed to Montreal after Dr. J. E. Forest, of Joliette, who attended Mrs. Rondeau, declared they had little chance of surviving because of lack of necessary equipment in the district.

Pennsylvania Police Studying Mine Tragedy

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 21 (AP).—State police Corpl. C. E. Fontaine said tonight his men were investigating a report that a fight ended at nearby Twin Rocks with one miner unconscious from head injuries and another blown to death by dynamite.

Paul Bainchak, 25, was taken to a Johnstown hospital, where physicians reported him near death. Thomas Jasper, 38, is dead. Fontaine and Coroner Cyrus W. Davis said they were told by fellow workmen the two had quarreled in the mine.

Sheriff Pleads Defense.

Ducktown, Tenn., Jan. 21 (AP).—Former Deputy Sheriff Emmet G. Gaddis testified at his trial today he was shot twice last May 17 by D. W. McFadden, the Asheville contractor he is accused of killing, before he got a rifle and fired back.

Gaddis said he and his two co-defendants, Clarence Brooks and Lloyd Parton, were "hunting drunks" near Isabella the Sunday afternoon the incident occurred.

More Rigid Tax System Likely Here

Special District Body on Delinquent Levies to Meet Monday.

Assessment, Collection Set-up Improvement to Be Studied.

A general meeting of the special District committee on delinquent taxes was called yesterday for Monday by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, its chairman, to act upon the recommendations of two sub-committees.

Proposals for modernizing the District tax assessment and collection systems will be placed before the committee by the smaller groups headed by Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, and Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association.

More rigid machinery for collecting personal property taxes is expected to be adopted by the committee, and recommended to the District Commissioners as a prelude to another special committee's report on new local taxes.

Auditor Donovan yesterday refused to make public the legislative proposals made by the West subcommittee until they are submitted to the full committee. Lusk's subcommittee report has already been disclosed. It proposed, among other things, that the assessor's and tax collector's office be placed, so far as possible, upon a modern mechanized basis and that a unified card system be set up, so that a local taxpayer may find out his total unpaid taxes from a single card.

Some of the issues placed before the West sub-committee, and which will be aired before the full committee, are:

Whether real estate owners can, under existing law, be proceeded against for the collectoin of delinquent personal taxes.

Whether rents or bank accounts should be attached for non-payment of District taxes.

Although the sub-committee is expected to propose new legislation to improve the collection of delinquent taxes, it is believed it will not recommend any drastic methods of tax collection.

Other members of West's subcommittee last night professed ignorance of the report and of the fact that it had been submitted to Donovan. One of these committee members is Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The report is believed to recommend that there be a uniform interest rate on tax sale purchases, irrespective of whether the property is bought by the District or a broker, and that the number of installment payments for all special assessments be put on a uniform basis.

The failure of the District to collect thousands of dollars annually in delinquent taxes, especially levies on personal property, has for several years been cited by members of the House in sustaining their position that the Federal payment to the District be reduced or eliminated.

The dislodging of any new municipal revenue, moreover, will be welcomed by the commissioners in view of the anticipated $10,000,000 deficit in the 1938 budget.

Statue of Lee For Arlington Urged by Fish

Representative Speaks at Ceremony Honoring General, Jackson.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of Dutchess County, N. Y.—the only Republican in the House who officially represents Franklin D. Roosevelt—last night in Confederate Memorial Hall led the G. O. P. into action to honor the memories of Gens. Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson.

Fish assured more than 300 Sons of Confederate Veterans, United Daughters of the Confederacy and a few Confederate Veterans that he would rally Republican support in the House behind a bill to erect an equestrian statue of Gen. Lee in Arlington Cemetery.

The New York Republican, whose district embraces the Hyde Park residence of President Roosevelt, further promised he would introduce another bill to carve the names of "ten outstanding Confederate generals" on the walls of the Arlington Amphitheater.

Many Union Statues.

"I want to remind you that you will have to enlist the support of your Congressmen behind these bills or they will fail. I will do all I can to enlist Republican support."

Fish recalled that there are equestrian statues of Gens. Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, McClellan, Scott and "the other Union Army generals" in Washington, but none of Gen. Lee.

He spoke at a celebration honoring the birthdays of Gen. Lee and Jackson, held under the auspices of the Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, the District and Maryland Divisions of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the District of Columbia Division, U. D. C.

Wachapreague Island May Get Resort Hotel

Wachapreague, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Levin Nock Davis, attorney, said tonight that a group of New York sportsmen were forming a corporation to construct a $500,000 resort hotel on the Atlantic Ocean here.

Papers for the company had been sent to the State Corporation Commission, Davis said, but were being held up until a name for the hotel had been decided upon. The structure may be called "The Capt. John Richardson," he added.

Rattlesnake Murderer To Study Bible Daily

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (AP).—Robert S. James, under sentence to hang for the "rattlesnake torture" slaying of his seventh wife, Mary Busch James, today asked two hours each week in which to study the Bible. His plea was granted and the jail chaplain assigned Helen Atkinson, a Bible student, to aid him.

"I was brought up a hillbilly in the South," James explained, "and haven't much education."

Police Attacker Held.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21 (AP).—Police held Henry Oberhelman, 50, tonight, charging he fought them off with a crowbar as they tried to arrest his 16-year-old son for questioning about a 2-month-old death.

Prison Conference Approves State Use of Convict Products

After two hours' debate delegates to the Interstate Prison Conference at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday approved a plan whereby prisoners would concentrate their efforts on producing goods which could be used by State governments.

The resolution embodying the plan was introduced by Col. William Peak, assistant superintendent of District penal institutions, after other prison officials had complained against the Ashurst-Sumners act restricting the interstate shipment of prison-made goods.

Col. Peak pointed out that the District's prison industries did not compete with private industry because all products manufactured by prisoners were sold to the District and Federal Governments.

Sanford Bates, retiring director of Federal prisons, assured the delegates that his successor would carry out his policies.

Dr. Louis N. Robinson, chairman of the Prison Industries and Reorganization Administration, denounced the lack of knowledge some State prison officials have of the men in their charge. "In many cases there are two or three times as many persons in prison as there should be," he said.

Capital Visitors Hear Own State Songs in Clubs

Orchestras and Troupes Cater to Enjoyment of Crowds.

Human nature showed its old tricks in local after-dusk circles these last few days when visitors flocked to night clubs and restaurants to hear their own State songs, to see their own Representatives and Senators relaxing, to meet old friends from home they hadn't seen for two whole days.

No exception to the rule was John Wilson, Democratic boss of Hawaii, who flew to the Inauguration via clipper ship from Honolulu and fast plane from San Francisco. First thing he did in Washington was to check up on the Royal Hawaiians, now cavorting at the Hi Hat. And found them not wanting. David Naeole and his lads, honored by the visit, staged a special program of native songs, with Pete Kawekiu doing a hula in the absence of the troupe's regular dancer. And John Wilson wasn't long in recognizing it as authentic.

Truth of the matter is that Pete danced the hula as a regular part of the troupe's routine during engagements at the Seville-Biltmore in Havana and the Miami-Biltmore in Coral Gables.

The big attraction at the Cocoanut Grove these days is little blonde Mary Bowers, doing her impersonations of Belle Baker . . . And that applause is deserved. One of her best numbers is called "Jake Is a Fake," but all her comic sketches are recommended . . . Ralph Hawkins and his ten compatriots continue to provide the syncopaion.

"Life Is But a Jest of Time" . . . so reads the inscription over the entrance to the Wardman Park's new Metronome Room, and appropriately enough. Mundane things—like hours and minutes—don't have a chance in this pleasant environment of tasteful decorations and pleasing refreshments. . . . Arthur Warren and his orchestra open there tonight, presenting something different in dance music. Direct from New York's Hollywood Restaurant, Arthur features special arrangements of foreign numbers.

Peggy LeBaron, the lovely miss whose work on the New York stage needs no mention, made her debut at "El Patio" last night . . . or rather "debuts" since they asked for a round of encores of her singing and dancing. Sande Williams and his band continue to provide the musical background with some very fetching arrangements.

There a serious housing problem arising on Connecticut avenue. The Troika has proved so popular with many Inaugural guests they've formed the habit of dropping in around 3 for cocktails and staying until closing time. The versatile Russian artists aren't complaining, however.

From "Ole Man River" to violin to trombone . . . so reads the musical history of Val (Mickey) McCann, trombonist with Eddie Elkins and his orchestra at the Pall Mall Room. Eddie encourages each of his boys to be individual, which explains why the band has proved so popular. McCann studied at the Damrosch School, studied voice for a while, fiddled around with the violin, and then turned his abilities toward brass . . . Has a 2-year-old Val Junior who shows promise, having already mastered two notes.

Nine years ago the Lotus was just a few days old. So this week they have imported a polished New York revue to celebrate the anniversary. "Parade of the Elements" is what they're calling the new show, directed by Early Lindsay, who was responsible for Paramount's "Love Parade." The ten Lindsay girls are the lovely chorus in the "Parade of the Seasons" . . . also Evelyn Knight, singer; dancer, Garcia Gomez, master of ceremonies, Al Norton . . . with Bill Strickland's Capitolians and their music.

"The Frolics of 1937" still hold sway over the Cafe La Paree, now finishing up the second week with the revue that includes Heather Blackston, Suzanne Boll, the Brady Sisters, Hazel Warren and the Three Society Kapers . . . and not to be overlooked is Arthur Kay, "America's Greatest Mimic." Al Sakel's Band supplies the syncopation with Buddy Shaner and Hazel Warren doing the vocals.

Casa Grance announces a new policy, that of old-time dancing every Wednesday night from 9 to 2 . . . Milt Barrett adds there will be a small cover charge, a dollar a couple. Berk Motely says that his swing band is equally proficient at old-time music.

High Spots in the Night Spots

U. S. Navy Called World's Strongest

The United States has the strongest naval force in the world, according to James Kirkland, former assistant district attorney, who recently returned from a trip to Spanish points which he made as a lieutenant aboard the U. S. S. Quincy. Speaking before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton yesterday, Kirkland declared that whereas huge British ships carry but one airplane, the United States warships carry from four to eight.

The speaker cited the high standing of the enlisted personnel of the United States Navy stating that on the Quincy 40 per cent of the enlisted men had received two years of college training. This type of personnel, coupled with more modern ships than any other world power, puts the United States Navy in No. 1 rank, Kirkland said.

Extra Police Cost District $8,564.15

Aid of out-of-town policemen in handling the Inaugural celebration crowds cost the District government $8,564.15, Howard E. Crawford, chief clerk of the Police Department, said yesterday.

Pay checks and transportation funds were given to 61 detectives, who were detailed here during the ceremonies. Each man received approximately $15 a day plus transportation.

Uniformed policemen from New York and Philadelphia came in for most of the appropriation. They were given $2,712 in compensation. The detectives received $2,820.

Gales Lashing Europe Fatal To Many at Sea

Two Ships Sink With All Hands; Scandinavia and England Hard Hit.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 21.—Storms howled on through northern Europe tonight, accompanied by a heavy toll of deaths at sea. Many ships limped to port after battling gales for hours.

The Scandinavian countries were hardest hit, but both sides of the English Channel suffered from high waves and strong winds that shattered windows at coastal resorts.

At Aberdeen a lifeboat started through high seas in an attempt to reach the British trawler Strathebrie, which wirelessed for help in the North Sea.

Searchers unsuccessfully sought bodies of the captain and 24 crew members of the German naval experimental ship Welle, which sank with all aboard off the German state of Holstein yesterday.

Also unrecovered were the 20 victims of the sinking of the Finnish steamer Savonmaa near Kristiansand, Norway. Darkness and heavy seas prevented recovery of four bodies which had been sighted floating near the wreckage.

A civil plane with two persons aboard was eight hours overdue on a flight across the Irish Sea from Liverpool to Belfast.

The Pando liner Straithaird, homeward bound from Australia, was unable to reach Plymouth Harbor and was forced to go around the coast toward Ilbury.

Whipped by the winds and rain, the Thames River was rising slowly and invaded the grounds of both Windsor Castle and Eton College.

Lloyds reported the 2288-ton Russian steamer Ilmen, her rudder gone, apparently was in no immediate danger after asking assistance near the Shetland Islands north of Scotland.

The Ilmen reported ability to make slow progress despite the heavy seas that hid the fate of two French fishing boats reported in distress late yesterday. The boats, each with a crew of three, then were near the French port of Saint-Malo.

Winds of hurricane violence drove snowstorms across the Scandinavian Peninsula, where distress signals were received from an undetermined number of unidentified vessels.

Snow fell in the western sections of England and high winds disrupted communications.

Inauguration Goes $15,000 Into Red

Staging the 1937 Inauguration ceremonies for President Roosevelt, ran the Inaugural committee into a deficit of $15,000, according to an unofficial estimate reported yesterday.

The committee has not completed checking its figures, but it believes that $105,000 was spent on preparations for the day and for the several activities, and that the revenue from grandstand ticket sales and other sources was about $90,000.

For the amount of the difference the 392 guaranters who underwrote the Inaugural Day expenses will be responsible.

It was pointed out that the $15,000 deficit represents 11.3 per cent of the $132,040 pledged by the guarantors. In other words, if the estimated deficit is correct, the guarantors will be asked to pay $11.30 for each $100 they pledged to the committee.

Hill Death Inquest At Morgue Today

An inquest into the fatal shooting of Clarence Hill, 24, of 913 H street northwest, slain while he slept last Sunday morning, will be held at the District Morgue today.

Paul Edward Kenkel, 24-year-old painter, of 59 I street northwest, held by police in connection with the slaying, will appear before the coroner's jury.

Meanwhile, William C. Edwards, 27, Hill's roommate, wounded seriously by the gunman when struck in the neck by a .32-caliber slug, was reported improving in Casualty Hospital yesterday.

Henkel was arrested by Detective Sergt. Walter J. Beck, of the homicide squad, several hours after the shooting.

Rev. Paul Wilbur Will Be Instituted

The Rev. Paul D. Wilbur will be instituted as rector of St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Parish at services in the Church at Sixteenth and Newton streets tonight.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, will have charge of the services which will be attended by members of the clergy and laity of the diocese.

Invitations have also been extended to the clergy and laity for a reception to be given the new rector by the wardens and vestry of the parish immediately after the service of institution.

Mr. Wilbur, who succeeds Dr. George F. Dudley as rector of the parish, comes to Washington from Bethel, Conn., where he was rector of St. Thomas' Parish.

Servant Girl, 16, Shot In Home of Employer

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 20 (AP).—The body of Pouline McElrath, 16-year-old servant girl employe of Chris Moshoures, Asheville restaurant operator, was found in a bedroom of the Moshoures' suburban home today, a bullet hole through the chest and a .22-caliber rifle nearby.

Sheriff Laurence E. Brown and Coroner George F. Baier, jr., declined to express an opinion as to whether death was suicide until further investigation.

On the Air Today

After a lull of several weeks we have a new show coming to our loudspeakers tonight. It is the "Varsity Show," with John Held, jr., as master of ceremonies—to be heard Friday nights, at 10:30, from WRC. For the premiere tonight N. B. C. mikes will be installed on the University of Michigan's campus.

The new series is expected to present with all the dash and sparkle typical of the country's leading universities the best in undergraduate entertainment. Field staffs at the universities will lay the ground work for the programs, aided by "home office" supervision in the latter stages.

Held will travel to the different schools in time for final rehearsals. He is the widely known cartoonist and illustrator who lays such emphasis on college youth as subject material.

Michigan's band, 60-voice glee club and world known carillon will be heard in tonight's premiere. With a splash of solo voices and comedy. The second stop in the series, next week, will be the University of Chicago.

The world premiere of "Champagne Waltz" will be known to all, what with plans of Ray Bell, publicity boss of the Loew theaters here, for a number of radio features. WMAL will describe the colorful scene at the Palace theater when the premiere is staged at 10 tonight. Many notables, of course, will be in attendance. Carlton Smith, Gordon Hittenmark and other NBC announcers will unreel the story of Paramount's Silver Jubilee production and the ceremonies attendant to its debut. At 4:30, Capt. Dorsey and the Army Band will feature a special arrangement of the "Champagne, Waltz" song for WJSV.

* * * *

Features today:

Attorney General Cummings—Speaks in the Third General Assembly of Council of State Governments, WMAL, at 10:05 a. m., on crime control. (Gov. Paul McNutt, of Indiana, will speak at 7 on "Government Co-operation." Also City Manager Dykstra, of Cincinnati.)

Mrs. Roosevelt—Speaks from National Public Housing Conference, WMAL, at 3:15.

Four-act Comedy—"When We Were Twenty-one," presented by Radio Guild, WMAL, at 4. Richard Gordon (Sherlock Holmes) will play the lead.

"Hand In Glove"—Hit from Princeton Triangle Club's current production, featured in Hal Kemp's program with Kay Thompson, WJSV, at 8:30.

George Brent—And Beverly Roberts in radio version of "God's Country and the Woman," forthcoming picture, WJSV, at 9, "Hollywood Hotel." Fred MacMurray in debut as master of ceremonies.

I hasten to correct the point made in regard to Andre Kostelanetz and his air travel. No sooner had I pooh-poohed Master Robert Taplinger's statement that the Columbia maestro was No. 1 air traveler in 1936, than comes a confirmation from four of the leading air transport companies, acting as one confirmer. In fact, for the first time in the history of commercial aviation, an annual award will be established for No. 1 air traveler. And Kostelanetz gets the award for 1936! It is a silver loving cup. And luncheon in a 21-passenger ship high over Newark airport with Clyde Pangborn making the presentation.

* * * *

While Columbia was busy with the Inauguration here in Washington, a portion of the staff back in New York already was hard at work on plans for the Coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in London, May 12. The wide variety of events in connection with this colorful event requires one of the most complex jobs of trans-Atlantic transmission yet attempted. The networks here had a man peering out from a manhole as the Inauguration passed by. No doubt they'll have at least one announcer hanging to the clapper of Big Ben (if there is in truth a clapper) when the king is crowned. A sort of bong-by-bong account or a starling's eye view.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE.

A Snake in the Stall.

It is with extreme pleasure that I report that I won my first start following my "firing" operation. Owner Buck Clifton did not own a training track and, along with his other horses, I was vanned to Bowie almost a month before the meeting began. I was put into training at once and my knee did not bother me. Gradually I was given harder work until Buck was satisfied that I could stand a 6-furlong sprint. He found the right race for me.

I was as chipper as a two-year-old (I was going old) when I went on the track. I felt that I owed Buck and his family something for the kindness they had shown me. Having been away from the races so long, I was a 10-to-1 shot, despite the fact that the opposition was ordinary.

I knew Buck had a small bet on me. At 10 to 1, all he needed was a small bet to get back everything he had invested in me. I did not have an easy time of it. Buck's kid brother, an apprentice jockey, rode me. He was used to me, having been on my back in workouts.

I was caught in a "pocket" (in between horses) soon after the start and it was not until we reached the stretch that an opening appeared. Young Clifton sent me through, but there were still three horses in front of me. He took me to the outside and slowly but surely I wore down my rivals to be up by the best part of a head at the wire.

The mutuel price of $24.10 pleased me but the time of 1:13 3-5 was disappointing—even over the slow Bowie track. There was no use kidding myself, I had been doing my best.

Owner Buck watched me as I returned after the race. I did not limp. My knee had not hurt me, although I will admit there was a sort of dragging feeling in it.

I saw Owner Buck angry for the first time, following my next start, I was claimed. It was a bitter dose for Owner Buck, but it was downright tragedy for me.

Up to that time the four bright spots of my career were racing for Miss Dorothy, Arch, Steve, and Buck. Now I was thrown out in the maze of horse traffic again—with this doubtful knee of mine.

It was not Buck's fault. He entered me for $1,500 and he thought that nobody would claim me at that price. It was my reputation for winning for a variety of owners that led "Fats" Marshall to claim me. Fats, like many of the fly-by-night horsemen, had a way of disposing of most of his horses during the late fall so that he would not have to bear the expense of wintering them. In the spring he stepped in with a claim and took a horse that another owner had worried with for months. Thus, Fats escaped the trouble of preparing the horse for the races.

He had been slick enough to watch my workouts closely. He saw that I was fairly sound again. He watched me in that first race. He was satisfied that he could win a bet with me, so he claimed me.

I hated to leave Honey Herbert, but we would have been separated soon, anyway. Somebody claimed him soon after I left Buck's barn.

Marshall was a good fellow, even if he did chew tobacco and spit all around the stable. I found out in a short time that he had claimed me with money supplied by a former actress who was said to be running a dress shop in Wilmington. It made me think of Miss Dorothy to have a woman interested in me. However, when I saw the alleged dress-shop keeper, I yearned to get out of the stable.

She came over in front of my stall. When she smiled I was almost blinded by the reflection from a gold tooth in the front of her mouth.

"So you're my horsey-worsey," she said.

Then she walked a few yards away and met Fats.

"Listen, Tubby," she said, "That thing you claimed for me looks like a fugitive from a merry-go-round. Remember, make that dog win a race and I don't mean maybe."

Fats didn't make me win—but I won.

Miss Gold Tooth walked over the guard at the judges' stands when I came back after the race. She did an Indian dance around me while the jockey was unbuckling my saddle and then stood with her hands on her hips and cursed fluently when a mutuel price of $5.70 was displayed.

"The dirty bunch of robbers. You can't tell me they didn't stick their hand in the pot," she yelled.

Just why she thought I was going to be 5 or 6 to 1 after I had beaten better horses in my previous race, I did not know.

I didn't win another race for Miss Gold Tooth and Fats. I tried to win my way out of the stable. I was getting old, all right. I couldn't beat fair $1,200 horses in my next three tries, although I was second once.

I was claimed after that and I'll say right here that Fats Marshall and Miss Gold Tooth were "Mr. and Mrs. Little Lord Fauntleroy," as compared to J. Donaldson Hepburn, better known around the tracks as "Snake."

It is said that he acquired the name because, at one time, he carried a huge snake whip with him wherever he went. He would use it on horses and humans on the slighter provocation. Snake Hepburn did not use a snake whip on me, but he used something even worse.

He was mad as a hornet when I lost my first race for him. (I don't recall the track. I went to the post again and I finished third. I thought he was going to "fire" me with his eyes after that race.

"I'll fix you, you no count bum," he growled, "I'll make you want to win."

Snake must have been related to Ike and Joe. He used their methods anyway. The day of my next race came. Snake gave me a cutting look in the morning when I came in after breezing around the track. He had said he would fix me. I wondered if he would dope me. I knew it was useless to call on Miss Dorothy and Mother now. I had tried that often.

It was almost time for me to be led to the paddock when Snake appeared in front of my stall.

He ordered a stableman to turn me around so that my back was at the entrance. Then came the wierdest noise I ever heard. It sounded like hundreds of cans being pounded at once. I was frightened. I tried to pull my head away, but the stableman had a strong grip on me. The noise was bad enough, but that was only a small part of the procedure.

Wham! I thought my hip had been broken when Snake hit me with a length of iron chain. The weight of the blow knocked me against the side of the stall. Humans wonder why horses sometimes kick or bite them. This was one of the reasons.

Snake struck me again and again. If he was trying to frighten me, he did not have to strike me more than once. I was scared half to death at the first blow. Before each swing, he rattled the chain.

"What are you doing, you vulture?" came a woman's voice. I found out afterward that she was Mrs. Carl Kay Mathers, a member of the Virginia hunting set.

"Trying to scare that horse into running, are you? I'm not going to let you get away with this, you wretch. I'm going to report you," she said, determinedly.

Snake muttered something under his breath as she left.

It was a badly frightened Flat Tire that Snake took to the paddock. I halfway expected the jockey to carry a length of chain instead of a whip. He didn't need either. I was so nervous that I tried to run out from under him. I finished second in the race. I was glad I didn't win, after I calmed down enough

'With Rickard in the Yukon'

By the Associated Press.

Phoenix, Ariz Jan. 21.—Tex Rickard didn't want his "Ma" to know he had gone to the Yukon.

How he acquired the nickname "Tex," his homely impressions of the gold country—these and other intimate glimpses of the man whose name is linked with Jack Dempsey and showmanship in boxing were provided today in letters he wrote 40 years ago.

E. S. Matlock, of Phoenix, boyhood chum of the man who promoted million dollar boxing extravaganzas before he died, disclosed their contents. Dempsey asked for one of the yellowed, crumbling missives, but Matlock declined to part with them.

"Dear Old Friend:

"We had a jolly good trip. This country is like old times. Everybody has money.

"By the way, I have got a nicknaim. The people on the boat cald me Tex and everybody in Juneau calls me that and it will stay with me as long as I stay here."

Byrd Leading Ball Players Golf Event

Terrell, Derringer Card 74s; Nick Altrock Scores an 88.

By the United Press.

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 21.—Sammy Byrd, the cherubic-faced outfielder who formerly chased them in centerfield for the Yankees and Reds, shaded par by one stroke today to take a 70 and the 18-hole lead in the baseball players' national golf tournament.

Garland Braxton, former big-leaguer now with Milwaukee, had a 71. Braxton barely missed tying Byrd on the home green when his long approach putt rimmed the cup.

Ferrell, Derringer Shoot 74s.

Two strokes behind this pair, with 76s, were Lloyd Brown, of the Cleveland Indians; Paul Waner, Pittsburgh's National League batting champion, and Jack Russell, of the Boston Red Sox.

Mrs. 'Daffy' Dean Is Mother of Son

Dallas, Jan. 21 (AP).—Paul (Daffy) Dean, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, not much at "this publicity business," neglected to tell sports writer friends until today that a son was born to his attractive wife Tuesday night.

Paul, voluntarily retired last year after an ailing arm kept him from pitching, signed today with the Cardinals for the 1937 season. Terms were not announced.

Top Row, '36 Winner, Out of $100,000 Race

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (AP).—A. A. Baroni's Top Row, winner of the 1936 $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, officially was declared out of the 1937 renewal today.

J. H. Lewis Knocks Out Sykes in 6th Round

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—John Henry Lewis, world's light-heavyweight champion, tonight knocked out Art Sykes, of Chicago, in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Duquesne Garden. Seven thousand fans paid $10,000 to witness the slow battle.

Lewis, who is campaigning for a fight with heavyweight Joe Louis, was on the offensive from the first round until the knockout came after two minutes of the sixth stanza.

Schmarr Stars In Catholic's 61-28 Win

Heavy-handed Hermie Schmarr, Catholic University's all-around ace, hung up what is believed to be an all-time District scoring record last night, registering 31 points as the Cardinals swamped Shenandoah College, 61 to 28, at Brookland.

Taking advantage of every scoring opportunity, Husky Hermie, who played the entire game, incidentally, finished the first half with 15 points to his credit, six field goals and half as many fouls. His quota in the second half amounted to seven goals from the floor and one from the charity mark.

Detton Employs Cradle Lock To Toss Garibaldi Before 2,000

"Dreadful Dean" Detton, the Salt Lake City rassling prospector, struck some gold and Gino Garibaldi last night in Turner's arena. Induced to appear in Washington by a promise to receive 25 per cent of the gate receipts, the world's champion of more than half the country received close to $400 of the admission fees turned in by the 2,000 spectators.

The latter were not favorably impressed by the champion's demolishment of bushy-browed Gino, who succumbed to a cradle hold after a snarling 29½-minute session. The match was scheduled for a 2-hour time limit.

Detton, recognized as the champion of the profession by such authorities as the magazine Ring, National Boxing Association, New York State, Illinois, California and other localities, failed to impress a good share of the 2,000, who welcomed him back to Washington after a six-months' absence.

Obviously favoring the New York City Sicilian, the fans spent about 29½ minutes of the 29½ in showering the champion with everything but complimentary remarks. One lady, however, showered him with a handful of peanuts in an effort to rouse him from a lethargy at about the 20-minute mark. She was in the minority, however.

The third party in the ring, Benny Bortnick, became tangled with the two principals at one point and it was difficult to distinguish which of the three was the official, if any. Bortnick reached the heights, however, when he gave Mr. Detton a count of nine at one point and then started counting over when the champ failed to get back in the ring after being butted by Garibaldi in the midsection.

This happened after about 20 minutes of facial contortions and several exchanges of rope rebounds. Gino had launched a goat-like attack into the Detton midsection and the champion promptly forgot whether he was champion or not, apparently, at least. He fell outside the ropes and Referee Bortnick began counting. He got to 7-8-9, counting slower with every figure, and when the champ failed to get up at "nine," the referee in a sudden moment of compassion stopped counting.

"Come on, get up," he growled to the titleholder who was resting on his knees apparently oblivious to

Navy Subdues Va. U. Five By 35-25

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 21.—The Navy basketball team, hard pressed by the University of Virginia in the early stages of today's game here, pulled away in the second half to win by a 10-point margin, 35 to 25.

Both teams showed the effects of the fast pace as they went past the middle of the second half, and there were a number of substitutions. A final rally by the Sailors, in which Ingram, Laney, Lynch and Gillette figured, ran the lead to its 10-point margin at the whistle.

Capt. Bob Ruge, with five field goals and one from the line, led the scoring, while Abbott and Edmunds, each with 10 points, did most of the tallying for the Virginians.

Noted Mentor Resigns at Nebraska

Accepts $15,000 Yearly Wage as Successor to Chevigny.

Will Also Be Director of Athletics; Move Hailed by Students.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 21 (AP).—The University of Texas today hired Dana X. Bible, one of the ranking football coaches of the Nation, for 10 years at a salary reported to be $15,000 a year in an effort to re-establish the faltering Longhorn gridiron prowess.

The genial, bald-headed mentor, who coached Nebraska to six Big Six Conference titles in eight years, thus will return to the scene of his early triumphs, the Southwest Conference, whose fame in colorful football he helped build as coach at Texas A. & M. College from 1917 to 1928.

Bible left Austin tonight to tender his formal resignation to University of Nebraska officials, but said he would return in a few days to take over the athletic destines of the Texas school.

To Announce Assistants.

The contract provided he would be director of athletics and head football coach. He said he would organize the department and announce his assistants as soon as possible.

Dr. J. C. Dolley, chairman of the athletic council, said regular spring training would start about March 1 under Bible's tutelage.

Wright Rides 6-Year-Old in Upset

Pays $12.30 Mutuel as Stubbs Breaks Tintagel in Speed Duel.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 21.—Favorite players suffered their worst setback of the Florida season here today with the running of the 6-furlong Tropical Purse. Marshall Field's 1935 Belmont Futurity winner, Tintagel, one of the fastest sprinters in the country and a bang-up second to Whopper in the latter's record-shattering Hialeah Inaugural Handicap triumph, finished out of the money in the role of a 1-to-4 favorite.

The purse went to Miss A. Doris' 6-year-old mare, Lady Higloss, which was soundly beaten in the Inaugural. A. J. (Whitey) Abel's Top Dog finished second, a neck behind and four lengths clear of T. B. Martin's Stubbs. Tintagel was a laboring fourth, a half-length farther away. Brannon and Bold Flirt brought up the rear.

Lady Higloss, which had shown excellent form at Tropical Park, paid $12.30 for $2. She was second choice and finished her trip in 1:10 2-5, carrying 112 pounds, or the same as Tintagel. More than $30,000 was "burned up" on Tintagel. The faithful wagered, in round figures, $13,000 straight, $7,000 place and $10,000 show on the Chicago-owned colt.

The $16.55-to-$1 shot Stubbs caused the downfall of Tintagel. The latter, strictly a "speed" horse, found the lowly Stubbs too tough a nut to crack in their suicidal duel for the lead. They ran head and head to the top of the stretch. Instead of drawing away from the fast but cheaper Stubbs, Tintagel also weakened. Lady Higloss, beautifully rated by Wayne Wright, drew up to the leaders at the eighth pole and put them away. The slow-starting Top Dog loomed on the outside in the final furlong and forced the winner to the limit.

Foul Claim Disallowed.

After a roughly-waged duel, Yes Siree managed to score a driving victory over Pernie in the three-furlong opening contest. A length and a half separated the pair, with Warlaine another length and a half back in the third hole. Yes Siree was a $7.60 for $2 choice in the field of 15 maiden 2-year-olds.

His backers had some anxious moments after the race, for the foul claim sign flashed. After due deliberation, the stewards let the result stand. Yes Siree broke fast then swerved out, interfering chiefly with Pernie, his closest rival. Yes Siree swerved back in during the long drive home and blocked Pernie, which had come to the inside of the ultimate winner. Yes Siree drew away in the final 70 yards.

Character Wins by Neck.

Hirsch Jacobs saddled his second winner of the meeting in the second. The Brooklynite sent out his wife's veteran sprinter, Character, and the son of Carlaris got up in the closing strides to prevail by a neck over the pace-making Plea. Die Hard was third, three lengths behind. Plea stole an early lead and entered the final furlong two lengths clear of Character. The latter narrowed the margin with every stride and won going away. He was a $5.80 favorite.

Gallant Eagle, a gelded son of Gallant Fox-Light Brigade, was the lucky one to graduate in the third, a 1-mile affair for 3-year-old maidens. Irving Anderson broke the $13.40 for $2 shot on top while three of the strongly supported horses—Maespur, Seventh Inning and Abaddon—were very slow to get into stride after a poor getaway.

Gallant Eagle, well rated, ran Sweep Boy into the ground at the top of the stretch and held Seventh Inning's game rally under control to beat that colt by a length and a half. Abaddon lost the place by a like margin. Maespur was a well-beaten fourth.

Candlelight Repeats.

Candlelight ran right back to his winning effort at Tropical Park to defeat four other 3-year-olds in the one mile of the fourth contest. Bad Dreams was second, a length and a half back and a half length better than the poorly ridden Isadore. Ray Hightshoe had the latter hemmed in on the rail to the stretch, where the colt was sent to the outside and then back to the inside in the late stages.

Candlelight, kept clear on the outside, ran over the leaders in the final three furlongs and paid $11.70. The favored Bad Dreams, after overtaking the speedy Lina's son in the stretch, just lasted for the place.

Miss Pecan was allowed to go postward at $15.20 for $2 in the sixth event and the filly clicked by a length and a half. Tap On, which drew most of the play, raced in second position all the way, saving second money by four lengths from the early leader, Durwrack. The latter was joined by Tap On and Miss Pecan after leaving the far side. Miss Pecan drew away under Joe Renick's hard riding.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YES SIREE, $7.60, $4.20, $3.30; PERNIE, $5.30, $4.20; WARLAINE, $11.40.

YES SIREE broke fast, but swerved out blocking several horses and all through the stretch was swerving over to the inside rail blocking PERNIE. Latter came to the inside in final furlong and might have won but for interference. WARLAINE, away well, was hard ridden all the way. MAEVEL was running strong at end. EMPLOYER was in close quarters all through stretch. CO-SPORT ran a fair race.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:41. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. or br. c. (7), by Carlaris—Gayoso. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLANT EAGLE, $13.40, $5.70, $3.60; SEVENTH INNING, $3.40, $2.90; ABADDON, $4.10.

GALLANT EAGLE, away good and clear of interference, was kept close to the pace, assumed lead in stretch and won going away. SEVENTH INNING broke very bad, worked his way up and closed gamely. ABADDON, also away poorly, closed a big gap, far turn, where she took lead, but could not stall off the winner. DURWRACK, away fast, showed speed but stopped badly. KHAY ran good race. RECKLESS closed a big gap. BRUSH HANDLE stopped 10 a walk.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles (turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:03½. Winner, Erindale Stable's ch. g. (5), by Sumair—Falconry. Trained by A. Brent. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:59 2-5.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al:

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Trainer Bert S. Mitchell, of the Denemark Stable, won ten races in the first seven days of the Hialeah meeting. Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, under contract to the stable, chalked up seven winners for a like period. Attendance at this track is 21 per cent ahead of last year. I predict that the crowds will be up 50 per cent ahead of after an old-fashioned snow storm hits the Eastern section of the country. The crack trains were running in six sections last winter following that heavy fall in early February. From what I hear from friends in Jefferson County, the weather hasn't been bad there since the Charles Town track closed on December 12. Perhaps somebody "fired" Clocker Mike's knees and turned him out. It looks like I guessed wrong about Jockey Don Meade being reinstated. He was turned down the other day. However, I still maintain that he will be riding before the Florida season is history. Those in charge can't make it look too easy, if you know what I mean.

BILL.

First race—Singing Slave has been to the post once and showed nothing. However, he has worked well and if you must have action on these roulette-wheel races, this might be the right one. Johnnie Dear and Maemute for the place and show.

Second race—Consistent does not live up to his name as a rule, but he seems to have an edge on this kind. In light, I expect this one to show to advantage. Company and Match Plate should like the route.

Third race—Chambersburger is an underrated horse. Recently changed hands and, with Westrope for the riding, I'm going to try to make him beat the good Shyno at the weights. Air Line to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Chief Cherokee, from the consistent Denemark Stable, should go well at the 7-furlong route, and I'm going to string along. Count Morse and White Cockade to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—Whopper is the natural choice in this field. He has reached amazing form and seems capable of carrying that 120-pound assignment. Two Bob is in rare condition and is the one to beat. Zay is a possible surprise at the weights.

Sixth race—Mama's Choice and Live One promise to battle it out for the chief award in this field. Dark Winter is better than generally rated and has a chance.

By John R. Vosburgh.

High school basketball stages an inaugural of its own tonight—inaugurating night games into the interhigh curriculum. Eastern's champions, campaigning for their fourth straight term in office, will collaborate with a highly keyed Tech team in the ceremony, which starts at 8 p. m. in the Tech gymnasium.

Despite the fact that Tech is confronted with the task of halting an Eastern winning streak which has reached three consecutive interhigh triumphs, the game has all the earmarks of a thrill producer. The Techmen have been more or less pointing for the occasion and with their own floor as the scene of action, the odds on Eastern have been shaved as thin as a piece of cafeteria ham.

A victory for Tech will put it in a tie for first place with Western and send Eastern careening out of the interhigh leadership.

Taking elaborate precautions to assure a respectable attendance, the interhigh council will have at least one band on hand and has arranged for a preliminary between Wilson High and Roosevelt Junior varsity teams in a "little interhigh series contest."

Roosevelt Plays Wilson.

Almost overshadowed by the night game is the Roosevelt-Wilson contest at Roosevelt at 3:30 p. m., in which the Rough Riders will be attempting to get back in the series race after the 34-to-16 rout by Eastern Tuesday. Because of the hesitancy of the board of principals to try a double-header in its first night venture, this encounter could not be held on the same bill with the Tech-Eastern game.

Providing a good percentage of the 4,000 seats in the big gym is filled, interhigh basketball will probably be played on Friday nights, February 5, 12 and 26, on a double-header scale.

Tech's chances of an upset increased yesterday when Eastern was forced to play a tense, hard game against Episcopal on the eve of its interhigh test tonight. Somewhat inconsistent all season, the team was forced to call forth its Sunday scoring punch and it may not be forthcoming again today if Tech should set a hot pace for the unrested Lincoln Parkers.

Eastern Line-up Same.

Coach Mike Kelly probably will start the same line-up which swamped Roosevelt, with Carroll Colton and Otts Miller, forwards; Clint Quantrille, center, and Farmer Colley and Ross Lombardy, guards. Miller replaced Lee Lusby in the Roosevelt game and hung on to his berth by virtue of some improved defensive play.

Colton, Lombardy and Colley threaten to be the chief sources of trouble for Tech from a scoring standpoint. Tech will retaliate, however, with a scoring combination centered in Jimmy Vermillion and Dick See, with Walton Mershant, Tommy Dobyns and Leonard Mills, center, completing the cast.

Not since 1934 has Tech beaten Eastern in basketball, but its chances of performing that feat loom brighter tonight than for three years.

Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president of the university, who opposed paying a coach more than administrators and professors, said "I am in accord with the selection of Mr. Bible because I consider him the best qualified in the whole country for the task for which he has been chosen.

Assures Co-operation.

"After conferring with him, I believe he has a very fine attitude and the highest ideals with reference to intercollegiate sports, combined with a capacity to give his views full effect. Assuredly I shall give him my fullest co-operation in the discharge of his responsibilities."

Bible declared the two-day conference a success, saying "the conditions presented in which all groups are in accord are most satisfactory."

"I prefer to appear before the Nebraska authorities before formal acceptance is announced," he added. "I will request a meeting with Chancellor Burnett and the athletic board Saturday morning."

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and Red Barron—that's a fair guess at how the South was rating Dixie's heroes 15 years ago.

And there is even a chance that on Saturday afternoons they were rating 'em in this order: Barron, Lee and Jackson.

POVICH.

This fellow Barron never raised a sword in defense of States' rights or otherwise pledged fealty to the Confederacy but back there in 1920-21-22 he was the hottest thing the South ever owned in a football uniform. He made the South football-conscious probably more than any other man.

The famous Redhead's zig-zagging gallops for Georgia Tech produced for the Southern Conference its first All-American player. Bo McMillan, of Centre College in Kentucky, had made the All-American team in 1919 and Red Weaver, Centre's center, won the honor the following year, but not until Red Barron happened along did the deep South win an All-American berth.

Barron made it in 1921 and again in 1922. Sans headgear, the flaming redhead led Georgia Tech to a succession of victories. In Southern households the name of Red Barron was as much of a fixture as the kitchen sink. His newspaper clippings, if laid end to end, would blanket a football field.

Anyway, Red Barron is in town this week, an inaugural visitor and guest of his kid brother, Carter Barron, local theater impresario, who is chaperoning him about with pardonable pride. Between handshakes at the Variety Club yesterday, Red Barron described his greatest thrill on the gridiron—a handshake.

"They wanted an All-Star team down in Jacksonville to play Red Grange's outfit back in 1926 just after he had turned pro, and they sent up to Atlanta for me," related Barron. "We had Ernie Nevers and most of the Pottsville team that won the National Pro League championship and we figured we could stop Grange.

"I had never seen him play before but, of course, I knew Grange must be great. Anyway, I'd a-played for nothing just to find out for myself. Well, I wasn't long in finding out about him. I was playing left half and Grange started out around our left end on the first play. He changed his pace and direction in the same stride, cut through our tackle and tore off about 40 yards.

"I was waiting for him to try that play again and I didn't have to wait long. I laid for him to cut and then I dove for his hips. It looked like a cinch and I was actually thinking 'Boy, am I going to make a wonderful tackle.' Well, all I got was a big armful of Florida air. That Grange fooled me with the greatest change of pace I ever did see.

"The next time he came my way, I wasn't in any mood to make any clean tackles. I started for his neck, just to make sure I'd bring him down. He was just loping but when I jumped for him he put on speed and I just did get him around the ankles. You couldn't predict how you were going to tackle that fellow.

"Grange faked a punt on his own 20-yard line in the last quarter and was in the clear on his 35. He had an 8-yard start when I lit out after him from an angle. He was probably a tired football player after all those exhibitions—anyway, I caught him on our 30-yard line. We both rolled out of bounds but before we stopped rolling, that Grange actually had my hand in his and was squeezing it—hard.

"I looked at him funny-like as we both lay there. 'Pal,' he said, still pumping my hand, 'I don't know how come you did it, but that's the first time in my life I was ever pulled down from behind. I wanta congratulate ya.' As for me, well, I was getting my biggest thrill in football right there."

In Short——

Red Barron's now the headmaster and owner of a boys' prep school at Monroe, Ga. . . . He signed with the Boston Braves after his graduation from Georgia Tech . . . farmed to Providence in the Eastern League, Barron was in distinguished company, but he didn't know it . . . playing with New Haven at the time was an 18-year-old shortstop named Joe Cronin . . . and playing with Hartford in the same league was a young shortstop named Billy Bartell, who was to blossom as the Giants' star in the 1936 World Series . . . Barron played on three Georgia Tech teams that defeated Georgetown . . . he explains the reason for Tech's string of victories over Georgetown: "Well, you see, each season on the Saturday before the Georgetown game, we played Pitt at Pittsburgh. And each season we took a beating from Pitt. So it was just Georgetown's tough luck to be meeting a team that was itching to beat somebody" . . . But I remember those Georgtown teams for a pair of great ends they had—Florence and Kenyon . . . one was big and one was little and they gave me a terrific going over." Then, with a laugh, Barron added: "Ya know, a halfback never forgets an end—'specially a tough end."

Jacques, Lombardo, Old Line Stars, Face Tests Tomorrow

Lancelot Jacques, Maryland's recently discovered light-heavyweight ring star, will receive his second major test of the season tomorrow night when the Old Liners play host to North Carolina in the feature half of a twin-bill.

Jacques, whose victory over Tony Ortenzi, Western Maryland veteran, two weeks ago amazed local sportsmen, will oppose Max Novich, Southern Conference 165-pound champion last year, who is recognized as one of the South's best mittmen. If he gets by this one, or even holds Novich to a draw, Jacques will be a heavy favorite to win the 175-pound conference championship at the first asking.

Mike Lombardo, Maryland welterweight, also appears to be in for more than a mild workout when he comes to blows with Jule Medwin, Tarheel ace. Lombardo probably will be on the long end of the wagering one of the few times of his brilliant career when he enters the ring.

In basketball, which opens the bill, Maryland entertains Virginia, and, unless past performances are meaningless, should take the Cavaliers into camp with plenty to spare.

Appalachian Boxers Face Columbus

Honed to fighting edge by weeks of industrious training, Columbus University's boxing team steps into the ring for its first test of the season tonight at Turner's Arena, meeting a game and rugged Appalachian College squad starting at 8:30 o'clock.

From a neutral corner it shapes up as a slam-bang affair with the host fisticuffers not at all certain of emerging the winner. Appalachian has three consecutive victories to its credit, pounding out a 5½-2½ victory over the University of Tennessee in its latest test, Y. M. C. A. teams of Kannapolis and High Point, N. C., were others to feel the sting of its blows.

Coach Jim McNamara has recruited a fine roster of kayo artists from the classroom to bear Columbus' standard this season, many of them coming from amateur clubs throughout the city. Bobby Rawson, Mike Morton, Dave Schlaifer, Bobby Grim, Morris Wolfe and Ray Morse are included on the eligible list. McNamara, while not crowing too lustily, confidently expects the boys to win the majority of their matches.

The complete starting line-ups:

126 pounds—Ray Morse (C. U.) vs. George Corn (A. C.).
145 pounds—Bobby Rawson or Buddy Lazear (C. U.) vs. Foy Martin (A. C.).
165 pounds—Bobby Schwartz (C. U.) vs. Joe Yermala (A. C.).
175 pounds—Bobby Grimm (C. U.) vs. Hummie Adams (A. C.).
Unlimited class—Morris Wolfe (C. U.) vs. Len Wilson (A. C.).

Kendall Tourney To Start Today

With a promise of fast action and keen competition, Kendall School's first annual invitational basketball tournament, a unique affair restricted to all-deaf teams, gets underway tonight at Roosevelt High School with a double-header. Play will be conducted on a round-robin basis.

The host five meets West Virginia at 7:30 o'clock in tonight's curtain raiser, with Maryland and Virginia winding up the bargain bill starting an hour later. West Virginia and Maryland are heavy co-favorites on a basis of past performances, but Kendall has been travelling at a fast clip of late and hopes to surprise. Recent victories over Bladensburg and National Training School have buoyed the team's spirits.

The complete tournament program:

Tonight.

7:30—Kendall vs. West Virginia.
8:30—Maryland vs. Virginia.

Tomorrow.

2—Maryland vs. Kendall.
3—Virginia vs. West Virginia.
7:30—Kendall vs. Virginia.
8:30—Maryland vs. West Virginia.

Woodward Prep Wins Over Wilson Jrs., 17-15

Woodward Prep overcame an 11-9 half-time lead yesterday to beat Woodrow Wilson High's junior varsity basketball team, 17-15, on the Central Y. M. C. A. court. The foul shooting of Leonard and Crenshaw, of the winners, spelled Wilson's defeat, the former making good on four free throws and Crenshaw three.

Washington Gun Club To Give Two Trophies

Scheduled for competition on Saturday are two trophies for the membership of the Washington Gun Club. The first prize to be awarded on that date will be on the first 50 targets, competed for on added-target system. The second trophy will be on what is known as "honor handicap" system, in which shooters handicap themselves, shooting from distances at which they consider fair "to the other fellow."

Southwest A. C. Wins.

The Southwest A. C. defeated the Anacostia Eagles, 42-25, yesterday. Reidy, Laypolet and Schwaner scored most of the points.

District Loop Now Led by Rose Store

The uphill drive of the Rose Liquor Store five reached its peak last night at the Lucky Strike alleys when the Liquormen, with a two-game decision over Convention Hall, showing 28 wins against 17 reversals, landed into undisputed possession of first place in the District League. Occidental Restaurant gained the runner-up position when they cracked down on Georgetown, chalking up an odd-game win with a season record set of 1,922, 20 pins more than the mark established by Luck Strike just last week. Washington Brewery, although tied with Occidental in games won and lost, were forced to accept third place with a lesser total pinfall after bowing twice to Arcadia.

The high individual set mark went into discard when Perce Wolfe collected games of 143, 145 and 151 for a brilliant 439 total, two pins better than the set rolled by Howard Parsons on the opening night of the season back in September.

Harry Penfold featured the Adjutants' clean sweep of laurels in the War Department League at Arcadia, chipping the maples for a 151 game and 375 set. The Adjutants annexed high team game and set with 594 and 1,641, respectively.

Kann's retained its commanding position atop the Department Store League last night at the Recreation, blanking Guy Curran & Co. Palais Royal, close to the heels of the pace-setters, refused to be shaken, sweeping its set from William Hahn & Co. Lansburghs dropped to third place when they lost a game to Jelleffs and Credit Bureau and Hecht Co. gained odd-game decisions over Woodward & Lothrop and Raleigh Haberdashery, respectively.

Crouch Ties for Lead In 3-Cushion Tourney

Everett Crouch sprang a major upset last night in the three-cushion billiards tournament at the Royal Parlor, defeating Gene Ruark, defending champion, 35 to 24, in 83 innings. The loss dropped Ruark into a tie for first place with Johnny Dodge. Crouch clicked off 5 for the high run.

Tonight the coleaders, Dodge and Ruark, will meet in the deciding match, with the winner to be declared the District of Columbia champion.

Griffith Will Give Travis Pay Raise If He Shows Ire

CECIL TRAVIS.

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 21 (A.P.).—It is almost a foregone conclusion that during the next baseball season some player is going to make Cecil Travis, infielder for the Washington Senators, powerfully angry.

Travis is going to be so peeved he will swing a haymaker at the other player. Then he is going to ask for a raise in pay. And, if Owner Clark Griffith keeps his word, he'll get it.

Griffith told about it here today. Travis touched him for a little boost in paycheck totals, the team's owner said. But Griffith thought the player ought to be a little more aggressive.

"All he needs to become a fine player is a little more aggressiveness," Griffith said. "So I told him I'd give him the raise the first time he punched an opposing player."

TexRickard Found Gold 'Hard to Get'

dated February 22, 1896, shortly before he left for the Yukon.

"I am going to leave here on the fifteenth of April," he wrote. "I am going to the Yukon. Don't tell ma I am going to the Yukon. I told her I would not go and I don't want her to know it until I get ready to go.

"Well, I guess you boys will soon commence to play ball. Don't let Wichita Falls beat you all. I want you all to beat they every gaim this year and do Bowie the same."

On one occasion Rickard wrote: "I don't know what to say about this country. There is gold here but it is d—— hard to get. I can tell you more about it in June or July."

G. W. Tossers Villanova's Opponent

Play Tonight at Philadelphia; Long Island Foe Tomorrow Night.

George Washington's undefeated dribblers take their basketball pitcher to the well twice more over the week-end, starting tonight at Philadelphia, where they encounter Villanova in the first of two crucial tests, and for the first time this season that mythical utensil is in danger of being broken.

Tomorrow night Bill Reinhart sends his boys against Long Island's potent cagers at New York in a game that should test them to the core. Victories in this brace of games will stamp the downtown school as one of the East's outstanding teams and a contender for the championship.

The team will be at full strength on the trip, having regained the services of Hal Kiesel, elongated forward and second highest scorer, and Bruce Borum, reserve center who figures prominently in Reinhart's plans for the week-end. Without Kiesel G. W.'s efficiency would be decreased by approximately 25 per cent.

Villanova, while not undefeated has nevertheless, a fine record to show for its efforts thus far, including a well deserved victory over Duquesne. The latter played here, defeating Catholic University by a wide margin. Eight wins in ten games is the Wildcats' record and they hope, of course, to make it nine victories tonight.

Woods, Parsons Victors.

Howard Parsons and Al Woods won a preliminary round to the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes, to be rolled Saturday, last night at Lucky Strike with scores of 395 and 394, respectively. Their victories over 14 other contenders netted them free entry in the stakes.

Dunbar vs. Armstrong.

Quintets representing Dunbar and Armstrong High Schools will clash this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the Dunbar court, as the initial step in deciding supremacy between these rivals in the colored high school championship series.

Wheat Rallies With Canadian Export Buys

Heavy Selling Pressure Forces Price Down in Early Trading.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Notwithstanding that heavy selling pressure from the East carried Chicago wheat values down at times today to well below yesterday's finish, rallying power predominated. Improved export demand for Canadian wheat was a stimulus, and so too were reports of crop damage from Ohio Valley floods. Furthermore, sleet crusted over wide areas was a cause of apprehension, especially as to crops in northern Illinois, northern Missouri and most of Iowa.

Chicago wheat futures at the last were ¼ off to ¼ up, compared with 24 hours previous, May, 130⅛@130¼; July, 113¾@114; September, 110; corn varying from ⅞ decline to ⅛ advance; May, 109⅜@109½; July, 105½@105⅝; September, 101¼@101⅜; oats, unchanged to ⅜ lower; May, 51¼@51⅜, and rye showing ⅛@⅝ gain: May, 108¾. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 15 cents higher.

Brokers' Loans Drop $3,000,000 for Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $1,018,00,000 for the week ended Wednesday, a decrease of $3,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $954,000,000.

Exports to U. S. Rise.

Ottawa, Jan. 21 (AP).—In 1936 Canada's exports to the United States had a value of $406,664,567, compared with $358,569,736 for the preceding year, Norman Rogers, acting trade minister, said today. In both years items not affected by the Canada-United States Trade Pact had practically the same value, at approximately $189,500,00.

Excess Reserves Rise $30,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board last night reported another climb in excess bank reserves for the week ended January 20. These reserves rose $30,000,000 to $2,130,000,000. It was the fourth consecutive weekly increase and put excess reserves $250,000,000 above the level on December 23.

In December, the usual holiday increase in money in circulation pulled excess reserves down temporarily. The rise for the week ended January 20 coincided with an increase of $32,000,000 in money in circulation to $6,339,000,000, or $635,000,000 over the same week last year.

Monetary gold stock rose $11,000,000 for the week to another new high of $11,317,000,000. The Treasury now is using a system intended to control the credit affect of excess reserves caused by heavy gold importations.

Bank Clearings Increase 12.8% Over Year Ago

And a Rise of 5 Per Cent Above 5-Day Week Preceding.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 21.—Settlements through banks at principal clearing houses in the United States improved during the latest week.

The total for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended January 20, was $6,563,176,000, against $5,519,928,000 in the similar 1936 week, a gain of 12.8 per cent.

This contrasted with an increase of 5.0 per cent in the same comparison for the five days preceding.

A turnover of $4,188,644,000 for New York City was a rise of 11.4 per cent from the $3,759,808,000 of a week earlier. Outside centers aggregated $2,374,532,000, which was 21.1 per cent over the $1,961,469,000 in the corresponding week of 1936.

Late Trading in Steel Holds Price Average Steady

Many Stocks Advance Fractionally, Some to New Recovery Peaks; Bonds Fairly Steady.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 21.—A late burst of buying in steels and heavy industry issues rallied the stock market today after many leaders had shifted about nervously throughout the greater part of the session. With the ticker tape well behind floor dealings, favorites emerged with gains of fractions to 2 points generally, a number at new recovery peaks. A few wider advances were recorded.

While General Motors failed to make headway as the strike deadlock persisted, most other automotive issues stepped out on the upside.

Brokers could find little in the immediate news to spur the belated dash, although it was pointed out the opinion seemed to be gaining wieght in Wall Street that the labor wrangle will soon be straightened out through governmental intervention.

Utility, packing and specialty issues exhibited strength most of the day, but the majority of the rails, coppers and oils were inclined to hang back.

Buoying the advance were heavy steel mill back logs and increasing electric power consumption, together with the growing demand for electrical and rail equipments.

There was an unusually large turnover in the packing group on expectation higher meat prices will bring better profits from present inventories.

Automotive Shares Active.

General Motors was off ½, at 67½, but Chrysler moved up ¾, at 124½, despite announcement this company's production would be suspended at midnight until Monday because of the shortage of glass. Yesterday's adjustment of the Pittsburgh plate glass workers' dispute, it was thought, would ease this situation.

Advances in the automotive sector were registered by Studebaker, at 16⅝; Nash-Kelvinator, 20½; Electric Autolite, 43¼, and Graham-Paige, 4¼.

General Electric was one of the star performers, up 3⅜ at 64½, a new post-depression top.

Some of the aircrafts were enlivened by reports of expanding orders for manufacturers. Among those doing better were North American Aviation at 17⅛, Douglas 74⅛ and United 30⅝. U. S. Pipe & Foundry, boosting its divided rate after the close, was up 1⅝ at 68⅜.

Other Advances.

Other outstanding shares on the forward tilt were U. S. Steel 88¼, Bethlehem 78⅜, Westinghouse 160, Western Union 83⅜, Allied Chemical 238, Atlantic Coast Line 48½, Deere 122⅝, International Harvester 109⅝, Consolidated Edison 47, North American 33¼, Pullman 70¼, Armour 10, Wilson 10¼, National Steel 77, Seaboard Oil 45¼ and Air Reduction 78. Homestake Mining, on a light turnover, was up 15 points at 405.

The rails were hesitant as the carrier brotherhoods decided to demand a 20 per cent wage increase.

Warner Brothers was a soft spot, losing 1¼ at 16 on word the directors are considering a new stock offering to improve capital and reduce bank and other loans.

J. I. Case, on a few sales, was off 5¾ at 158. Others on the downside included Union Pacific at 130, Northern Pacific at 29¼, Paramount 27⅝, Kennecott 60½, Woolworth 63½, U. S. Rubber 54 and Collins & Aikman 59.

Although export copper was given a lift at New York, most commodities were a trifle ragged. Wheat at Chicago was down ¼ of a cent a bushel to up as much. Corn was ⅞ lower to ⅛ advanced. Cotton was 15 cents a bale improved to off 5.

During most of the morning trading attention was trained on the offering of $85,000,000 Canadian government bonds to the partial exclusion of other groups. The flotation was divided into $30,000,000 short and $55,000,000 long-term obligations. The former was reported oversubscribed shortly after the books opened. The longer-term issue was said to have been well received and most of the bonds were moved out to dealers.

Minor recoveries were made by United States Governments, foreign bonds and domestic industrial issues during the final hour. The Federal and industrial obligations turned up coincidentally with the stock department which responded to a sudden demand for steel company shares. Other sections of the bond market, however, stood still or lowered a little.

Walworth 4s gained ⅞ to 88¼, Penn Dixie Cement 6s added 1 at 101 and International Mercantile Marine 6s gained 2 to 77¾. Pronounced headway was made by other convertible issues. The Associated Press averages for 10 industrial bonds improved .2 of a point to 104.4.

Railroad bonds did little as operators in the more speculative loans seemed less inclined to trade than is usually the case. Alleghany 5s and Stamped 5s lowered fractionally to a point and Rock Island General 4s, Erie 5s and Union Pacific 3½s gave up fractions. North Western 4¾, however, gained ⅝ to 18⅞ and minor advances were shown by "Katy" 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s "F" and St. Paul 5s of 1975.

Of primary interest in the foreign list was the sharp run-up of Japanese 6½s which gained 2⅝ to 99⅛ following violent political attacks in the Diet on the present cabinet and its policies with respect to the military. South American loans worked a bit higher and French Stamped 7½s added 2 at 124. The Associated Press averages for 10 foreign bonds gained .2 of a point to 74, a new 1936-37 high.

U. S. Government bonds, on light volume, scored gains to 5-32 of a point. A few issues moved off with losses ranging to 3-32. Turnover totaled $14,497,000, face value, for all bonds against $14,245,000 Wednesday.

New B. & O. Equipment To Cost $10,000,000

New York, Jan. 21.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., at its regular monthly board of directors meeting held here today, authorized the purchase of 2,000 gondola cars of 70-ton capacity and also the construction of 2,000 covered wagon top box cars, of 50-ton capacity in the company's shops.

It is understood that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was the low bidder for the 2,000 gondola cars. The total estimated cost of this equipment is approximately $10,000,000, the financing of which it is expected will be arranged through an equipment trust.

Savings Bank Celebrates 70th Anniversary

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Seventy successful years are completed today by the National Savings & Trust Co. All that time, this historic institution has occupied the same location at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, in the center of the financial district and diagonally opposite the United States Treasury. Officers and directors of the company will give a dinner tonight at the Washington Hotel in celebration of its anniversary.

From shortly after the Civil War to the present day, the company has played an important part in the growth of Washington and vicinity. Its patrons have always constituted a highly representative cross section of the District. Many of its depositors are proud of accounts maintained since childhood.

The institution was originally chartered by special act of Congress January 22, 1867, as the National Safe Deposit Co. of Washington. The National Savings Bank of the District of Columbia chartered under special act of Congress May 24, 1870, was absorbed by the company in 1891, at which time the company was granted additional powers to conduct a trust, loan and mortgage business under an act of Congress passed October 1, 1890.

Subsequently, by special act of Congress passed February 18, 1892, the name of the company was changed to the National Safe Deposit, Savings & Trust Co. of the District of Columbia, and later, by special act of Congress passed January 31, 1907, to its present title of National Savings & Trust Co.

The company, within the last week, has been admitted to membership in the Federal Reserve System. It is also a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Washington Clearing House, and District of Columbia Bankers' Associations. It takes pride in its contribution to the development of Washington and its environs.

Many prominent citizens whose careers are linked with the history and growth of the Nation's Capitol have been directors of and otherwise connected with the institution. They include Alexander R. Shepherd, who was Governor of the District and played an important part in its development; Henry D. Cooke, George W. Riggs, E. Francis Riggs, Nathaniel Wilson, Charles C. Glover, Samuel P. Brown, Lewis Clephane, James M. Latta, Matthew G. Emery, J. H. Lathrop, George W. Adams, Thomas Hyde, Andrew Wylie, James M. Johnston, William A. H. Church, Samuel Maddox, O. H. P. Johnson, William A. Gordon, William V. Cox, S. Thomas Brown, Gen. James A. Buchanan, Gen. John A. Holabird, W. Riley Deeble, William E. Edmonston, Henry Hurt, Henry Orth, Woodbury Blair, John F. Rodgers, R. Ross Perry, Henry A. Willard and Henry Kellogg Willard.

Past Presidents.

Important men have been presidents of this bank, as follows: Samuel P. Brown, George H. Plant, William Stickney, Benjamin P. Snyder, Hugh McCullogh, Henry A. Willard, Thomas R. Jones and William D. Hoover. H. Prescott Gatley, present chief executive, has held office nearly three years. Under his leadership, the company has made substantial progress. Mr. Gatley, prior to assuming the presidency of the company, had been a director and its general counsel and was a prominent lawyer here with more than 35 years' experience.

William D. Hoover, chairman of the board, retired from the presidency of the institution after serving 25 years in that capacity, having been succeeded by Mr. Gatley.

Social Security Revenue Study Made by Board

Yield From 3 Per Cent Tax for 1929 Estimated at $1,019,000,000.

New York, Jan. 21.—The National Industrial Conference Board made public today the results of a study undertaken to determine the amount of revenue that would have been collected in 1929, 1933 and 1935 under the unemployment compensation provisions of the Social Security Act, had the existing act been in effect in those years.

The estimates of the conference board indicate that $1,019,000,000 would have been collected into 1929 had the full 3 per cent tax been in effect in that year. The collections would have declined to $493,000,000 in 1933, and in 1935 would have amounted to $629,000,000.

These amounts represent 3 per cent of the estimated salaries and wages paid in those types of employment included in the Federal unemployment compensation plan, made by employers having eight or more employes. In 1929 such salaries and wages amounted to $33,976,000,000; in 1933 to $16,460,000,000 and in 1935 to $20,972,000,000.

These estimates show that collections would have differed widely among the various States. In 1929, for example, New York would have paid approximately $169,000,000, whereas Nevada would have paid a little less than $1,000,000. Chiefly because of the exclusion of agricultural labor and of individual entrepreneurs, the relative proportion of gainful workers included under the provisions of the act is higher in the industrial East than in the agricultural South and West.

World's Deepest Well Below Two-Mile Mark

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Drilling 9 feet beyond the 2-mile mark, engineers of the Tidewater Associated Oil Co. brought in the deepest oil well in the world, the company announced today.

"McGonigle No. 12," the new well's official title, is in the Ventura avenue field, in California, and is 10,569 feet deep. "McGonigle" takes the record from "No. 5 Rigolette" of the Texas Co. in the Lafitte field, Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, 10,244 feet deep.

L. & N. Railroad Heads Declare $2.50 Dividend

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Directors of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. declared a dividend of $2.50 a share on the common stock today.

The previous dividends were $1.50 extra paid in December and $2.50 paid August 24. In February last year $2 was paid.

The dividend is payable February 27 to stockholders of record February 1.

Maybe You'll Remember, Sir

Here's a man that merits your sympathy. "I think I lost something," he confides, "but I just can't remember what it was." Unfortunately, we can't aid his failing memory, but we can make this very sensible suggestion:

When you do lose something, ask the readers of The Post to help you find it. The simplest, most direct way to do this is through a Post want ad, and the simple way to order your want ad is to just call

Parker Pen Profits Advance 50 Pct.

Chicago, Jan. 21. — Parker Pen Co.'s profits in the year just ended were the largest since 1929 and showed an increase of about 50 per cent over 1935.

The company's report for the year ended December 31, 1936, will show net profit upward of $700,000 after all charges including interest, depreciation and normal Federal income taxes but before any provision for surtax on undistributed profits, equal to better than $3.50 a share on 191,044 shares of common stock outstanding. For 1935 a profit of $447,951, or $2.34 a share on the common was reported, while in 1929 a net of $1,183,542, or $5.91 a share was shown.

Stockholders last year shared in the larger earnings but the company paid out only about 50 per cent of its profits because of its need for increased working capital to handle the larger volume of business being done. A total of $1.80 a share was disbursed including an extra of 50 cents last month. In 1935 dividends amounting to 70 cents a share were paid. The stock is now on a $1.60 annual basis.

Newspaper Ads Up 10.3% Over 1935

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Newspaper advertising in December increased 12.4 per cent over that for December, 1935, "Printers' Ink" index indicated today. For the entire year of 1936 the index showed a gain of 10.3 per cent over the 1935 figure.

Weighted for seasonal variations, the December figure was 4.5 per cent more than the November index, indicating the usual decrease in the last month of the year was not as large as normal, the magazine said.

December farm paper advertising advanced 24.9 per cent over that for December, 1935. For the entire year the gain was 23.2 per cent, more than twice the gain recorded for 1935 over 1934.

Crude Oil Production Exceeded by Demand

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Mines forecast yesterday a daily average production of 3,068,600 barrels of crude oil would be required to meet demand during February. This is 70,200 barrels higher than the January estimate, but about 70,000 barrels below present actual production.

The bureau reported the daily average production was about 13,120,000 barrels during December, with stocks of domestic crude declining at the rate of close to 30,000 barrels daily, indicating a daily demand of about 3,150,000 barrels.

Carload Increases of 9.5% Is Predicted

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board today forecast an increase of 9.5 per cent in carload movements of commodities for the first quarter of 1937 over the like period a year ago.

Notable percentage shipment gains were predicted as follows: Iron and steel, 25; gravel, sand and stone, 16; lime and plaster, 21; automobiles and trucks, 17; cement, 14; lumber and forest products, 23; chemicals and explosives, 10; petroleum and products, 10. J. K. Hiltner, traffic manager of U. S. Pipe & Foundry Co., was elected general chairman.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading European currencies continued their decline in terms of the dollar in the foreign exchange market yesterday.

In New York the pound sterling, quoted at $4.90½, was ⅛ of a cent lower. French francs were down .00⅛ of a cent at 4.66⅛ cents and Swiss francs lost .02 of a cent at 22.93½ cents. The Netherlands guilder, at 54.76 cents, and Canadian dollars at 99.93¾ cents, were unchanged.

The dollar gained ½ cent in London, where it closed at 4.90½ to the pound, compared with the New York overnight rate of 4.90¼. In Paris it finished at the equivalent of 4.665 cents to the franc, against the New York overnight rate of 4.667 cents.

Advance on Curb Led by Industrials

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—A late rally, led by a group of industrial specialties, pushed prices in the curb market today higher by fractions to more than 3 points.

Heartened by the solution of labor difficulties of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., traders bought the stock in quantity and it closed 3½ up, at 136½. Consolidated Aircraft, another favorite, gained 2¼, at 27½, and Wayne Pump, at 38, was 1⅞ higher.

Metal shares were mixed, with Bunker Hill & Sullivan 113½, up 2, and Aluminum Co. of America 1½ lower, at 165. Newmont finished at 127, down 2.

Baby, With Heart Outside, Is Studied

St. Louis, Jan. 21 (AP).—An infant girl, born with its heart on the outside of the body, is a patient at St. Louis Children's Hospital, Superintendent Estelle D. Claiborne said today. Physicians did not believe the baby would live.

The heart, uncovered by tissue, lies on the center of the chest with its base connected to the larger blood vessels. Its beating is plainly visible. Possibilities of an operation to place the heart inside the chest were considered remote at the hospital.

The baby was delivered by a midwife Tuesday night and was taken to the hospital two hours later. It is resting comfortably in an incubator.

Infants occasionally are born with their hearts near the outer edge of the chest cavity and covered only by a thin layer of tissue. But an entirely exposed organ was said by the physicians to be a phenomenon.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. John H. Pigg and Zola F. Pigg, plaintiffs, vs. Elizabeth Ellsworth, Bethesda, Md., and Eisinger Mill & Lumber Co., Bethesda, Md., defendants. No. 83223, Equity. The object of this suit is appointment of substitute trustee. On motion of the plaintiffs, it is this 14th day of January, 1937, ordered that the defendant Elizabeth Ellsworth cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. F. DICKINSON LETTS, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By C. E. STEWART, Jr., Assistant Clerk. 15,22,29

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, January 5, 1937. Public hearings have been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain streets and public alley as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied that the equity, justice and advisability of said closing, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 18, 1932, the street and alley area as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 1782 and 1995, is hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after February 1, 1937, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said street and public alley hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing Stuart drive, Fourteenth street, Naylor road southeast, and a public alley, all lying within Anacostia Park, known as U. S. Reservation No. 343, in the section lying northwesterly of Fairlawn avenue southeast. 2. Closing part of Chesapeake street between Linnean avenue and Thirtieth street northwest, involving also a dedication of land for highway purposes in lieu thereof." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closing in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on February 1, 1937, as aforesaid, and said street and alley area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners. D. C.

'Windfall Tax' In AAA Upheld By U. S. Judge

5 Texas Rice Companies Are Refused Injunction on Collection.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.—Federal Judge Leon Yankwish held today that the so-called windfall tax levied against processing companies after the United States Supreme Court had invalidated the AA is constitutional.

Court has invalidated the AAA is decision recognized the right of Congress to levy a processing tax.

"The only reason that particular tax (the one in the AAA) was nullified was because it was tied to a program of agricultural control which the court held was beyond the power of Congress to regulate," Judge Yankwich's decision said.

Validity of the special tax was challenged in a test suit filed here by the Union Packing Co.

Injunctions Refused.

New Orleans, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Five Texas rice milling companies today were refused an injunction against collection of windfall taxes by the Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The circuit court decision upheld United States District Judge Robert McMillan, at Austin, Tex.

Judge McMillan had refused to enjoin Internal Revenue Agent Frank Scofield, of Texas, from collecting windfall taxes on $439,667.19 to the rice firms.

The firms seeking the injunction against payment of taxes on refunds paid after the AAA was invalidated were the Steinhagen Rice Milling Co., the Tyrell Rice Mill Co. and the Beaumont Rice Mills, all of Beaumont, Tex.; the El Campo Co., of El Campo, and the Gulf Coast Rice Mills at Houston.

Richberg Urges New Trade Laws

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, proposed tonight before a convention of dry goods retailers a revision of Federal business laws to "express plainly a national economic policy."

To enforce it and "wipe out monopolistic and unfair practices," he suggested new governmental machinery consisting of:

A commission with "clearly defined and definitely limited powers" to apply the business law.

An administrative agency "authorized to apply the legislatively defined policy in encouraging and aiding business men to co-operate in improving the fairness and efficiency of industrial methods."

Czechs Warned By Nazi Journal

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP).—The foreign office issued a thinly veiled warning to Chechoslovakia tonight to revise drastically its attitude toward Germany and Germans.

Through its mouthpiece, the Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, the foreign office voiced amazement that a state with Czechoslovakia's structure and geographical position should base its domestic and foreign policies on "the erroneous assumption that circumstances existing at the time of its foundation—at the end of the victorious coalition war—may be regarded without further ado as continuing to exist forever."

Ship Is Stranded Off Virginia Port

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—The America France line steamer Schodack stranded this morning off Craney Island in the Elizabeth River as she was feeling her way through a fog, en route to Norfolk.

The ship was held fast in the mud and the combined efforts of three tugs failed to move her today despite two attempts made on high tides.

It was stated at the office of Dichmann, Wright & Pugh, Inc., agents for the ship, that it may be necessary to remove a considerable quantity of the ship's bunker oil before she can be floated.

I. C. C. Extension Urged by Eastman

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP).—Joseph B. Eastman, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said in an address here today he hoped the commission's jurisdiction would be extended "more fully than it now is over the entire field of transportation, including water and air."

The former Federal co-ordinator of transportation told the Boston Chamber of Commerce he thought such extension was necesary "because the transportation system cannot be dealt with intelligently and well except as a unit."

Autopsy Ordered For Md. Woman

Oakland, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—After Mrs. Mollie Bruskey, 46, was found dead in her home at Dodson, near Kitsmiller, State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley today ordered an autopsy performed.

Fraley said officials were unable to determine definitely the cause of death. The woman's body was found near her bed by children.

The State's attorney said two persons were held for questioning, but would not identify them.

Fla. Officials Hold 10, Impound New Trailers

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 21 (AP).—Ten men were detained here today, and ten new automobiles with housecar trailers were put in storage by county traffic officers seeking to break up what they called an illegal method of bringing trailers from factories in Michigan to dealers in Florida.

None of the trailers was being used for camping purposes.

The drivers are charged with using improper licenses and with transporting freight car hire without a permit from the State railroad commission.

Two Airmen Get Cheney Honor For Balloon Rescue Attempt

Major Frederick Lynch, Sergeant Murray Share Honor.

For performing an act of valor and self-sacrifice worthy of the highest commendation, members of the Army Air Corps were announced yesterday as winners of the Cheney Award for 1936. The men elected by the board of Air Corps officers were Maj. Frederick D. Lynch and Staff Sergt. Joseph L. Murray, First Balloon Squadron, both stationed at Fort Sill, Okla.

The award is in the form of a bronze plaque and includes the income from a $15,000 trust fund established in the memory of First Lieut. William H. Cheney, Air Service, who was killed in an air collision in Italy in 1918. This is the first time the award has been shared by two men.

Maj. Lynch and Sergt. Murray were recognized for their heroism in trying to save the lives of two companions when a free balloon, carrying the four, caught fire and exploded at Fort Sill last July. Thrown free of the balloon, which exploded while landing, Maj. Lynch plunged into the wreckage and dragged Murray from the burning basket. Facing intense heat and suffering severe burns, together they dragged Staff Sergt. Douglas M. Tucker from the balloon. Burns and injuries suffered proved fatal to Tucker. The fourth companion, Master Sergt. Ralph J. Rumpel, perished in the fire.

Maj. Lynch, a native of Chicago, enlisted in the field artillery, Illionois National Guard, during the war and was subsequently mustered into Federal service. Transferred to the aviation section, Signal Corps, he attended the School of Military Aeronautics, Texas State University, and gained his flying experience at Kelly Field, Tex. He was commisioned a second lieutenant in 1920. He has been stationed at Kelly Field, Chanute Field, Ill.; Dodd Field and Brooks Field, Tex., and in the Philippines at Kindley Field, Fort Mills.

Born in Philadelphia, Staff Sergt. Murray enlisted in the Regular Army in March, 1922. Completing the course at the Balloon and Airship School at Scott Field he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Reserve. He was promoted to the grade of corporal in April, 1925, to sergeant in the following September, and to staff sergeant in 1930. He was transferred to the First Balloon Company upon its organization in May, 1929.

The Cheney award was first presented in 1927, when it was given to Master Sergt. Harry Chapman, Air Corps, for conspicuous bravery in the airship Roma disaster of 1922. Last year it was awarded posthumously to Lieut. Robert K. Giovannoli in recognition of bravery in the rescue of two men from a burning airplane which had crashed during a test flight.

L. W. Mattern, McKinley High Teacher, Dies

Last Rites for Chemist at 10:30 Tomorrow Morning.

Born at Warriors Mark, Pa., in 1872, Dr. Mattern was graduated from Pennsylvania State University, class of 1894, and was then employed by Cambria Steel Co. as a chemist. Later he took a postgraduate course at Johns-Hopkins University.

He entered the school system here in 1900. His first teaching post was at Central High School. He was transferred to McKinley, when it was opened in 1902, and as one of the veteran teachers there, was liked by pupils and faculty members. He became affectionately known as "Uncle Louis," a title which he prized highly.

Dr. Mattern was interested in athletics, and always was a familiar figure at games when the high school team played. He was active at Foundry Methodist Church, and for years was a member of the board of stewards there. He was a member of St. John's Lodge, No. 11, Masonic Order.

Surviving Dr. Mattern are his wife, Mrs. Alma Mattern, and two sons, Stanley and John. Funeral services will be held in Foundry Church tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Former Va. Legislator Disbarred at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Raye O. Lawson, local attorney and former member of the House of Delegates, was disbarred from practicing law in Virginia upon conclusion of proceedings brought against him by the Roanoke Bar Association today.

Announcing the decision of the three judges who sat in the case, Judge Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, said it was his "painful duty" to state that Lawson's license was revoked. "I am performing the saddest duty I have ever been called upon to perform, and I am doing it with the utmost sympathy for the defendant," the judge added.

W. C. T. U. Starts Drive.

Arlington County W. C. T. U. units initiated a campaign to raise money for the Willard Educational Fund at a luncheon yesterday at the home of Mrs. George A. Hamilton, Arlington County W. C. T. U. president. Mrs. Hamilton said she expects members will raise about $1,000.

Bernard Culver Heads America Fore Firms

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Bernard M. Culver became chief executive officer today of Continental Insurance Co., Fidelity Phenix Fire Insurance Co. and other companies affiliated with the America Fore group.

Culver will continue to use his present title of president, which was made the chief executive position of all the companies by abolition of the office of chairman, which was held by the late Ernest Sturm.

Divorced Persons Who Remarry May Take Communion

London, Jan. 21 (AP).—Bishops of the Convocation of Canterbury decided today that divorced persons who remarry may continue to take communion—a decision that might one day have a bearing on Mrs. Wallis Simpsn if she marries Edward of Windsor.

The Convocation rejected a resolution, advanced by the Bishop of Ely, which would have denied Communion to such persons.

"I cannot condemn these people to spiritual death," declared the Bishop of London, referring to communicants of the Anglican Church who remarry after divorce.

Merit System Of Postmasters GivenApproval

House Group Favors Bill; Ramspeck to Press for Early Action.

The House Civil Service Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill to bring first, second and third postmasters under the civil service act, and Chairman Ramspeck said he will press for early action by the House.

The measures, which just missed passing the House in the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress, provides that when the Postmaster General makes postmastership appointments that he follow one of three courses:

(1) He may reappoint the incumbent, who will be required to take a noncompetitive examination; (2) he may appoint someone else in the postal service under the same condition; or (3) he may call for an open competitive examination to which outsiders would be admitted.

A bill to bring all employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf under the retirement act, was introduced in the House by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York.

A measure, introduced last year, was resubmitted by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, to prohibit the application of the "marriage clause" of the economy act from being enforced against minor employes of the Federal courts.
